THEOSOPHISTS IN CHICAGO GREET 'WORLD LEADER'

Jiddu Krishnamurti Showered With Flowers on His Arrival to Attend National Convention.

TAKES REFUGE IN BUNGALOW ON HOTEL

Wears Conventional Clothes but Prefers Flowing Robes and Sandals of India.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—A quiet young Hindu Jiddu Krishnamurti, from whom theosophy awaits the Great Teacher's message to a modern world, came to Chicago today and met with all the grace of the Orient the worshipful welcome of his followers and the amazed curiosity of mid-America.

Besieged by throngs of theosophists who deluged him with garlands of flowers, and confronted by newspaper men and women eager to put on paper evidences of his investment with divine gifts, he had little opportunity for meditation even in the hotel-top bungalow where he sought refuge.

To those who asked "Whence hath this man these things?" he spoke in parables to explain his theosophical tenets and to interpret his position as the mouthpiece of the God, whom theosophy calls the World Teacher.

Date of Birth Unknown.

Krishnamurti is about 30 years of age. That age has been computed by the horoscope, for the date of his birth is not known and he may be a year or two older. A slight man, he has the typical facial cast of the Hindu and the some coffee-colored complexion, with a thatch of thick black hair. The Occidental clothes he wears in England and America are chosen with impeccable taste, for the sake of conformity, to avoid the appearance of eccentricity, although he believes the loose robes and sandals of India more comfortable.

Krishnamurti is accompanied by Mrs. Annie Besant, whose ward he has been since infancy and who relates that Christ told her that her charge would be his "physical vehicle." She leaves him, however, to interviewers, lest it be said that he leans on her for guidance in revealing his faith.

Enjoys "Jazz" Sometimes.

He recounted his belief in theosophy; in reincarnation; in the essence of much of the Hindu Yogi philosophy and the psychological sciences which form the basis of theosophy, and asserted that the Great Teacher has frequently reappeared, incarnated in the body of man, to bring wisdom for the age which needs it. He himself had felt the Great Teacher take possession of his body.

"It is like a dream," he said. "If you have a dream you can recall it but some parts are vague. I remember, but not definitely, or concisely. But since the first manifestation of the Great Teacher through me, I feel the ecstasy of purpose which comes from having something I want to share with everybody—a joy of living; a feeling of happiness that I want to give to others."

Jazz, horse races, material amusements, he waved aside. He would not say they are bad or good.

"They are details, all incidentals. I enjoy jazz occasionally. But they are a part of the materialism of the Occident, and the Occident is too material just as the Orient is too little in contact with life. The physical must be made beautiful, not crass. Physical material desires ought to be moderated, and the physical ought to be elevated as nearly as possible to a spiritual plane."

To Lay Cornerstone.

Tonight they were honored guests at a reception which opened the fortieth American convention of the Theosophical Society. The society will go tomorrow to Wheaton, Ill., where Mrs. Besant and Krishnamurti will lay the cornerstone for an American headquarters building.

The convention sessions begin on Monday, continuing for three days, after which the party will make a tour of the country, going to Minneapolis, Omaha, the Pacific Coast and back through the South, while Mrs. Besant makes lectures. Krishnamurti has a farm at Ojai, Cal., where he may spend some days.

BLUE LAW OF 1794 IS INVOKED TO STOP SUNDAY BASEBALL

Quo Warranto Proceedings Against Philadelphia American League Club at Harrisburg.

By the Associated Press.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Aug. 28—Invoking the Pennsylvania blue laws of 1794 in an effort to prevent Sunday professional baseball in Philadelphia, the State today instituted action in the courts here against the Philadelphia American League baseball club which played its first Sunday game in Philadelphia on Aug 22.

Under the same procedure as that followed in the State suit to close commercial features of the Sesquicentennial Exposition, now pending in the local courts a writ of quo warranto was sought, calling on the ball club, as a corporation, to show by what authority it claimed the right to play ball on Sunday.

Presiding Judge Hargest of the Dauphin County Court issued the writ and fixed Sept 13 as the date for the club's reply.

$50,000 WORTH OF ALCOHOL GONE FROM U. S. WAREHOUSE

In July 100 Barrels of Whisky Vanished From Same Storage Place in Rockford, Ill.

By the Associated Press.

ROCKFORD, Ill., Aug. 28.—James Watson, Federal prohibition agent from Chicago, arrived here today to investigate the mysterious disappearance Aug. 3 of 200 barrels of alcohol—$50,000 worth—from the old Graham distillery warehouse of the Chicago Grain Products Co. here.

In July 100 barrels of pre-war whisky was removed from the same warehouse. This shipment was supposed to have been ordered by officials of the Chicago Grain Products Co. upon direction of Federal prohibition headquarters and the whisky it was supposed, was sent to a government concentration warehouse at Philadelphia. However, it never arrived there.

A peculiar incident connected with both disappearances of liquor was the temporary removal of George Ferran an experienced watchman at the warehouse just before the removals took place.

WOMAN SLAPS LAWYER IN HIGH SCHOOL FRAT ROW

Mothers of Students Ousted for Membership Shriek Defiance at Court.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Fifty boys were barred from the Oak Park High School because they were members of fraternities. The issue reached the courts today and precipitated a riot. Shrieking mothers mobbed Attorneys Fred W. Pringle and Fred W. Kraft in the County Building corridor before Judge Caverly's court room.

Mrs. Myrtle R. Meyers, prominent social and civic leader of Oak Park, was the head of the flying wedge. As she reached Attorney Pringle she gave him a resounding box on the ear.

"Hit him again! Hit him for me!" several women cried.

The lawyers represented the School Board, whose order barred the boys. They ran into the courtroom and yelled for protection of the court.

DEFIANT REPLY SENT TO MINERS BY FARRINGTON

Illinois Union Leader Accused by Lewis of Taking $25,000 a Year Job With Mine Owners.

'YOU CAN'T DICTATE TO ME,' HE CABLES

Executive Committee to Consider Tomorrow His Answer to Its "Explain or Resign" Message.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 28.—Challenged to defend himself against charges that he has accepted employment by mine owners or to resign as president of District No. 12 of the United Mine Workers of America, Frank Farrington cabled the Executive Board from Paris today: "You can't dictate to me where I'll take my employment."

The controversy began when President Lewis of the International Miners' Union laid the charges against Farrington before the Executive Board at a meeting in Indianapolis Aug. 25. The board will meet Monday at 10 a. m. at the call of Acting President Harry Fishwick, to deal with Farrington's reply to its cable demanding that he come home and defend himself, or else resign.

Farrington's cable is said neither to admit nor deny Lewis' accusation that he negotiated with the Peabody Coal Co. of Chicago for a position at a salary of $25,000 a year with a three-year contract.

Resignation the Alternative.

Thus far the board has been guided, in dealing with the charges, largely by the wishes of Lewis. The international president is said to have asked the board to obtain Farrington's resignation or to dismiss him if the charges were not disproved.

Acting President Fishwick issued a statement today saying he would present Farrington's blunt answer to the board Monday for whatever action it sees fit to take. The statement urged the primary importance of solidarity in union ranks and warns against factional disputes. It declares no special election will be held before the regular biennial presidential vote Dec. 14, at which State Senator William J. Sneed of Herrin is to be a candidate for the presidency. Removal of Farrington as president, Fishwick intimated, would necessitate no emergency election.

Evidence Presented.

Lewis laid before the Illinois district board, according to a committeeman, a purported copy of a contract which is alleged to bear Farrington's signature in which he agreed to work for three years for the Peabody company at $25,000 a year.

With it, said the committeeman, were copies of telegrams, one advising the Peabody interests that Farrington could not take the post if he were re-elected president of the district union, and another advising the company not to make his contract public.

Farrington, who left with his wife on an European tour July 1, did not intimate in his reply to the board today that he planned to return to defend himself. He has had frequent differences with Lewis over matters of policy and authority in the union.

Coal Firm Head Says Farrington Has Signed Conditionally.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, August 28.—Frank Farrington, president of District 12 of the United Mine Workers of America which comprises the Illinois coal fields, has signed a contract to work for the Peabody Coal Co., "when and if Mr. Farrington resigns as president of the district," Stuyvesant Peabody, head of the company announced tonight.

Peabody refused to comment on statements of President John L. Lewis, of the International Miners' Union that Farrington's contract was for three years and at a salary of $25,000 a year.

"Mr. Farrington is not working for me yet, and of course I do not care to discuss salaries and contract terms before he is in my employ. Mr. Farrington's duties if he accepts employment will have to do with relations between the miners and their problems and the company."

MOODY LEADS GOV. FERGUSON 2 TO 1 IN TEXAS

Attorney-General as in First Primary, Takes Commanding Lead Against Woman Executive.

RUN-OFF NOMINATION EQUAL TO ELECTION

Various Parts of State Report Voting Light, With No Disturbances as Polls Close at 7 P. M.

By the Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Aug. 28.—Attorney-General Dan Moody swept the Fergusons out of political power in today's Democratic run-off primary in Texas. Gov. Miriam A. Ferguson was overwhelmingly defeated for renomination on the face of incomplete but conclusive returns. Moody will be the next Governor, nomination on the Democratic ticket being equivalent to election.

Returns from 228 of 252 counties, 78 complete, gave Moody 452,593; Mrs. Ferguson, 231,689.

For Treasurer: Ball, 210,991; Hatcher, 322,630.

Moody was leading by big majorities in almost every county that reported. The Ferguson vote normally picks up in the late hours of the night, when the country precincts begin to come in, but in this primary election experts predicted that the country lead would be offset by late returns from the large cities, which are conceded to the Moody strongholds.

In the early returns Moody was making a better showing against his opponent than he did in the elimination primary, July 24, in which he led Mrs. Ferguson by 120,000 votes. The Attorney-General apparently was drawing heavily from the vote thrown to Lynch Davidson, anti-Ferguson candidate, in the first primary. Davidson, the runner-up in the July balloting, polled more than 100,000 votes. He cast his support to Moody in the run-off campaign.

Moody, in a statement tonight, asked Texas Democrats "to lay aside the bitterness of the campaign just closed."

"I see in the results of the primary the complete triumph of the principles of government advocated in this campaign, and I do not regard it as a personal victory," he said. "It is my sincere hope that whatever bitterness and dissension the campaign may have engendered will be forgotten and that the Democrats of Texas will unite to promote the welfare of our State and the peace, happiness and prosperity of our people."

COUNTERFEIT QUARTERS TRACED TO BLACKSMITH

W. L. Bond of Bell City, Mo., Held in $2000 Bond Accused of Making Spurious Coins.

W. L. Bond, the village blacksmith at Bell City, Mo., was in jail at Poplar Bluff yesterday charged with counterfeiting 25-cent pieces.

According to St. Louis secret service men who worked on the case, Bond explained that a failing demand for his services as blacksmith forced him to devise some other means of making money. The counterfeit coins were made of babbitt metal poured into a plaster mold.

So far as is known only five of the coins were passed three being turned in by Bond's laundress The United States Commissioner at Poplar Bluff fixed his bond at $2000. He is 59 years old.

SENATOR REED BUYS A HOME WITH A BIG FRONT PORCH

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 28.—Senator James A. Reed, loudly proclaimed just now by Democracy here and hereabouts as the best presidential timber for the party in 1928, has bought a home. It stands on a broad lawn shaded by forest trees, in sharp contrast with the limited confines of a hotel suite such as he has occupied here.

Of the many attractive features of the home, one that must have a special appeal to a potential presidential candidate is a big front porch.

SECOND AMERICAN WOMAN IN MONTH SWIMS CHANNEL

Mrs. Clemington Corson, 28, of New York, Crosses in 15 Hours 28 Minutes.

SHE IS THE MOTHER OF TWO CHILDREN

Crowds at Dover Beach Cheer Her as She Lands—Beats Best Time Made by Men.

By JOHN MITCHELL,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

Copyright, 1925, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Cos., the New York World and the Post-Dispatch.

DOVER, England, Aug. 28.—Mrs. Clemington Corson of New York, better known as Millie Gade (her maiden name), the Danish-American mother of two children, fought her way in a grim, hour-long battle over the last three quarters of a mile of her channel swim this afternoon, with a great crowd watching from the foot of Shakspeare Cliff. She succeeded in crossing the channel, and although taking 47 minutes longer than Miss Gertrude Ederle, she broke the records made by five other swimmers, all men, who since 1870 had accomplished a feat tried by thousands. Sebastian Tiraboschi, the Argentine-Italian swimmer, holds the men's record 16 hours and 23 minutes established in 1923.

Mrs. Corson entered the water at Cape Gris Nez, France, at 11:32 p. m. last night and arrived at the English shore at 3 p. m. today, covering the distance in 15 hours and 28 minutes. Miss Ederle made the crossing in 14 hours and 31 minutes, Aug. 6.

She Won on Grit.

Mrs. Corson won on grit. Attacked by a cramp just before daylight, she was saved from giving in by her determination never to cry for help. All the way, her husband, who served on the U. S. S. Illinois during the World War, rowed beside her in a dory and in the last desperate minutes, when she seemed to be coming in by inches, her husband ran the boat ashore and stood with her trainer, arms outstretched, as she stumbled up the beach.

Loud shouts of joy came from the motor boat that also accompanied the swimmer, and the yelling crowd rushed her, but her trainer, William Kellingley, knew she was exhausted. Her husband's arms were ready to catch her as she fell. She opened her eyes, and her husband kissed her. Then the two men carried her to the row boat. Pushing off, they put her aboard the launch Viking, which had accompanied her and took her to the baths at Dover. There a hot bath revived her, and she was taken in a motor car to a little boarding house where her husband put her to bed.

When she awoke, she had beefsteak for dinner, and in her one-room lodging, lighted only by candles, told the story of her achievement.

Financed by Friends.

The channel swim cost her, all told, about $5000, raised largely by her friends in New York. Almost every penny went into the necessary training and boat expenses. She has saved enough money to visit her mother in Denmark.

The Corsons have never been well off. Last winter, she said, she used to get up before the children were awake and run four times around Central Park reservoir, then go home to wash and dress the youngsters, cook breakfast, do the housework, resume training by a 20-mile walk, then go back and work at home. Many times during her talk she broke down and wept.

Shifting tides forced Mrs. Corson to swim approximately 40 miles across the channel Because of the British criticism that followed Miss Ederle's swim Mrs. Corson dispensed with an attending tug. The motor boat which accompanied her kept from 20 to 70 yards away and her husband, rowing a dory, likewise was careful not to approach too near. No swimmers entered the water with Mrs. Corson at any time to pace her or for company Her only nourishment in the whole swim was two pints of hot chocolate four lumps of sugar and few crackers.

Two Men Fail in Attempt.

Mrs Corson not only conquered the channel but defeated two men swimmers who left the French shore before she did The Egyptian, Helmy, gave up the attempt to cross after three and a half hours in the water while the Englishman, Perks, swam 14½ hours before he was forced to admit defeat.

Perks started a half an hour

2 FORMALLY CHARGED WITH DOSS MURDER

Ex-Deputies at First Held on Suspicion to Have Hearing Sept. 13.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

FARMINGTON, Mo., Aug. 28—Bart Walker, a former Deputy Sheriff, and Frank Boesel, a former Deputy Constable, held since last Monday as suspects in the shooting of Samuel Doss, former Constable and dry law informer, were charged with first-degree murder in warrants issued here late this afternoon by Prosecuting Attorney Kinder.

The warrants were served by Sheriff Watts at the Iron County Jail at Ironton, where the men are held. The prisoners were taken to Flat River, where they pleaded not guilty before Justice of the Peace Martin, who set Sept. 13 for their preliminary hearing. The prisoners were then returned to Ironton to be held without bond.

Doss was killed Aug. 16 by an unseen assassin with a shotgun who fired from the street into a kitchen window at the Doss home in Desloge, a lead belt town adjacent to Flat River Rewards totaling $1300 for the capture and conviction of the slayer have been posted.

Kinder said last night he had no new evidence against the prisoners but that a review of the information he had, prompted him to believe that a charge of murder would be upheld in the preliminary hearing. Walker and Boesel, he said, have persistently refused to discuss the case, neither denying nor admitting guilt.

Three days after the murder Kinder prepared murder warrants against the two men which he never served. At that time, he declared, a Bonne Terre bootlegger had made statements constituting a circumstantial case against them. The two men, who live in Flat River, remained at liberty until last Monday, when, on the eve of an indignation meeting, they were arrested suspected of being accessories before the fact.

Charles M. Hay, St. Louis attorney, has been retained by relatives of the slain man as special prosecutor.

TREMOR FELT IN NEW ENGLAND

By the Associated Press.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 28.—An earthquake of considerable intensity, although not so severe as that of a year ago, when virtually all New England was affected, shook part of the state of Maine late today. The shock was felt most in Oxford County, upper Androscoggin, Franklin and a few towns in Somerset County.

The tremors were preceded by a prolonged far-away rumble. So alarmed were the residents of Oxford county towns that many of them rushed from their homes. At Rangele boats rocked on the lake's surface. No damage was reported.

MAN ASSASSINATED IN YARD; TWO SOUGHT

Painter, 48, Wounded, Staggers Upstairs to Wife—Assailants Flee.

Henry Schlosser, 48 years old, a painter, of 2121 South Fourth street, was shot and killed in his back yard at 9:20 o'clock last night. The assailants escaped, and a motive for the shooting has not been determined.

An account of the killing was given to police by a 10-year-old son of the slain man. He said his father had been sleeping in a bedroom while his wife, Ann, the boy's mother, entertained a woman friend in the kitchen. Schlosser got up and went out into the back yard. As he was returning to the house, two men accosted him at the foot of the stairs, a shot was fired, and Schlosser staggered up the steps, crying, "Ann, I'm shot."

The bullet had entered his back, piercing his heart. He was dead on arrival at City Hospital. The body was removed to the morgue.

The two men disappeared. Schlosser's son said he saw the two men outside the kitchen door a minute before the shooting. He said one man was known as "Mikey." They are being sought.

HUMAN COMMUNICATION BY MENTAL TELEPATHY FORECAST

T. H. Watson, Associate of Bell, Recalls Lack of Belief in Telephone When Introduced.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—A future, wherein man will speak to man by mental telepathy, was predicted by Thomas A. Watson of Boston, associate of Dr. Alexander Graham Bell in the manufacture of the first telephone instrument.

Watson, 72 years old, made his prediction at the annual convention of telephone pioneers of America. Lying on a table before him as he spoke was a reproduction of the first telephone. Gazing at it he said:

"When that little acorn sprouted half a century ago no one believed that it would grow into the great tree of the telephone system that now spreads its branches—17,000,000 instruments—all over the country. Nor can anyone predict its future. There is no limit to what science may achieve. Much can be achieved by concentration, and the mind of man, co-ordinated with mechanical inventions, may yet lead to a spiritual communication such as mental telepathy."

The radio and the vitaphone was characterized by Watson as outgrowths of the telephone. Increasing inventions have made concentration more difficult, he said. "I would advise everyone to learn to concentrate, because all that is good results from concentration."

NICARAGUA SENDS WARLIKE NOTE TO MEXICO CITY AND NOTIFIES LEAGUE

Charges Northern Neighbor With Financing Rebellion—U. S. Lands Force at Bluefields.

AMERICAN ENVOY DELIVERS MESSAGE

Two Hundred Sailors and Marines to Guard Property in Town Threatened by the Rebels.

By the Associated Press.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, Aug. 28.—The Nicaraguan Government has sent a note to Mexico declaring it has irrefutable evidence that Mexican authorities equipped, armed and manned with men in Mexico's military service, an auxiliary ship of the Mexican navy, the Concon, which sailed from Salina Cruz on Aug. 17 on a filibustering expedition to Nicaragua.

The note, which is signed by Foreign Minister Navas, says the expedition was arranged by Nicaraguan exiles and financed and supported by the Mexican Government. It declares such action manifestly violates the principles which govern civilized nations.

"Nicaragua," says the note, "though a weak nation, will know how to defend, even with sacrifice, this menace to its independence and sovereignty, and it leaves to your Government the grave responsibility that shall fall to it before the world and history for such illegal conduct."

A copy of the note was sent to the League of Nations and all foreign diplomatic and consular officials in Nicaragua. The Government in sending the protest to the League of Nations said it desired to call the attention of the world to the alleged illegal acts of Mexico. It is reserving the right to make claims in the future against Mexico.

The police today checked a demonstration against the Mexican Consulate.

U. S. Lands 200 Marines at Bluefields.

Post-Dispatch Bureau
20-23 Wyatt Building

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Coincident with the publication of reports from Geneva that Nicaragua had filed a protest with the League of Nations, denouncing Mexico as having violated her rights in extending aid to revolutionists, the State Department today announced that the United States Cruiser Galveston had landed 200 sailors and Marines at Bluefields.

According to the State Department, the armed forces were landed only after the Governor of the Bluefields district had informed the American commander that an attack by revolutionists was expected within 48 hours and he was not able to guarantee the protection of foreign lives and property.

Information received from Managua was to the effect that the rebellious forces had announced that they would bombard the town of El Bluff unless it be evacuated by Government troops before tomorrow. El Bluff is five miles from Bluefields on a peninsula. It has a population of 500 and the Government has a garrison there of 400 men. There is a fine customs house, wharf and other buildings.

The only American at El Bluff is said to be W. J. Crampton of New York, acting as collector of customs.

It was recalled that in May of this year a similar force was landed at Bluefields after rebel contingent had captured the city and that the naval commander immediately declared a neutral zone and forbade any hostilities within it. That revolt was short-lived. The present uprising apparently is more widespread, the rebel leaders having determined to scatter rather than concentrate their forces.

Acting Secretary of State Grew declined to comment upon the action of Nicaragua in laying the protest against Mexico before the League of Nations.

STATE CLOSES CASE AGAINST ROY T. MYERS

Presents Evidence in Only Two Alleged Unlawful Transactions by Cashier of Defunct Gorin Bank.

DEFENSE TO PRESENT TESTIMONY MONDAY

Myers Expected to Make Plea on Which Otto Previously Had Promised Him Immunity.

By the Associated Press.

KIRKSVILLE, Mo, Aug. 28.—Through limitation of its evidence to two transactions, attorneys for the State in the prosecution of Roy T. Myers, cashier of the wrecked Citizens' Trust Co. of Gorin, Mo., the closing of which resulted a year ago in the removal from office of Frank C. Millspaugh, State Finance Commissioner, completed their case at noon today. The defense will begin introduction of its testimony Monday morning.

Abandoning early plans to delve deeply into the affairs of the trust company, which was alleged to have been started on fraudulent capitalization and which was alleged never to have been solvent during its few months of operation. M. D. Campbell, chief counsel for the State, confined his evidence to testimony that the bank had obligations it could not meet, that Myers had issued certificates of deposit for which the bank was liable but which were not part of the records of the institution, and that knowing the bank to be insolvent, Myers accepted a deposit.

Says Records Were Incomplete.

Documentary evidence presented by A. C. Martin, Deputy Finance Commissioner, was to the effect that in the bank were memoranda of cash items aggregating $13,060.24, without any record showing who was obligated for them. Martin testified that although the records showed the bank was carrying overdrafts aggregating $22,441.42 at the time it closed, Myers had reported to the State Finance Department overdrafts of only $3499.76, and that although the bank records showed there was on deposit to its credit in other banks only $164.21, Myers had reported such deposits to be $10,767.12.

An overdraft of $12,519.88 in a Quincy, Ill., bank was not shown in the Gorin bank's report to the State Finance Department, Martin testified.

The chief point of the evidence, however, was the testimony that at the time the bank closed certificates of deposit aggregating $262,314.18 were outstanding, but of this amount there was no records in the bank of certificates of deposit amounting to $17[illegible],100. These certificates consisted largely of $150,000 issued to Charles E. Havener, in exchange for Havener's notes for an equal amount backed by $300,000 par value of stock in the Colorado-Utah Mines Co., which was said to have little value.

Havener Deal Fell Through.

The State did not go into the details of this transaction, but Myers is expected to make the same explanation in defense as he did in the statement given by him to Supreme Judge Otto when the latter was Attorney-General. This was the statement given in consideration of a promise of immunity from Otto to Myers, which was not carried out.

Myer's explanation then was that the bank was hard pressed for cash and that J. B. McCutchan of St. Louis, vice president, put him in touch with Havener, a promoter. Havener, he said, needed collateral for a business deal in Alabama and an agreement was reached that Havener would put $40,000 in cash into the bank, give his notes for $150,000 with the mine stock as collateral and Myers would issue the certificates of deposit for $150,000, which Havener could use as collateral. Myers said the certificates of deposit later were to be returned to the bank and canceled.

When Havener sought to use the certificates of deposit he found that Myers had issued them in a non-negotiable form, and he could not use them. The deal then fell through and the bank did not get its $40,000 in cash.

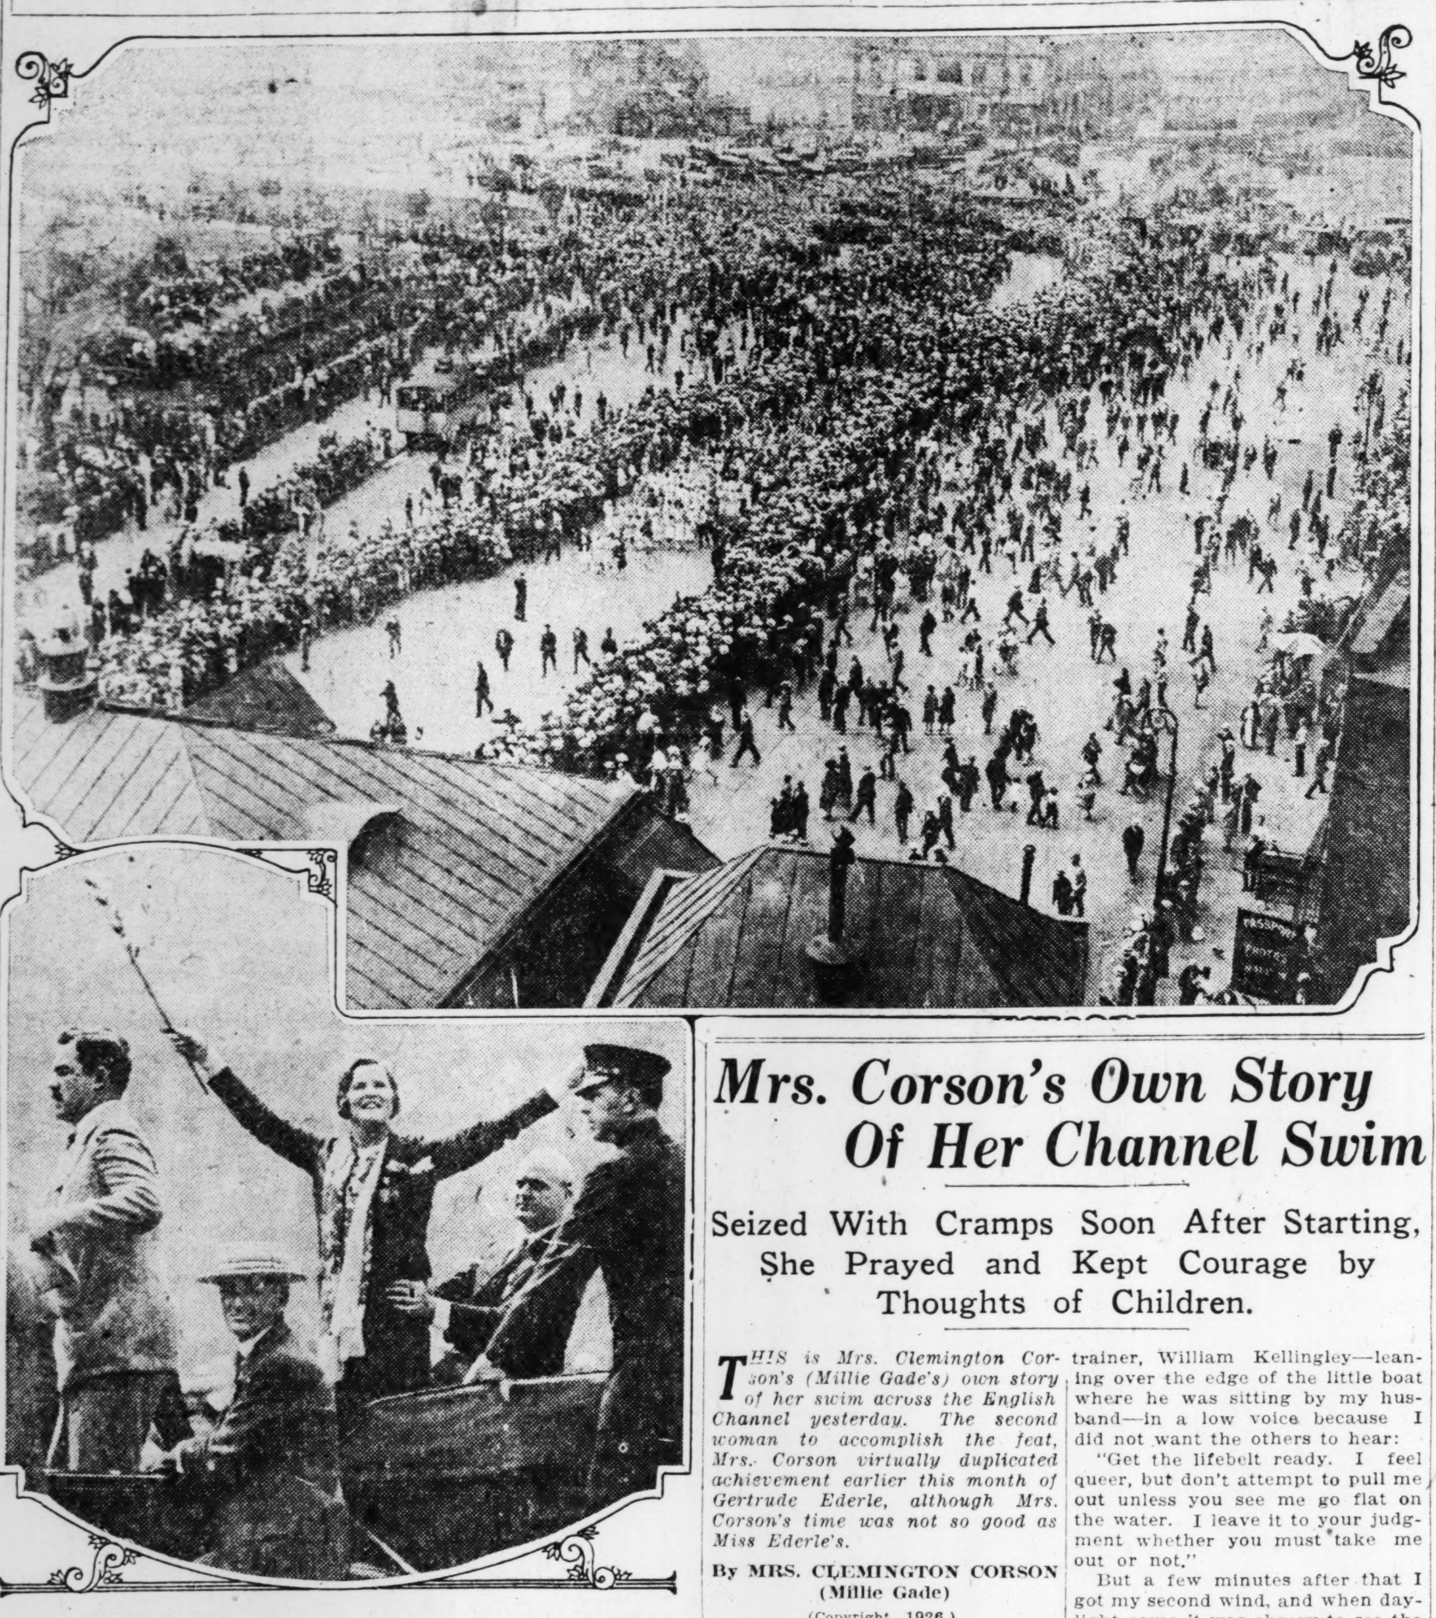
New York Greets Gertrude Ederle on Her Return



The upper picture shows the huge throng that greeted the English Channel swimmer as she set foot on shore at the Battery.

SECOND AMERICAN WOMAN IN MONTH SWIMS CHANNEL

before Mrs. Corson, but was two and a half miles behind her when he quit from exhaustion.

Mrs. Corson in her swim used a trudgeon crawl, stroking from 16 to 18 a minute with machine-like regularity, as steady a pace, observers say, as ever had been seen in a channel swim.

At 5 o'clock this morning, when about 12 miles from the French shore, Mrs. Corson's friends considered she had a chance to beat Miss Ederle's record, but as the ebb tide was adverse, she was carried far off her course to the west.

All through the night and morning and the afternoon the swimmer was encouraged by her friends on the motor boat, 16 in number. Louis Timson of Boston, a channel aspirant, acted as cheer leader and song director and in a booming bass voice led his chorus in impromptu ballads such as "Oh! Millie, Millie, Oh, Millie, How You Can Swim."

Swimming does not occupy first place in the life of Mrs. Corson. Anxious to get back to her two children as early as possible, she will sail for New York Sept. 26. The children, Clemington Jr. 4 years old, and Margaret, 2, are with an aunt in Virginia, while their mother is in Europe.

Challenges Miss Ederle to Match in New York.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Walter Lissberger, automobile tire dealer who financed the English Channel swim of Mrs. Clemington Corson, today issued on behalf of Mrs. Corson a challenge "to everybody, Gertrude Ederle not excepted," to swim around Manhattan Island for a $25,000 purse.

Dudley Field Malone, attorney for Miss Ederle, when told of the challenge, said Miss Ederle would consider "such a challenge when it is received."

Lissberger wants the proposed swim to be made not later than October before the water becomes too cold. The distance is 42 miles. He said that since he had won $100,000 on a 20-to-1 wager that Mrs. Corson would swim the Channel, he was willing to risk that amount on her.

Mrs. Corson weighed 170 pounds when she finished training for the Channel swim, Lissberger said. She is 5 feet 5 inches tall. When she sailed for Europe in June she weighed 158½ pounds. She left with the intention of building her weight as much as possible without damaging her physical condition.

Proud of being the first woman to master the channel, and prouder still of the time she made, Miss Ederle nevertheless expressed elation today that another American woman had gone across.

She cabled "heartiest congratulations" to Mrs. Corson when she heard of her accomplishment.

Miss Ederle's day was given over to recovering from yesterday's mammoth home-coming reception in which the whole city joined.

TOURIST FAMILY FIRED ON BY OFFICERS, THEY REPORT

Kansan Explains Wife and Child Were Wounded by Illinois Officers.

Taken into custody in East St. Louis yesterday because the rear of his automobile was shot full of holes, Jerry Uhl, a dairyman of Topeka, Kan., explained to police that the shooting was done by Sheriff William Green and his brother, C. H. Green, of Fayette County, who mistok himself and wife for auto thieves at 4:30 a. m. yesterday near Vandalia. Uhl's wife, who was seated in the back seat, was injured about the head from flying glass and physicians removed a small-sized shot from a shotgun shell from her head. Their 3-year-old son also was bruised from glass, the bullets smashing the window at the rear of the car.

Uhl said that the Sheriff and his brother stood at the side of the road and commanded them to halt, but believing they were highwaymen, he sped away. When the bullets struck the car, he stopped, Uhl said, and the Sheriff told them he thought they were auto thieves for whom they lay in waiting. He was released by the East St. Louis police.

DRUSES IN NEW OUTBREAKS AS NEW COMMISSIONER IS NAMED

By the Associated Press.

DAMASCUS Syria, Aug. 28.—Dissident tribesmen in Syria are preparing to give Auguste Henri Ponsot, new French High Commissioner in Syria, a warm reception. Coincident with announcement of his appointment to succeed Henry de Jouvenel, fighting broke out in three different and widely scattered parts of the mandated territory.

Disaffected tribesmen were repelled after a stubborn fight on the Douma road near Arbin Harasta. Seven Syrians were killed and many wounded. There also was a combat at Denirie, where three were killed, among them being Jaber Chalguin, an important leader.

Widow of Maine's Commander Dead

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Mrs. Eliza Rogers Sigsbee, widow of Rear Admiral Sigsbee, commander of the Maine, and daughter of Gen. H. H. Lockwood, died here today.

Mrs. Corson's Own Story Of Her Channel Swim

Seized With Cramps Soon After Starting, She Prayed and Kept Courage by Thoughts of Children.

THIS is Mrs. Clemington Corson's (Millie Gade's) own story of her swim across the English Channel yesterday. The second woman to accomplish the feat, Mrs. Corson virtually duplicated achievement earlier this month of Gertrude Ederle, although Mrs. Corson's time was not so good as Miss Ederle's.

By MRS. CLEMINGTON CORSON
(Millie Gade)
(Copyright, 1926.)

I HOPE nobody will think me discourteous because I could not reply to the congratulations of my friends and the crowd when I got to land, but I was all in and my husband, who must have been nearly as tired as I was—he rowed the small boat the whole way from France to England—and never laid down the oars for a moment—did the only thing possible in taking me away from the crowd in the small boat and back to the launch again.

I lay on the deck, and everybody said:

"Keep her quiet." I was still all there. The spirit was willing but the flesh weak. It was wonderful of them to take me right along the beach from there to the harbor, where I got a hot bath. I felt like a new woman, but oh, so sleepy. They took me right back here in the car and put me to bed.

First Mother to Swim Channel.

Although I am not the first woman to swim the channel, I am the first mother to do it. I have two little kiddies at home, a boy and a girl, and they have been away from me since the beginning of April.

I have been training hard since the beginning of October for this swim, walking and swimming in America.

I thought about my two little ones all the time I was swimming and about my hubby rowing along there. Talking about records, I wonder if it is a common thing to row a boat across the channel for 16 hours at a stretch. I determined that I could stick it out, if he could, and he would not let anybody else take the oars for a minute, although there were two others in the little boat with him.

When I got near shore I could see the crowds and I should have hated to be a quitter with all those people waving to me and cheering me on. Of course, it was the last hour that was so hard, with only three quarters of a mile to go. I could see the people waving all the time, but it took an hour. My limbs were like lead, but I knew I could do it and I never lost confidence at the end.

Became Ill After Starting.

There was only one time in the small hours that was bad. I suddenly felt ill, and I said to my trainer, William Kellingley—leaning over the edge of the little boat where he was sitting by my husband—in a low voice because I did not want the others to hear:

"Get the lifebelt ready. I feel queer, but don't attempt to pull me out unless you see me go flat on the water. I leave it to your judgment whether you must take me out or not."

But a few minutes after that I got my second wind, and when daylight came it was cheery to see the sun shine on the cliffs of Dover and I felt all right again.

Apart from my husband and children, I thought of my old mother in Denmark. I am going to stay here in Dover three days, then go to London, and from there to Denmark to see her. She was so set against my trying three years ago, but this time she had set her mind on my doing it. She wrote me only the other day: "You must do it."

I told you something about that life belt. What I told Kellingley about having it ready was because I had made up my mind not to ask for it, no matter what happened. I did not really mean to float on the water; I meant to go on until my head went under. Then I couldn't ask for it and that was why I wanted it ready. If I threw a fit, well, I could grab it.

Prayed and Cramp Disappeared.

I asked if it was ready when I felt a cramp. It began in my right leg and spread until it affected my spine, and then the pain began around the heart. I thought I was nearly finished. It got better, but was still there when the sun came up and I saw the cliffs of Dover.

After all, the worst was just before I started. We didn't spend any more than we could help on this you know, and I had no camp on the French side. I got permission to get greased in a garage and stayed there four hours. Then I had to go out when the car came in, and stand on the beach for hours, waiting until the tide was right to start. Oh, how cold and wretched that was.

SIX CAPTURED AFTER BREAK IN MICHIGAN PRISON

Deputy Warden With Rifle Prevents Wholesale Exodus of Prisoners at Ionia Reformatory.

By the Associated Press.

IONIA, Mich., Aug. 28.—While all available prison and local officers sought 19 prisoners still at large after one of the most daring jail breaks in Michigan's history, made before daylight today from Ionia Reformatory, six others who also fled tonight again were in cells, having been recaptured.

Four were taken into custody during the day and tonight two more were arrested by Sheriff Henry J. Cook and two deputies in Nickle Plate, a village six miles northeast of Ionia. The last two taken were unarmed and surrendered easily.

The capture of Dursee brought the number known to have escaped to 25. His name was not in the list issued this morning by prison officials.

For a time five men, ringleaders in the escape, were in virtual possession of the prison. Among the leaders were Benton Ford and Franklin Todd of Toledo, sentenced for holding up the Hadley State Bank in Lapeer County some months ago.

Deputy Warden Halts Exodus.

That many of the other 1400 inmates of the prison did not join the 24 who got out was due largely to the courage of Ed Haight, Deputy Warden. Summoned from his home by an outer guard, Haight arrived as a large group of inmates were coming through the main entrance. Firing his rifle over their heads, Haight forced them back into prison. Several were slightly injured by flying glass and by the milling of the crowd.

Contrary to earlier reports, only the leaders of the escaped convicts appear to have been armed. Where they obtained their weapons has not been determined.

Officials are convinced the break was planned for weeks. Evidently by pre-arrangement, a disturbance was created in one of the two prison dormitories. Guards attracted by the commotion were overpowered and stripped of the uniforms. Two of the five leaders donned uniforms and proceeded to the prison yard where two more guards were overpowered.

Working methodically, they rounded up other guards about the prison until 20 had been overpowered and locked in a cell. With keys taken from the guards the cells of other prisoners were unlocked. The leaders then went to the office of Roy Sypher, captain of the night guard, where they demanded keys to the outer gate.

Three of the men, Sypher said later, were in favor of killing him, but one of them, Russell Andrus, sentenced from Detroit, dissuaded them.

Guard Beaten With Own Rifle.

Instead of using Sypher's keys, the convicts forced him to order a guard to open the outer door of the administration building. Through this door the prisoners swarmed to the outer gate where O. Johnson, a guard, was beaten with his own rifle. He was the first armed guard the convicts met. Inside guards are not armed. Before he had recovered and sounded an alarm, 25 of the convicts had fled, some afoot, others in automobiles they seized. Five machines were taken. Two of them, out of gasoline, were found later.

Besides Ford, Todd and Andrus the leaders were Victory Chicky sentenced from Grand Rapids for burglary and Bert Rice, sentenced from Oakland County for automobile theft.

The men recaptured today were Napoleon Smith and Charles Smith, sentenced from Detroit on a robbery and burglary charges; Samuel Glick, sentenced from Detroit on a robbery charge; Richard Anderson, sentenced on a burglary charge; William Dursee and William Vaughn, both sentenced from Detroit for automobile thefts.

Warden Charles H. Shean was in Detroit at the time of the break.

RODGERS' FUNERAL SET FOR TOMORROW

Hero of Hawaiian Flight Wi Be Buried Tuesday at Arlington.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—The body of Commander John Rodgers, killed in an airplane accident here yesterday, was taken by automobile to his home in Havre de Grace, Md., late today. It was accompanied by the commander's parents and brother and three officers who were with him on his famous Hawaiian flight.

It will remain in the home, Zion Hill, which has sheltered the Rodgers family for 100 years, until Monday morning, when brief private funeral services will be held. The body will be taken to Arlington National Cemetery for burial Tuesday with military honors.

Among the many messages of condolence received by Commander Rodgers' parents was one from Secretary of the Navy Wilbur, who is now on the Pacific Coast. It said: "I extend to you my most sincere sympathy for the loss of your son, John Rodgers, whose fine qualities have endeared him to his associates in the navy. We mourn with you and trust that you may be comforted in your bereavement by the consciousness that he served his country faithfully and well and died in the service which he loved with a fervor transmitted to him by a long line of worthy ancestors."

Admiral Eberle, the chief of naval operations, sent this message: "The Navy Department wishes to express the navy's profound sorrow and sympathy over the sad loss of your son, Commander John Rodgers, who has rendered such valuable service and who died in the performance of duty."

Rodgers, who was commander of the Hawaiian flight, was killed when his plane fell in the Delaware River at Philadelphia.

50,000 EXPECTED TO SEE CARDINALS AND PIRATES TODAY

Greatest Baseball Crowd in History of St. Louis Here for Opening of "Little World's Series."

TICKET-SCALPING ARRESTS ARE MADE

Excursions Pour Thousands Into City in Search of Seats — Speculators Ask $15 for $1.75 Seats.

The largest crowd in baseball history in St. Louis is expected in Sportsman's Park today for the double-header opening of the "little world's series" between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Pittsburg Pirates.

A man slept last night on a steamer chair with his feet inside the grand stand gate of Sportsman's Park and the steamer chair on which he lay, fully dressed and straw hat over his face, reaching to the middle of the sidewalk.

"What? Oh, uh, yes, guess I'll be the first one in," he mumbled, when a reporter awakened him at midnight. He arose, stretched himself and began filling a pipe from a quarter-pound tin which had stood on the sidewalk beside his chair, and began talking about the Cardinals' chances for taking first place by beating the leading Pirates in the double-header opening the "little world's series" today.

Ticket scalpers are active in spite of police, who have orders to arrest them under a city ordinance, and the United States Internal Revenue authorities, whose duty it is to enforce a Federal statute taxing sales by speculators. Police made three arrests downtown yesterday afternoon.

Enlarged Sportsman's Park seats 33,863 persons. The crowd will be permitted to overflow onto the playing field, making necessary ground rules limiting uncaught balls within the field to two-baggers. Spectators will be permitted also to sit in the aisles just before game time and it is not improbable, with thousands of fans flocking from out-of-town—north, east, south and west—that the attendance will reach 45,000 to 50,000, as the management anticipates.

Gates will be opened at 9 a. m.—as many of them as necessary to admit the crowd that has assembled at that hour. The Spring avenue emergency gates will be manned by ticket takers, who will admit holders of any sort of tickets. There will be 17 gates for admission to the boxes, reserved sections and grandstand.

First Game at 1:30 P. M.

The first game will be called at 1:30 p. m. The Pittsburg team remains in St. Louis for three more games, one each on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. The series is regarded as having almost decisive bearing upon the winner of the 1925 pennant race in the National League.

Excursion trains from numerous points in Missouri last night began to pour in fans for the double-header. Nearly all roads entering St. Louis have made exceptionally low excursion rates. Some roads purchased game tickets and sold them with railroad tickets, but the total of this sale did not exceed 1000 and the majority of visiting fans arrived with nothing but an outside chance of squeezing through the gates. Approximately 18,000 seats were not sold in advance and will go to the earliest at the gates.

Ticket scalpers, selling $1.75 box seats as high as $15, and $1.35 reserved seats for $5 to $7.50, went under cover yesterday when the United States Collector of Internal Revenue began to investigate the matter. The amusement section of the internal revenue act provides a penalty of $100 for the sale of tickets that do not bear the name of the seller, and the price charged. The law also requires a tax return from the seller, and failure to make such return is punishable by 25 per cent increase in the tax. A fraudulent return, or fraudulent failure to make a return, is punishable by fine as high as $10,000 or imprisonment up to five years.

Question Sam Bronstein.

Collector Becker yesterday summoned Sam Bronstein, a money lender, to his office, and Bronstein admitted that he has sold 40 $1.35 reserved seats at $5 and $6 each, and that he did not put his name or sale price on the tickets. The Collector said he would submit the facts to the District Attorney tomorrow, and advised Bronstein to prepare a tax return on his sales. Chief of Police Gerk issued an order to the police to arrest the scalpers under city ordinance 30,499, which requires such venders to have a license costing $100, and forbids them to charge more than 50 cents in excess of the regular price of the ticket. The penalty is a fine of $10 to $100 for each sale.

Detectives Bear and Schwartz were sent out from headquarters to seek the scalpers. They were told at Hotel Statler that Ernest Schoneman, a waiter at the hotel, was selling tickets at a cigar store

At Grand boulevard and Hebert street, near the ball park, George Bournstein of 3020 Sheridan avenue was arrested after selling a $1.35 ticket for $5 to a detective. Three other tickets were taken from him.

SUPPORTERS OF STATE DRY LAW TO ORGANIZE

Gov. Baker Will Make Opening Speech at Jefferson City Meeting.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 28.—Gov. Baker will open the meeting here Thursday of opponents of Proposition No. 4, the initiative proposal to be submitted at the November general election, to repeal the prohibition enforcement laws in Missouri. Plans for the meeting and announcement that the Governor would make the opening address were made public today at the Governor's office.

The meeting is to be held in the House of Representatives chamber. After Gov. Baker's address the plans call for a statement from Charles M. Hay of St. Louis, on the purpose of the meeting and suggesting some plans for a Statewide organization.

Permanent officers are expected to be elected after the opening addresses. An organization committee and a resolutions committee will be included in the permanent organization, it was said. The State-wide organization probably will be headed by a committee of 64 members; four from each congressional district, equally divided between the two major political parties and also equally divided between men and women.

The convention proper will recess about 3 p. m. Thursday afternoon, under present plans, to enable separate sessions to be held by representatives from each of the congressional districts. The Organization and the Resolutions committees will make their final reports Thursday night.

Others expected to address the convention include Joshua W. Alexander of Gallatin, Mo., former United States Secretary of Commerce; Arthur H. Hyde of Trenton, former Governor; Stratton D. Brooks of Columbia, president of the University of Missouri; E. W. Stephens of Columbia; Mrs. Nelle Burger of Springfield, president of the Missouri W. C. T. U.; former Mayor Beardsley of Kansas City; Thomas Walton of Kansas City, former Jackson County Prosecuting Attorney; Perl Decker of Joplin, former Congressman, and David W. Hill of St. Louis.

A committee of Jefferson City residents, headed by Hugh Stephens and W. T. Carrington, has issued an appeal to "all persons, regardless of their views on prohibition," to join in opposing Proposition No. 4. The ground of the appeal is that the proposed repeal would leave the State with no liquor laws whatever. This, they state, would leave only 75 Federal officers to cope with "bootleggers, use of intoxicating liquor by automobile drivers, by bank bandits and others."

WIFE, 20, SUES TO DIVORCE HUSBAND, 64

Romance of Widow and Retired Contractor Disrupted After Little More Than Year.

After an ardent three weeks' courtship, conducted while she worked as his housekeeper in the new stucco bungalow, they were married—she a comely widow of 20, he a widower of 64.

They were married in July, 1925. Now, after a little more than a year of married life, filled with disillusionments for both, they are asking the courts to straighten their marital tangle.

Suit for divorce, asking for allowance of a reasonable sum as alimony, was filed in Circuit Court last week by Mrs. Lenigh Meister against William Meister, retired building contractor of 9847 Lincoln avenue, Luxemburg.

Both Mrs. Meister's petition and Meister's version of the affair, given to a Post-Dispatch reporter, bristle with charges, but agree on nothing, not even on who did the proposing in the first place.

The petition declares that the courtship was ardent and that Meister begged her to marry him. Meister says the courtship was ardent but that his erstwhile housekeeper conducted it and "kept after me to marry her until I did." She says he treated her harshly by compelling her to drive a Ford constantly, threatened her with bodily violence and finally ordered her out of the house in spite of the fact that she was an expectant mother.

He says he couldn't keep her out of the Ford long enough to prepare a good meal and that when she left home she did it not upon his order but departed so suddenly that he was unable to learn why she went or where.

"Overly Cautious" With Money.

Mrs. Meister asserts that in spite of the fact that he owned property valued at $75,000, her husband was "overly cautious" with his money and as the limit of his extravagance allowed her to carry $50 or $60 in her purse when they went shopping together, but always demanded the return of whatever remained when they got home.

"She advertised for a job as a housekeeper," Meister related, "and I hired her. She couldn't keep house. She bought 27 new dresses in the year she lived here."

Meister also complained that his wife cooked breakfast for him only three times during their married life, and always insisted upon fixing "light suppers" of canned goods. "I can't eat that sort of stuff," he added. "And another thing. She kept me scared to death by smoking cigarettes in bed. I always was looking for her to burn the house down."

Sons Hold His Property.

The $75,000 worth of property which Mrs. Meister says her husband owns is no longer his. It has all been deeded to the seven children of his first marriage, and the deeds are dated March, 1924. That was a short time after the death of his first wife.

"I haven't anything left myself," he explains, "but my children agreed to give me the income from my property as long as I live. If it's money she wants, I don't know where it's coming from."

POSSE CAPTURES OKLAHOMA BANK ROBBERS IN HILLS

DEPUTY SHERIFF DIES FROM HIS WOUNDS

Prisoners Confess Two Bank Holdups, Express Regret for Death of Officer.

Special to the Post-Dispatch

VAN BUREN, Ark., Aug. 28.—George and Matthew Kimes, 22 and 25 years old, brothers and ex-convicts, charged with robbing four Oklahoma banks, were captured about 10 miles northwest of here at 3 o'clock this morning, following a running fight with officers and possemen. They have confessed to robbing two banks at Covington, Ok., and are accused of similar holdups at Gans and Beggs, Ok.

The actual capture was made by Sheriff A. D. Maxey of this county, Lee Pollock of the State Constabulary and A. B. Cooper, a Burns detective representing the American Bankers' Association. Both of the robbers were wounded by the officers before their arrest.

The capture followed a 14-hour chase through the mountains in automobiles by possemen and Deputy Sheriffs from three counties in Oklahoma, and two in Arkansas. At one time the robbers and pursuers were within five miles of Van Buren.

Had $9 When Arrested.

The Kime boys are alleged to have stolen $22,000 from the banks, but when caught they had only $9 in their pockets, having cached the remainder of the loot in the mountains near Chester, Ark.

The chase continued yesterday until about 6 o'clock, when the robbers eluded officers, abandoning an automobile they had stolen from Chief of Police J. C. Woll of Sallisaw, Ok., after they had kidnaped the officers. Woll was thrown out of the car near Uniontown 15 miles north of Van Buren. He later was brought to Van Buren, where he was treated for a bullet wound in his shoulder. Woll said the robbers gave him a $20 bill, his revolver back and a box of ginger snaps and told him to leave "pronto."

Tried to Reach Cousin's Home.

The possemen, headed by Sheriff John E. Johnson of Sallisaw, and F. D. Maxey, Sheriff here, returned to Van Buren at 1 o'clock. When they arrived here automobiles containing officers from Sapulpa, Oklahoma City and other Oklahoma towns, arrived to assist in the chase. Officials held a conference at the county jail at which it was decided to go back into the mountains and wait until daybreak in an effort to surround the fugitives. They also decided upon guarding the home of Ben Pixley, a cousin of the brothers, near Rudy, five miles from Van Buren.

Maxey and the Oklahoma detectives lay in wait at the Pixley home and at about 2:45 o'clock this morning the boys were seen creeping toward the house. Maxey fired a load of buckshot at the pair striking both of them. They returned the officer's fire. Detective Pollock then fired his revolver and hit Matthew Kimes in the shoulder. When the robbers saw they were outnumbered they threw up their hands and surrendered. They were returned to the county jail here and later will be taken to Sallisaw, Ok., where they killed Deputy Sheriff Perry Chuculate, an Indian, yesterday morning when Chuculate and Bert Cotton tried to stop them.

Sorry They Shot Deputy.

"Sorry we had to shoot Chuculate," is the only statement that the youths have made since their capture.

Neely Kimes, an uncle of the boys, who at first was reported to be their father, was taken back to Sapulpa, Ok., early this morning where he is wanted in connection with a robbery and is said to be an accomplice in the robbery of the bank at Beggs, Ok.

The territory where the robbers were captured is rough and mountainous with steep bluffs, thick woods and deep valleys. It is the boyhood home of the Kimes boys, and all day yesterday they made a strong fight to return to the country where they knew every trail. The officers were determined to keep them out of the mountains, for they believed that if they ever got into that region it would be almost impossible to get them out.

A weakness for having their pictures taken caused the identification of the boys. According to N. E. Bixby, local photographer, the youths were in Van Buren for more than a week and while here had their pictures taken on Aug. 12, with girl friends. Bixby asked for an address and they told him they were leaving town and asked for one of his envelopes that they might write for the pictures. They paid for the photographs before leaving Van Buren.

FILM MEN, TWO COUNTRYMEN PALLBEARERS FOR VALENTINO

Pola Negri on Way to Attend Funeral; Rome Paper Calls Scenes at Bier Madness.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Motion picture stars, producers and managers and two countrymen will carry the body of Rudolph Valentino into St. Malachi's Church for funeral services Monday morning. Douglas Fairbanks, Mal St. Clair, Richard Rowland, Adolph Zukor, Marcus Loew, Hiram Abrams, Sidney Kent, James R. Quirk, Joseph M. Schenck and Nicholas Schenck of the movies, and Michael Romano and Frank Manillo, friends and countrymen, are the pallbearers.

Pola Negri, actress, who had announced her betrothal to Valentino before his death, is en route to New York to attend the funeral.

Seven sacks of mail were reported received by the treasurer of the Rudolph Valentino Memorial Committee today. The sacks will not be opened until offices are established next week. The letters, believed to contain contributions to a fund for a memorial for the dead motion picture star, came from all parts of the country.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 28.—The described scenes at Rudolph Valentino's bier in New York, says Osservatore Romano, "would make us laugh if they did not cause the most profound pity. It is a collective madness, incarnating the tragic comedy of a new fetichism, the last logical consequence of a materialist civilization which has given man dominion over everything but himself."

"TELETYPE" MACHINES IN ALL POLICE STATIONS PLANNED

Apparatus, Simultaneously Heralding Messages, Designed for Crime Detection.

To facilitate the detection of criminals and the transmission of important police messages to the various districts, the Board of Police Commissioners has contracted with the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. to install "teletype" apparatus at Headquarters and in all station houses.

Under the present system, considered obsolete, urgent messages, such as the descriptions of men who have just committed a major holdup, are handled by a telephone dispatcher at Headquarters, who plugs in all stations and then telephones the information. Under the new "teletype" system, an employe at Headquarters will write the information on a typewriter and simultaneously typewriters in all station houses will automatically reproduce the message. Greater accuracy and speed is claimed for the "teletype," a combination of telephone and typewriter. Cost of maintaining the new system will approximate $709 a month.

The Board also announced it will provide a radio room and space for radio towers in the new Headquarters Building to be erected at the southwest corner of Twelfth street and Clark avenue, work to start late this year. Radio equipment may not be installed immediately, but will be in a few years, the Board believes, and will aid materially in capturing criminals.

CONFEDERATE, WHO TREATED FATHER OF GRANT, BURIED

Dr. Thomas Bracking, 95 years old, Confederate Army veteran, who died Thursday at his home, 3029 Glasgow place, was buried yesterday afternoon in Oak Grove Cemetery, following services at an undertaking establishment at 1631 Missouri avenue.

Dr. Bracking, a specialist in cancer, had practiced in St. Louis, Kansas City, Cincinnati and Nashville. He had lived in St. Louis for about 20 years. One of his patients in his early years, he related, was the father of Ulysses S. Grant.

Death was caused by heart disease and infirmities of age. He was 95 years old last July 18. He is survived by four sons, William R. Bracking of 2525 Belt avenue; Frank Bracking, Dallas; Walter Bracking, Reno, Nev., and Thomas Bracking, somewhere in Oregon.

ARKANSAS BOY HERE ALONE TO SEE CARDS

Lad, 13, Came Aug. 15 With $50 and Has Become Friend of Players.

Among the arriving guests at the Hamilton Hotel on Sunday, Aug. 15, was a very young man who signed the register, "Leland Morgans, Stuttgart, Arkansas," in writing which a penmanship teacher would grade down to 80 and comment "Not neat."

"How old are you, sonny?" asked the clerk. "Twelve?"

"I'm thirteen," said the guest, severely, "and I want a room by myself."

"Here on business?"

"Sure. I came up to see the Cards win the pennant."

The clerk looked dubious, but anyway young Mr. Morgans informed him that the Hamilton Hotel's new guest had $50 in pocket, was therefore a responsible citizen, and entitled to a room by himself. Moreover, these funds had been saved diligently by him from earnings made that summer by working on a farm near Stuttgart. Were further references required? They were not. Leland was assigned to a room.

With a promptness which astounded amused residents, Leland paid his respects to members of the Cardinals' team who live at the hotel. He greeted Jake Flowers, substitute infielder, as man to man and before five minutes had passed informed him that Kloza of Blytheville in the Tri-State League hit .373 last season, but had slipped a little this year; that Morrow of Waco in the Texas League, who hit an even .300 last year, might better his record, and when it came to pitching, what did Flowers think of Clyde Goodwin of Houston, who pitched and won two double-headers and had an average of .700 for the year? How was that for an iron man? It beat Duster Mails. Huh. The best the great Duster could do was to win seven and lose seven.

Flowers, much impressed by the youngster's grasp of baseball statistics and his eagerness to root for the Cards, introduced him to Bottomley, O'Farrel, Douthit, Rhem and other members of the team.

"My friends call me Mutt," he said.

He went out to the ball park every afternoon with the players and was one of the loudest Cardinal rooters in the stand. His voice lacked depth, but was penetrating. During the series with Boston he became so noisy in the grandstand that several women summoned an usher to eject him.

"I guess you won't," he said. "I'm a friend of Hornsby."

The usher knew him and he was escorted to a box seat, where he continued to yell.

His $50 soon dwindled and to save expenses Flowers let him share his room. Bottomley, O'Farrell, Douthit, Rhem and Flowers are paying his expenses. After the "little world series" with the Pirates, which begins today, he will return home to Stuttgart where his father is a physician.

Unfortunately the Cardinals will have to play the Pirate series without the voice of Lela—pardon us—Mutt Morgans to cheer them. There is nothing left of his voice but a whisper. However, Mutt himself will be present, "squeezing" with all his might for a pennant.

CLOSING PERFORMANCE OF "CARMEN" THIS EVENING

The final performance of the Grand Opera Association's production of "Carmen" will be given tonight at the Municipal Theater. Lorna Doone Jaxon, Chicago Civic Opera Company soprano, will sing the title role, and J. de Gaviria, the Spanish tenor who made his American debut here Tuesday, will sing Don Jose.

Elda Vettori, who is to make her debut with the Metropolitan Opera Company next fall, will sing the role of Micaela, and Joseph Royer, French-Canadian baritone, will sing Escamillo. The box office at the lower entrance of the theater will be open after 1 o'clock this afternoon.

STATE OUT OF MONEY FOR BLIND PENSIONS

3200 in Missouri Are Likely to Get Nothing Until Next January.

Blind pensioners to the number of 492 in St. Louis and 3200 in all of Missouri are affected by a deficit in the State blind pension funds. They received $25 a month until July, but have not been paid since and probably will not be paid again until January.

At the offices of the Missouri Commision for the Blind, in the Metropolitan Building, it was explained that a $700,000 deficit had to be wiped out at the start of this year. This was done, and enough was left over to pay pensions for six months. This is better than the record for 1925, when payments were suspended after three months. Next year, it is hoped, tax receipts will be sufficient to meet requirements, and pensioners will receive their allotments promptly throughout the year.

Six thousand blind persons enrolled for pensions under the pension act of 1923, and the funds available were insufficient, so the Legislature last year increased the tax rate for this pension fund from 2 to 3 cents on the $100, and the deficit is gradually being wiped out.

Attention was directed to the plight of Missouri's blind pensioners when Mrs. Johanna Fanning, 63 years old, and her blind daughter, Elizabeth, 25, were evicted from their room at 3725 Finney avenue, Thursday, for nonpayment of rent. Miss Fanning had been receiving $25 a month pension until payments were suspended. She and her mother are being cared for at Father Dempsey's Hotel.

"TORCH," 20 TO 1, TOO HOT A WINNER

So Railway Employes, Who Could Collect Only $1092 for $100, Cause Raid.

Torch was a hot favorite Thursday in the sixth race at Lincoln Fields, Chicago race track, and a group of employes in the Wabash Railway offices, in the Railway Exchange Building, pooled $165 to wager on the horse's chances to breeze in first, second or third.

Two clerks in charge of the pool—Roachell Green of 4712A McMillan avenue, and Frank Baethke of 2610 North Twentieth street—reported to their fellow employes that they had placed the $165 with several downtown handbook-makers, $100 of it at 719 St. Charles street.

When it became known that Torch had finished first, the office employes figured the $100 should net them $1456, representing $65 bet at 20 to 1 to win, $4 bet at 8 to 1 to place, and $31 bet at 4 to 1 to show.

But Green and Baethke could collect only $1092 for the $100, the bookies telling them that the odds had been lowered to 15 to 1, 6 to 1 and 3 to 1. Green and Baethke reported this back to the office and there was great indignation over the alleged welching.

Hoping to collect the difference between $1092 and $1456, Green and Baethke yesterday consulted Detective Sergeant Mulcahy of the gambling squad. He told them he could not collect for them, but could help them to get "even." In accord with his plan, the two young men went back to the St. Charles street store and bet $5 on Alard in the seventh race in Lincoln Fields.

Then Mulcahy stepped in and arrested Irving Lee, 33 years old, of 3326 Union boulevard, and Joseph Sullivan, 23, of 5735 Theodosia avenue, a clerk. The railroad employes said Sullivan had handled both bets, in the presence of Lee. The evidence of the second bet is a slip penciled "Alard 5 W," which they said Sullivan gave them.

Warrants will be sought against Lee and Sullivan.

'SAGE OF CARONDELET' TO BE BURIED TOMORROW

Last Rites at St. Colombkille's Church for Frank Chambers, Who Died at 104.

The funeral of Frank Chambers, 104 years old, who was dean of the "open forum" in South Side Square, Carondelet, where elderly men gathered to discuss public questions, will be held tomorrow morning at 8 o'clock from St. Colombkille's Church, 8200 Michigan avenue, with interment in Mount Olive Cemetery. The casket will be carried by six grandchildren.

Known to his friends as "Daddy" Chambers, the sage of Carondelet came to America when 20 years old from County Cork, Ireland. Most of his life he was a railroad man. He leaves three sons and a daughter, eight grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

AMERICANS WIN POINT AT GENEVA ON AVIATION ISSUE

Restriction of Commercial Flying Declared to Be Essentially a Regional Problem.

PRELIMINARY ARMS CONFERENCE ACTS

Distinction Drawn in Reducing Land Forces Between Nations With and Without Conscription.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Aug. 28.—The troublesome problem of how to treat commercial aviation in any convention bearing on the reduction of armaments was settled finally today by the members of the preliminary disarmament conference, in a manner to satisfy the United States, Argentina and other countries of the Western Hemisphere and for the first time in weeks unanimity was reached on a question of first importance.

The solution provides that while commercial aviation should be permitted to develop freely and unrestrictedly to the maximum commercial requirements of each country, its military value should be taken into account in framing any convention for the limitation of armaments, but that in so doing, particular attention should be paid to the regional aspect of the problem.

This embodies the principle for which the Americans have fought since the beginning of the conference.

Today's decision cannot be construed, it is believed, as interfering with the development of commercial aviation in the United States, since the American air service under no circumstances could be considered as a menace to Europe, nor European air forces a menace to the Western Hemisphere.

Should the principle be applied at the future disarmament conference, it will be for European countries to decide how far continental commercial aviation should be restricted.

The delegates also voted that in fixing methods for reducing land forces a distinction should be made between nations having conscription and those possessing standing armies.

Vital Issues Before League Assembly at Next Week's Meeting.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

GENEVA, Aug. 28.—While the agenda of the seventh session of the League of Nations Assembly, which convenes here Monday, Sept. 6, except for three or four of the 22 items, does not present an unusually imposing appearance, the impending session will be one of the most important in the history of the League thus far. In fact, the admission of Germany alone, if carried through, will mark a milestone in the progress of the Geneva organization.

Actually and figuratively, the League is standing at the crossroads. It will either emerge a concert of victorious powers which it has been since the armistice, or it will crash. The possibility of becoming a collaborating group of European states, which some observers predict, is hardly worth contemplating. A collaboration of purely European Powers, while possible, is hardly a probability since the continent would quickly split up into rival blocs.

With Germany in the League the organization will never again be the same as it was when its chief labors seemed to be the imposition of those clauses of the Versailles treaty upon which there was general agreement. It is true the Allied Supreme Council relieved the League of much onerous work for a while, but with the virtual passing of that body went many issues upon which the League could easily have been wrecked. Likewise Locarno has smoothed out dangerous difficulties—at least will have eliminated them if that pact is faithfully carried out by Germany's entrance into the League and affiliation with The Hague Court of Arbitration.

Spains Threatens to Quit League.

The most difficult task that confronts the several hundred statesmen gathered here is to harmonize the difference which threaten to cause Spain to leave the League at the moment Germany enters. Brazil, it is admitted, is out for some time to come.

Whether Spain will follow Brazil depends entirely upon the outside inducements made by England, Italy and France. If Spain can be persuaded to remain within the organization, content with promises of a continuous seat, things may run smoothly. On the other hand, if she withdraws, there are those who predict Mussolini will pull Italy away from Geneva at the earliest opportunity.

The attitude of Italy is puzzling. The blackshirt dictator admits his policy is to keep them guessing. Since the Corfu incident there has been a feeling that Italy has the knife out, and will use it when the opportunity presents itself, either on the League or any rival country that lays itself open to attack.

Italy and Germany at Odds

The bad blood between Germany and Italy is notorious. Italy is the greatest obstacle in the way of an Austro-German union, having expressed unalterable opposition to such a combination. In this view she has the support of France and the Balkan States, and could plunge Europe into another continent-wide war.

And again Italy and Germany are bound to clash over the question of mandates. The Italians have been dissatisfied ever since the Great Powers divided up Germany's former colonial possessions amongst themselves in the form of "mandated territories. Rome has announced she will remain on the League Council indefinitely if for no other reason than to cast her veto against returning any pre-war colonies to Germany unless she herself obtains a share in the redivision.

Italy's Reply to Spain Is Said to Be Cordial.

By the Associated Press.

ROME, Aug. 28.—Italy's reply to the Spanish note covering the Tangier problem and the composition of the Council of the League of Nations has been presented both to the Spanish Ambassador here and to the Madrid Government.

While strict silence is maintained about the tenor of the notes which were drawn by Premier Mussolini himself within two days in compliance with Madrid's specific request for speed, semi-official circles declare the answer is compiled in cordial language, substantially supporting the Spanish thesis.

On the basic point of the interdependence of the Tangier and the League questions and their joint consideration at Geneva, which it is declared was advanced in the Spanish note, the Italian Government is unable to accept Madrid's views. Instead, it suggests that Spain take up the Tangier question in a special international conference.

Great Britain and France probably will reply to the Spanish memorandum in a day or so. It is understood that the two answers will be identical. Both Governments would make it easy for Spain to recede from the position she took regarding the Tangier zone while suggesting some remedy for the evils that Spain has complained about in the policing of Tangier.

25 DEAD IN LOUISIANA HURRICANE-STRICKEN AREA

Bodies of Victims of Tropical Storm Reported Found on Coastal Plain Below Houma.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. — Twenty-five persons are dead as the result of a hurricane which struck Houma, La., the past week, the American Red Cross headquarters here was advised tonight. Grover Crane, a disaster relief expert, has been ordered by the organization to proceed from Tennessee to the stricken area, and the War Department has authorized the use of Government blankets and cots to be sent by trucks from New Orleans.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 28.—Reports from Morgan City, La., that many persons were dead in the lower Terrebonne section and other low lying parts of the state which were swept by the tropical storm Wednesday night were being checked tonight.

Members of a seaplane which traveled over the territory today seeking a party which left Thibodaux Monday on a fishing trip in the Gulf of Mexico, reported they had found eleven bodies in the marshlands below New Orleans, members of a party of fisherman from Point du Chine.

RING CHILD SWALLOWED REMOVED BY OPERATION

Delicate Surgery Removes Circlet the Size of a Quarter From Esophagus.

A metal ring as big around as a quarter was taken from the esophagus of Elizabeth Barchie, 3-year-old daughter of Joseph Barchi, 5352 West avenue, at the Jewish Hospital yesterday afternoon. The child swallowed the ring Thursday afternoon while playing in her rear yard.

The ring lodged about seven inches below the roof of the mouth. It was removed by means of an esophaguscope, which is a double-barreled instrument, through one barrel of which a light is thrown, while the other barrel is a passageway for the instrument used in the operation. In this case the removing instrument terminated in two hooks, which could be drawn together, thus catching the ring.

The ring lodged in the child's thorat first had to be moved to get into a position favorable for the operation. Difficulty in removing the ring was then met with because it had an opening in its circle of about 1-16th of an inch, throug which the operating instrument slipped.

The little girl's condition is serious because of the condition of her throat, which became sore in the two days since she swallowed the ring.

NEW MISSOURI HOTEL TO OPEN

Hotel Missouri, which has taken over 250 guest rooms of the new City Club building at Eleventh and Locust streets, will be opened formally to the public with a dinner dance on Sept. 25. The hotel has been receiving guests for several weeks but the formal opening is postponed for the completion of the lobby and mezzanine.

Some of the privileges of the City Club are to be accorded guests of the hotel, which is under the management of Walter Eckles, for 18 years manager of the Marquette Hotel.

ONLY 6 CONVICTED IN 51 HOMICIDE CASES OF NEGROES

Survey Bears Out Suggestion That Prevalence of Crime Is Due to Expectation of Exemption.

In connection with a campaign begun last week by Coroner Vitt and Negro leaders to reduce the homicide rate among Negroes in St. Louis, the Post-Dispatch has investigated records of Negro homicide cases, at the Municipal Courts Building, to show what punishment has followed the killings.

Coroner Vitt is authority for the statement that in 51 of 77 homicide cases reported so far this year, the victims were Negroes, which is out of proportion to the population ratio of approximately one Negro to 10 whites. One of the explanations offered by Negro leaders of this prevalence of homicide among Negroes is that promises made by political ward-heelers lead illiterate Negroes to believe they are immune from prosecution for misdeeds—that they will not be brought to trial.

These homicide cases do not include automobile fatalities—merely persons killed by revolver, razor, club, etc. Forty of the Negroes killed were male, 11 were female. Their average age was 26 years. Disposition of the 51 cases, as shown by official records, follows:

Only Six Convictions.

Six convictions. Two pleaded guilty of manslaughter and were sentenced, respectively, to one year in the workhouse and five years in the penitentiary. Two were tried and convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to two years and to eight years in the penitentiary. One pleaded guilty of murder in the second degree and received 15 years, another was tried and convicted of second degree murder and got 30 years.

Twenty cases pending in court. The defendants in these cases are charged, either in warrants or indictments, with first-degree murder, second-degree murder or manslaughter. Some have had preliminary hearings, but none had pleaded guilty or been brought to trial. Some are docketed in the trial courts, but in other cases warrants must be reissued or indictments voted.

Four exonerations. The defendants pleaded self-defense and were exonerated by Coroner's juries.

Three justifiable homicides. The victims were killed by police in line of duty.

Two out-of-town cases. The victims died in St. Louis, but the city lacks jurisdiction to try the slayers, as the victims were shot outside the city, one at Kinloch, Mo., another at Foristell, Mo.

No prosecution possible in one case, in which a man ended his own life after murdering his wife.

Eight Defendants at Large.

Eight defendants not apprehended. No warrants or indictments are pending against the missing defendants, as it is the Circuit Attorney's practice not to begin prosecution until the defendants are in custody or under bond.

Two cases in which the Circuit Attorney has taken no action, although defendants were held by Coroner's juries for homicides on Aug. 25. These cases are being held up until the grand jury convenes next month.

Disposition not determined by records in five cases. Records open to the public do not show what action, if any, has been taken against the five slayers. Assistant Circuit Attorney Wilson was not familiar with these cases and declined to investigate to determine their disposition, but referred inquiries to Assistant Circuit Attorney Roos, in charge of the grand jury which has passed or may pass on the cases. Roos is out of the city.

Mother Seeks Missing Boy.

Mrs. William J. Doak, of 2609 Park avenue, has asked the Post-Dispatch to aid her in finding her son, Clifford Close, 11 years old, who disappeared from his rooming house in Overland, Tuesday. The boy, she said, left the house to play and has not been seen since. He wore a blue shirt, gray knee trousers and tennis shoes. He has dark hair, blue eyes, is about four feet three inches tall and weighs 80 pounds.

COOLIDGE AND AID GET 50 BROOK TROUT

President Dons Hip-Boots on Rockefeller Preserve in Adirondacks.

By the Associated Press.

PAUL SMITHS, N. Y., Aug. 28.—With the trout season ending early next week, President Coolidge turned fisherman again today and went on an expedition in the heart of the William Rockefeller preserve, a few miles from White Pine Camp, to try his rod and line. He was accompanied by guides and Secret Service men.

The President found good fishing and returned at dark with 50 trout which he and Richard Jervis, chief of the White House Secret Service, had caught. The biggest of them weighed close to a pound.

Mr. and Mrs. William F. Whiting of Holyoke, Mass., personal friends, remained as house guests at White Pine Camp today, but there were no visitors invited for tomorrow, and Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge will attend services at the First Presbyterian Church of Saranac Lake.

A comparatively light engagement list confronts the President next week also, but two or three visitors having been invited for the next seven or eight days. The first among them will be Matthew C. Brush, president of the American International Corporation of New York City, who will be a luncheon guest Monday.

Brush is an old friend of the President, having been president of the Boston Elevated Railway when Mr. Coolidge was Governor of Massachusetts. He is also a director of several Western railroads and has recently completed a business trip through the Southwest. He is expected to report upon business conditions as he observed them.

James R. Sheffield, United States Ambassador to Mexico, is expected to visit White Pine Camp after he completes a vacation at Atlantic City. Any recommendations as to policies with reference to Mexico that Sheffield may make, it was said, will have great weight with the Chief Executive.

Discussing the proposed visit of the Ambassador to White Pine Camp, officials said Mr. Coolidge would like to see him and talk about the Mexican situation and obtain his first-hand views about conditions in the Southern Republic.

Fine Opportunity for Good Salesmen

The St. Louis office of a well-known insurance company desires the permanent addition of a few good salesmen. We specialize in Automobile Insurance, Employers' and Public Liability, Burglary, Plate Glass, and Judgment Indemnity Insurance. Policy contracts contain more elements of coverage than other standard policies. The premium rates are considerably lower. A broader service at a saving, making easier for salesmen to do business.

A reasonable drawing account and liberal commissions. We employ no outside agents or brokers in competition with our salesmen. Can you visualize this opportunity, when there are approximately 140,000 automobiles to be insured and thousands of prospects for insurance generally in the St. Louis territory?

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

J. J. H.—The Missouri State Fair in 1920 opened Aug. 14 and closed Aug. 21.

THE BAIT.—The use of a decoy like cheese and bits of bacon rind, either raw or which is baked, is also considered very good bait. We know of nothing else to use in the trap in order to catch the rats alive.

H. L. Z.—Joseph Pennell, famous etcher and illustrator, was awarded a grand prize at the St. Louis Exposition in 1902 and not at the World's Fair in 1904. You will find comprehensive biographical material on Joseph Pennell at the Public Library, and copies of his more famous etchings can be viewed in the Public Library art department.

CURIOUS.—Petrograd, Russia, was called St. Petersburg until Sept. 1, 1914. About 17,226 square miles of land and 3534 square miles of water are included in the territory. The City of Petrograd was formerly the capital of the Russian Empire. Most of the 3,100,000 population of the Petrograd district lives in the city of Petrograd, as outlying lands are not very suitable for cultivation, as it is composed chiefly of forests and bogs. The climate except for June, July and August is damp and very cold. Rain and snow generally fall more than 150 days of the year.

E. E. M.—A formula used by the United States Government in making whitewash for lighthouses and other public buildings is as follows: Unslaked lime, 2 pecks; common salt, 1 peck; rice flour, 3 pounds; Spanish whiting, ½ pound; glue (clean and white), 1 pound; water, a sufficient quantity. Slake the lime in a vessel of about 10 gallons capacity; cover it, strain and add the salt previously dissolved in warm water. Boil the rice flour in water; soak the glue in water and dissolve in a water bath, and add both, together with the whiting and 5 gallons of hot water to the mixture, stirring all well together. Cover to protect from dirt and let it stand for a few days, when it will be ready for use. It is to be applied hot and for that reason should be used from a kettle over a portable furnace.

THANKFUL.—The following is a recipe for salmon croquettes: 1¾ cups of cold flaked salmon; 1 cup of thick white sauce; few grains of cayenne; 1 teaspoon of lemon juice and salt to taste. Add sauce to salmon, then add seasonings. Spread on a plate to cool. Shape, dip in crumbs, eggs, and crumbs again, fry in deep fat and drain. The white sauce is made as follows: 2½ tablespoons of butter; ¼ cup of cornstarch or ⅓ cup of flour; 1 cup of milk; ¼ teaspoon of salt; few grains of pepper. Put the butter in saucepan, stir until melted and bubbling; add flour mixed with seasonings and stir until thoroughly blended; then pour on gradually while stirring constantly, the milk, bring to the boiling point and let boil two minutes. If a wire whisk is used, all the milk may be added at once.

L. R.—Peaches are propagated from seeds planted usually in stratified sand during autumn. Freezing of the seeds causes the shells to crack and so hastens germination. Seeds should be planted in rows that are three feet apart and the seeds six or eight inches apart in the rows. In the North, the buds do not appear until the second spring and the trees are not transplanted until two years after planting. When budding, the buds are set as close to the ground as possible. When they start to grow, the original top is removed so as to force all the food into the young sprout. The young tree is buried as deeply as the point of union of stock and scion, when planted in the orchard. Pruning or cutting back is rigidly practised each season. Usually less than half the wood being allowed to remain. Trees usually come into profitable bearing when three or four years old and last for ten years for commercial purposes and seldom more than 25 years for any purpose. Pruning is done just as the buds start swelling in the spring.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

E. G. H.—A diagnosis of the cause of sensitive nerve ends could not be made or any treatment advised without full knowledge of the individual case. You should consult a physician.

D. W. J.—The remedy is a proprietary preparation. Its components are known only to the manufacturers, so we cannot tell you the ingredients it contains. We cannot offer any suggestions concerning its action or merits.

P. C.—The following mixture may prove effective in stopping the hair from coming out so easily: Mix three drachms of gallic acid, 20 drachms of castor oil, 40 drachms of vaseline and 1 drachm of spirits of lavender. Rub this mixture into the scalp thoroughly every night and morning.

INTERESTED.—Iodide of potash is known in medical practice as an alterative, that is, to alter and remedy certain diseased conditions. It is used in glandular enlargements as an absorbent, in such systematic disorders as rheumatism and in such specific infections as syphilis.

SUFFERER.—There is always a certain degree of neuralgia or neuritis present in a case of arterio-sclerosis. This pain may be relieved by a free application of heat to the part affected. Certain drugs also relieve such pain, but we do not advise the use of such drugs, because they are habit-forming and therefore harmful.

A. E. V. B.—Assuming that a true diagnosis of pin worms has been made and that the disease still persists despite the various treatments you have tried, we think the following local procedure might give relief: Use an injection of plain warm water, about one-half pint, to cleanse the bowel. Follow with another half-pint of warm water to which has been added two drachms of tincture of sesquichloride of iron. Should irritation occur use a weak starch solution injection afterwards. If you prefer use a solution made of five grains of carbolic acid dissolved in 10 minims of glycerine and thoroughly mixed with one pint of warm water as an injection.

A. B. C.—Reduction exercise for the abdomen can be done as follows: In standing position, clasp the hands over the abdomen; contract the abdominal muscles and bend at the hips six times in succession. Be sure to keep the muscles well contracted and take three deep breaths between each exercise. Practice every night and morning for a short time, adding a few more exercises each night, until the desired reduction is obtained.

IN MEMORIUM

In loving memory of my darling daughter, Blanche Sinnwell (nee Andrew), who died Aug. 21, 1916.
MOTHER.

Frank G. Eyerkus, died Aug. 24, 1924. Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by FAMILY.

In loving memory of Edward Essmueller, who died Aug. 28, 1921. Gone to rest in the land of peace and never will be forgotten by his MOTHER, FATHER AND SISTER.

In loving memory of Annie Schwerzler, who died Aug. 21, 1925.
Sweetest names in all the world,
Loved above all others,
'Tis the name of life and love,
The dear, dear names of wife and mother.
Sadly missed by those that loved her.

I wish to extend my sincere thanks to all my friends and relatives, also to the employes of the City Sanitarium for their beautiful floral offerings and for their sympathy and kindness shown me during my recent sad bereavement in the loss of my dear niece, Norah Lydon.
THOMAS J. LYDON.

In memory of our dear mother, Mary Dittmer, who departed this life Aug. 29, 1925.

Once our hearts were gay and happy,
When we had our mother here.
Now our hearts are sad and lonely
As we wipe away a tear.
For in the past, when we had troubles,
You were here to understand;
And if every friend should fail us,
You would led a helping hand.
One short year ago we watched you,
Each loved one by your bed.
Gone but not forgotten.
Sadly missed by daughters, sons and granddaughter.

In memory of our dear darling mother, Dr. Margaret A. Vorbeck, who went to heaven Aug. 28, 1924.

She shares a love we cannot know,
A joy we cannot feel.
And He who bids our tears to flow,
Will all our sorrows heal.

She meekly bore her earthly cross,
And gently laid it down.
And while we deeply mourn our loss,
She wears her heavenly crown.

Then let us wipe our tears away,
Since she the prize hath won.
And ask for strength that we may say
God's will, not ours, be done.
HER CHILDREN.

Advertising

When concentrated in the Post-Dispatch is almost certain to restore the article if it is found by an honest person, because the Post-Dispatch is the recognized Lost medium of St. Louis invariably consulted by persons who find lost articles. It is also a fact recognized by St. Louisans that many lost articles are advertised exclusively in the Post-Dispatch. Each week the Post-Dispatch prints TWICE as many LOST and FOUND ads as the next St. Louis newspaper. If a lost article cannot be recovered through the Post-Dispatch it is, as a rule, not recovered.

CATTLE, HOGS AND LAMBS SCORE GAINS

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	36,755	37,197	35,112
Hogs	64,434	65,968	63,492
Sheep	22,275	11,792	10,531
Horses and mules	360	769	1,081
Totals	123,824	115,726	110,216

Livestock values ranged upward at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week, cattle, hogs and lambs scoring good gains in market price. Combined receipts of all stock were liberal at approximately 123,824 head. The cattle supply, though only slightly under the year's largest run, was not burdensome and nearly all departments of the trade scored an advance of 25c to 50c in active trading. Native beef steers bulked at $8.50 to $9.75 per cwt., and a fair sprinkling of good to choice kinds changed hands between $10 and $10.75. The latter price, paid for yearlings, represents the year's top for this class. Plain native steers dipped to around $7 and under. Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas range steers aggregated 275 cars and sold in a spread of $5.50 to $8. Stocker and feeder steers varied mainly from $5 to $7.25 and top feeders reached $7.65. Light steers and heifers mixed equaled the year's top in their class at $11. Straight heifers scored high at $10.50. Other attractive light yearlings scored around $10 and in the $9 column, followed by a liberal quota of grass consignments at $5 to $7.50.

Beef cows strengthened late to a bulk of $5.25 to $6.25. Low sale was $4.75; top, $7.50. Cutter cows closed at $4.25 to $4.75 and canners $3.50 to $4.25. Bulls showed the least advance of any cattle, averaging steady to strong. Heavy beef grades sold largely at $6 to $6.50 and bolognas moved mainly at $5 to $6, plainer kinds around $4 and $4.50. Choice veal calves moved in a spread of 114.50 to $15.50, the higher price appearing Monday. The top at the close was $14.75, against $134.50 and $14.75 the previous week. Southern canner yearlings strengthened to $4.75 to $5.50.

Uneven Hog Market.

After uneven advances and declines on all grades featuring the week's trading, the market closed for the six-day period at 25c to 50c higher values on light hogs, with butcher and heavy hogs steady to 25c higher than the previous weeks clos. Light hogs were in good demand throughout the week and on the whole met with a favorable market, good clearance effected by the close. Top reached $14.45 in the Saturday session for some choice shipping weights, with the $14 and $14.25 figures firmly established on the top end of the week's bulk of sales. Contributions of heavy hogs showed a decreasing tendency, with weights for the most part running to light and medium weight butcher hogs. In spite of the small supply of weighty hogs, the market was generally slow on this class was practically no order buying demand was in evidence. Packers were able to enforce several declines through the week, but an advanc was scored Friday which compensated for these losses. Bulk of light hogs of 160 to 200 lbs. average sold for the week at $13.65 to $14.10 with light butcher weight sof 210 to 230 lbs. clearin gat $13.40 to $13.75.

Medium weights from 240 to 270 lbs. cleared in a wider spread of $12.75 to $13.25 and heavy hogs from 280 lbs. and up at $12 to $12.75. The weaker tendency on the part of weighty kinds resulted in a widening in the spread of prices between light and heavy hogs which amounted to better than $2 at times. Pig values followed the example of lights in the matter of advances and declines, better weight pigs of 130 to 150 lbs. average clearing at $13.50 to $14.25 and medium weight pigs $12.50 to $13.50. Plain and inferior southern kinds ranged downward from these prices, according to weight and quality. Packing sows after advancing somewhat showed a sharply lower tendency and a midweek reached the lowest price levels that has been in effect for some time. Heavies ranged downward to $9.25 with lights dropping to a $10 and $10.25 basis. Later in the week however a recovery was made and closing deals were generally steady on light kinds at $10 to $10.50 but heavy kinds continued to sell in the $9 column, around 25c lower than last Saturday. Stags showed practically no change at $9 to $10 and $10.25.

Lamb Prices Higher.

Strengthening prices from day to day featured the past week's trading in lambs with closing deals for the week showing a gain of 50c to 75c, best lambs showing the biggest part of the advance. Receipts were moderate locally, totalling little heavier than the previous week's run, quality grading fair to good on natives which made up the bulk of the arrivals. Southwest lambs furnished a fair proportion of the early week's receipts and there was also a number of big lambs on the buck order here.

Buyers discriminated against these lambs at all times and prices were generally materially under good lambs, ranging from $12 to $13. Top lambs at $14.75 featured the week's closing trade, with buyers expressing a willingness to pay as high as $15 for some strictly choice offerings. Bulk of sales for the week was at $14.25 to $14.50, medium to fair lambs at $14 to $14.25. Cull and common lambs failed to follow the advance scored by better grades, remaining on a firm basis throughout the week. Buyers considered them poor property and bulk cleared at $8.50 with scattered lots grading above the ordinary as high as $9. Aged sheep also went through the week without any change in prices, values remaining unchanged from day to day. Best light ewes for slaughter sold up to $6, with medium kinds $5 to $5.50 and heavy ewes $4 to $4.50. Good to choice aged blackface ewes for breeding cleared at $8.50 to $10, with choice yearling blackface ewes quotable up to $11. Choppers and bucks sold mainly at $2 to $3 and canners $1 to $2. Complete quotations of the different classes follow: Quotations: Slaughter stock—Good to choice lambs, $13.75 to $14.75; medium to good, $12.75 to $13.75; plain to medium, $10 to $12.75; cull and common, $8 to $9; skips, $5 to $7. Good to choice yearling wethers, $10 to $12.50; plain to good, $8 to $10. Good to choice mutton ewes, $5.50 to $6; medium to good, $4.50 to $5.50; plain to medium, $4 to $4.50. Choppers and bucks, $2 to $3; canners, $1 to $2. Fat hair goats, $2 to $3; thin to fair goats, $1 to $2. Fat kids, $5 to $6; thin to fair kids, $2 to $4.

Horses and Mules.

Horse and mule receipts here the past week were light at approximately 300 head and the market held about steady in both native and Western stock. Sales were made privately and at auction and clearance was good. The outlet included range horses and mules, Southern horses, Cuban riding horses, big mules and Spanish mules.

WEEK-END REALIZING IN THE COTTON MARKET

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Week-end realizing in the cotton market was promoted by slightly improved weather reports today. After selling early at 17.87c, December reacted to 17.66c and closed at 17.72c. The general market closed steady at net declines of 2 to 10 points.

The opening was steady at a decline of 1 point to an advance of 2 points. Active months quickly sold about 5 to 9 points net higher on private reports of further showers in the Southwest and in sympathy with relatively steady Liverpool cables. October worked up to 17.85c and January to 17.88c on this initial buying, but demand seemed to be readily supplied and prices turned easier during the forenoon.

The outlook for clearing conditions in the Eastern belt no doubt increased the disposition to take profits on recent purchases, but selling otherwise was restricted by the forecast for unsettled weather with local showers in Texas and Oklahoma, or the continued bullish average of private crop advances. The improvement in the weather outlook, however, checked fresh buying, and the market gradually yielded to the liquidation of long accounts.

October eased off to 17.66c and January to 17.70c in late trading, net declines of about 10 to 14 points, but the close was a few points up from the lowest on renewed covering.

Reports of improved spot demand for domestic and European account, particularly for southern mills, brought little if any trade buying in the market here. Most of the business was attributed by local brokers to the evening-up of accounts to await further weather developments or the showing of the end-August crop reports.

Private cables said hedge selling had been offset by trade calling and covering in the Liverpool market, but reported buyers of cotton cloths and yarns were disinclined to operate and appeared to anticipate lower prices.

The amount of cotton on shipboard awaiting clearance at the end of the week was estimated at about 50,000 bales, compared with 58,000 last year.

WHEAT DOWN MORE THAN 4 CENTS FOR WEEK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—New low levels on the present movement were made in the closing minutes of trade in wheat today. The prospective weight of Canadian wheat on the market, the heaviness of the pit owing to slow export demand and reported professional selling by a leading operator all combined to force values down. Closing prices were 1⅛c to 1¼c lower for the day and 4⅛c to 4¼c lower for the week, September, $1.32⅛ to $1.32¼; December, $1.35¼ to $1.35⅜; May, $1.40⅛ to $1.40¼.

Buying power has been more or less demoralized despite the severity of the recent decline. Threshing returns from Canada are increasingly favorable and the Winnipeg market received 130 cars of new wheat, the bulk of which graded contract. There is every reason to believe Canadian farmers will rush their wheat to market the next week or two and this caused bulls to back away.

Canadian wheat is weak in comparison to ours. December futures in Winnipeg are 6c under our December. Cash interests say that so long as we remain at this premium our chances for export business are small. The big decline, though, has strengthened the underlying conditions and a better situation is expected here soon. Weak prices are in order at this time of the year, too.

The seaboard confirmed export sales of 200,000 bushels. Trade expects bullish statistics Monday, but these will probably be offset by heavy arrivals at Winnipeg.

Corn sagged with wheat. Offerings increased on all hard spots. The commercial demand was moderately active though and the cash basis was ¼c to ½c higher. The West complained of hot weather. Corn closed ⅝c to ⅞c lower and for the week 1¼c to 2⅛c off. September, 76⅛c to 76c. December, 81⅜c to 81⅞c; May, 87⅝c to 87⅞c. Shipping sales were 36,000 bushels.

Oats sagged with other grains to the lowest level in some time. The close was ⅜c to 1⅛c off for the day and 1¾c to 2⅛c for week. September 36⅛c to 36¼c; December, 40⅛c to 40¼c; May, 44½c to 44⅝c. Shipping sales were 45,000 bushels.

Lard finished 10c to 15c higher. Provisions were strong with hogs. Ribs 10c to 15c up and bellies 7c to 10c lower.

WHEAT CLOSES LOWER ON CANADIAN NEWS

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, Aug. 28.—Wheat futures closed lower on the local market at the week-end session. Corn finished fractionally off.

Export demand for North American wheat continued slack. Chicago reported rumor of resellers in Europe making cheaper quotations than first-hand offers from this side.

There was a fair demand for soft wheat after best grades declined 1c to 1¼c and offerings were well cleaned up. Samples of No. 2 red and No. 3 red, running high in moisture, had to be pressed on buyers. Hard wheat was 1c lower to 2c to 3c higher. The lower grades of hard and mixed wheat recovered substantially, there being more export competition for the offerings. Prices for damp or heating sample grade were mostly 2c to 3c higher, sales ranging from $1.20 to $1.25, and everything cleaned up. Ordinary milling grades and tough No. 4s were 1c lower, but in pretty fair demand. Lot of 10,000 bu No. 2 hard 13¼ per cent protein was bought late yesterday basis 12¼c over Kansas City September price delivered. Nebraska No. 1 hard 12.13 per cent protein sold on track at $1.37½; Corn was steady to 1c lower, the heaviness of futures again affecting cash prices. There was a fair demand and offerings were pretty well absorbed. Local trade, mills, industries and shippers bought. In the oats market No. 3 declined 1½c to 3½c and cheaper classes 1c to 2c. The demand came from shippers. More than a score of cars were unsold, buyers being repelled by the character of offerings.

Recovering the opening loss, wheat rose above previous close, but again reacted, going below last night's close. Liverpool closed ½d to ¾d lower and Winnipeg early was 1¼c to 1⅝c lower. Favorable weather proved a large factor in the market, as did fact that Winnipeg receipts were more than double those of year ago.

September wheat opened at $1.32½, December wheat $1.35½, September corn 78⅝c and December corn 81⅝c.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 582 cars, compared with 278 a week ago and 889 last year, Minneapolis receiving 342 cars, Duluth 82 and Winnipeg 158.

Local wheat receipts, which were 180,600 bushels, compared with 89,600 a week ago and 63,000 last year, included 98 cars local and 31 through. Corn receipts, which were 51,800 bushels, compared with 54,600 a week ago and 58,800 last year, included 35 cars local and 2 through. Oats receipts, which were 100,000 bushels, compared with 56,000 a week ago and 68,000 last year, included 44 cars local and 6 through. Hay receipts were 15 cars local and none through.

World wheat stocks were reported to show an increase at 2,989,000 bushels, against a decrease last year of 30,310,000 bushels. The total world stock of wheat on Aug. 1 was reported at 145,809,000 bushels, compared with 139,116,000 bushels the corresponding day of 1925. Attention was called to the fact that Government pars on the yield per acre of corn for August will increase more than one bushel. This increase applied to the acreage will give an increase in estimated production of about 100,000,000 bushels, exclusive of any increase that has taken place this month owing to general improvement of the growing crop, it was said.

Primary receipts of wheat were heavier than a week ago and heavier than a year ago. Corn receipts were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago. Oats receipts were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago. Wheat shipments were lighter than a week ago and heavier than a year ago. Corn shipments were lighter than a week ago and lighter than a year ago. Oats shipments were heavier than a week ago and lighter than a year ago.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,666,000 bushels, compared with 1,481,000 a week ago and 1,532,000 last year. Corn receipts were 265,000 bushels, compared with 391,000 a week ago and 651,000 last year. Oats receipts were 1,090,000 bushels, compared with 785,000 a week ago and 1,382,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 975,000 bushels, compared with 1,668,000 a week ago and 875,000 last year. Corn shipments were 251,000 bushels, compared with 377,000 a week ago and 505,000 last year. Oats shipments were 441,000 bushels, compared with 272,000 a week ago and 1,031,000 last year.

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"Irregularity characterized the week's readjustments in the stock market. With many traders away on vacation and others preparing to be absent next week, it was not surprising that movements were somewhat mixed. In spite of some unsettlement, however, the market demonstrated conclusively that its foundation had not been greatly weakened by the summer's rather sharp rise in values. Quite a little selling pressure early in the week was readily absorbed and in the last half a distinctly firmer tone developed, a greatly increased demand for railroad shares contributing to the general recovery. Publication of earnings statements for July showing in the case of several important carriers substantial increases in net income, formed the basis for renewed activity in the transportation group. New high levels for the year were recorded in several favorites. Moreover, figures on freight loadings indicated there had been no slackening in business this month. With abundant crops to be moved a little later, therefore, the outlook for railroads appeared to be brighter than for many years.

Money Rates Firmer.

"Even higher money rates in the last half of the week failed to check operations for the rise. The rate for funds to loan on Stock Exchange collateral advanced to 5 per cent, while time was in keen demand at 5 per cent. Bankers' acceptances showed a tendency toward higher levels. Although this firming in rates doubtlessly reflected to some extent preparations for month-end settlements and preholiday financial operations, bankers were inclined to see in it evidence of expanding commercial activity. Moreover, banks were getting ready for the forthcoming Treasury offerings and business organizations were accumulating funds for the Sept. 15 tax payment. The higher rate for money may continue, therefore, until after the middle of next month, at least, if not well into the autumn.

Cloth Market Buying Better.

"In the field of business further progress appears to have been made during the week. A stiffening in raw cotton prices, in response to the Government's latest crop estimate, was followed by better buying in cloth markets and signs of increased activity in textile mills. Retail trade had been handicapped to some extent by unfavorable weather, but hope has not been abandoned that conditions will be more seasonable after Labor day.

Rains Help and Hurt.

"Rains of the last week or two have done some good, however, even if they have reduced the probable yield of the cotton crop and damaged other crops to some extent. They contributed to a decided improvement in corn and were welcomed through the Mississippi Valley. Prospects of larger yields of grain than had been anticipated a week ago served to depress wheat and corn values, but cotton prices advanced sharply in response to the bullish crop report issued by the Government Monday, forecasting a yield of 15,248,000 bales.

Sterling Price Lower.

"Foreign developments of interest were lacking and exchange rates on the principal European centers moved within narrow limits. Sterling followed a downward course for reasons not altogether plain. Possibly preparations are under way for purchases of commodities here in the next month or two, but commercial bills were reported to have been comparatively small. French rates held steady. Elsewhere changes were unimportant."

Active Week-End Market.

"A sharply increased demand for industrial stocks and continued buying of railroad shares lifted the stock market to higher levels in fairly active trading today. Traders were inclined to take a more optimistic view of the situation in spite of prospects of a dull week preceding the Labor day holiday. Mercantile reviews stressed indications of further trade expansion. The investment market again was somewhat unsettled, but higher prices for several convertible issues and foreign bonds provided a steadier tone.

Industrial Leaders Revived.

"Operations for the rise were resumed in a more confident manner in leading industrial shares soon after the opening and several recently active issues moved forwarl briskly in the short session. U. S. Steel was in demand again, advancing more than a point in a short time to a new top on the recovery. U. S. Rubber continued to forge ahead, crossing 68 to a further high for the movement. Railroad shares were again active at higher levels, Atchison being lifted to another high price. Norfolk & Western, Baltimore & Ohio and Rock Island were other active favorites that scored advances.

Wisdom From Mr. Durant.

"The speculative community read with interest William C. Durant's formal statement, issued on his departure for Europe, in which he said: 'To the individual speculatively inclined who is in the habit of following the professional bear contingent the following suggestion might be in order: If you do not think a stock is worth the money, in my opinion it is safer to leave it alone than to sell short.' This was interpreted to mean that Mr. Durant had not closed out all of his 'long' stock and that he did not anticipate any severe depression. This view may have inspired renewed buying of industrial favorites and caused active covering by traders on the 'short' side.

Trading in Exchanges Quiet.

"Trading in foreign exchanges was again on a small scale and fluctuations held within narrow limits. Further rise in rates on Paris was the only feature of the day. Sterling held steady and changes in other parts of the list were insignificant.

"In the principal commodity market prices again displayed some irregularity, reflecting unsettlement over crop developments. A decline of 13 to 17 points in cotton eliminated most of yesterday's advance.

Decrease in Surplus.

"An explanation of the advance

BOND OFFERINGS OF WEEK $80,000,000

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The outstanding developments in the investment situation of the week have been continued activity in the market for French Government and foreign industrial obligations, further signs of a hardening tendency of time money and a substantial increase in the amount of new offerings.

Toward the end of the week the demand for both the French Government 7 per cent and 8 per cent bonds resulted in new high records being established for the year. Industrial obligations of the type of Est railroad 7s have been favored in the buying, this issue in particular being carried to its best price for 1926. The increasing demand which is developing for these issues apparently is based in part on their comparatively high yield at present prices, but more particularly is a reflection of the quieting down in the political situation abroad and the gradual stabilization of the French franc.

This naturally has resulted in a lack of interest in domestic corporate issues which, save for the speculative rails, have been practically without feature.

The manner in which public offerings have been absorbed leaves the impression which has prevailed for some time that funds for new financing are plentiful and probably will remain so for several months despite the upward drift of call funds for speculative purposes. These offerings have approximated $81,520,000 compared with $47,459,000 last week and $9,450,000 in the corresponding week of 1925.

Offerings of new securities during the first six months of 1926 have been featured by large foreign obligations. It is expected however, that from now on public utility corporations, because of their expanding operations, will be in the market in an active way for additional capital. During the first half period corporate securities offerings increased 14 per cent over the amount for the first half of 1925 while Government securities declined 4 per cent. The amount of new financing for municipalities during the period declined to $711,000,000 from $752,000,000 in the same period in 1925. These figures are accompanied by the statement from reliable sources that prospective municipal floatations indicate that the year as a whole will show a still further reduction.

Bond Prices Rise in Quiet Week-End Trade.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Bond prices continued to point upward in today's quiet session, which was featured by renewed demand for the Fernch issues. French Government 8s touched 107¾ and were followed into new high ground for the year by the 6 per cent issues of Bordeaux, Lyons and Marseilles and French Steamship 7s. Bank of Chile 6½s, Dominican Republic 5s and Norwegian 5½s also eclipsed their previous top prices for the year.

The ready absorption of most of the $80,000,000 new offerings this week gave promise of a good fall investment demand which helped to counteract the ordinarily adverse influence of higher money rates. Institutional buying is being maintained in fairly large volume, despite the expanding commercial and agricultural demand for funds.

Railroad liens registered further improvement as Class One carriers continued to report exceptional July earnings. Atchison convertible 4s moved up in sympathy with the advance in that road's stock, touching a new high at 89¾, and Delaware and Hudson convertible 5s attained a new top at 116¾. A brisk demand also was noted for Seaboard Air Line Adjustment 5s.

The rise in Public Utilities was led by Montana Power 5s, which advanced nearly 1¼ points. Industrials showed mixed changes. U. S. Government issues held steady.

Brief Summary of Week's Markets

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.

HARDENING of money rates, coincident with the heavy calling of bank loans; indecisive price movements in the stock market, as trading lapsed into midsummer dullness; steadiness of bonds despite the unusually large volume of $80,000,000 in new offerings; a sharp rally in cotton following publication of the Government report showing a sharp reduction in the crop estimate, and a decline in wheat prices were the distinguishing characteristics of this week's financial and commodity markets.

Stiffer money rates reflected the expanding demand for funds in connection with crop movements and fall business requirements. Steady accumulation of the rail shares, based on the unusually favorable nature of the July earnings statements, and a late rally in the oils were the outstanding developments in the stock market. An increasing demand for high-grade foreign government liens was one of the few features of the week's bond trading.

Removal of the "peg" on German marks, followed by a moderate rally in that currency, attracted widespread attention in the foreign exchange market. Sterling exchange lost ground under the pressure of grain and cotton bills. French francs strengthened in reflection of the progress toward fiscal reform being made in that country.

in money rates to 5 per cent was afforded in the weekly statement of the Clearing House banks, which revealed a decrease in surplus of $18,082,230. This resulted in a drop in the excess reserve to $7,343,570 and forecast a continuance of firm money rates for a time at least. Loans, discounts, etc., decreased $46,090,000."

LOCAL STOCK TRADE VOLUME SOME LARGER

Boyd-Welsh Is Individual Leader in Point of Business on the Exchange During Week.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Aug. 28.—The volume of trade on the local market was some larger during the past week, but at that was not heavy, total sales being only a little over 3800 shares. Price changes were mixed.

Boyd-Welsh, with aggregate turnover of 730 shares and 3-point gain, was an individual feature. Skouras rose sharply and at the week's close was 3 points net higher. Sales were about 600 shares. Pedigo-Weber was unchanged at 35. International Shoe sold lower.

St. Louis Public Service was up fractionally and Consolidated Lead was down a fraction.

Bond sales were larger than in previous week.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The market moved in an irregular manner during this week, the most importance being attached to the steady decline of sterling, which has now reached a level almost 2 cents below the high record made two months ago. Incidentally the difference between cables and demand widened to ⅛ cent to the pound. This movement, largely due to sales of exchange against continued heavy shipments of coal from Southern ports to replace the shortage in England during the miners' strike, carried sterling cables down at $4.85⅛, a loss of ¾ for the week and comparing with the high of $4.86¾ made on June 29.

"French exchange was in steady demand, offerings even at advances being of small amounts and it required only moderate buying to carry the rate for the French check up from 2.81 to 2.89. Belgian followed French closely, but little interest is shown in Belgian exchange in this market. Italian exchange was firm for a time, but became heavy toward the end of the week, when it was down about five points from the range prevailing a week ago. Dutch and Swiss exchange moved in harmony with sterling. Swiss francs and guilders both sagged steadily, but the slow movement carried rates to new low levels for recent trading. Spanish exchange had another downward movement, peseta checks ranging from 15.42 to 15.30 during the week. The only important movement in Scandinavians was a decline of seven points in Norwegian crowns.

"Interest was created in German exchange by statements that restrictions in Berlin had been removed and reference to this action were followed by some outside buying, on which reichsmarks, which had long been held at 23.81, moved up to slightly above 23.84.

"Silver exchanges, which were weak in the preceding part of the month, developed a strong tone. Hongkong moved up more than a cent. Almost as great a gain was made in exchange on Shanghai. Canadian exchange developed strength in yesterday's trading, when it rose to 100.18. Japanese showed a reactionary tendency after the strength of the two preceding weeks."

Trading in foreign exchanges was again on a small scale today and fluctuations held within narrow limits. Further rise in rates on Paris was the only feature of the day. Sterling held steady and changes in other parts of the list were insignificant.

LOCAL STOCK TRADE VOLUME SOME LARGER

Boyd-Welsh Is Individual Leader in Point of Business on the Exchange During Week.

ST. LOUIS STOCK EXCHANGE, Aug. 28.—The volume of trade on the local market was some larger during the past week, but at that was not heavy, total sales being only a little over 3800 shares. Price changes were mixed.

Boyd-Welsh, with aggregate turnover of 730 shares and 3-point gain, was an individual feature. Skouras rose sharply and at the week's close was 3 points net higher. Sales were about 600 shares. Pedigo-Weber was unchanged at 35. International Shoe sold lower.

St. Louis Public Service was up fractionally and Consolidated Lead was down a fraction.

Bond sales were larger than in previous week.

Foreign Exchange

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The Evening Post, in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review, says:

"The market moved in an irregular manner during this week, the most importance being attached to the steady decline of sterling, which has now reached a level almost 2 cents below the high record made two months ago. Incidentally the difference between cables and demand widened to ½ cent to the pound. This movement, largely due to sales of exchange against continued heavy shipments of coal from Southern ports to replace the shortage in England during the miners' strike, carried sterling cables down at $4.85⅛, a loss of ¾ for the week and comparing with the high of $4.86¾ made on June 29.

"French exchange was in steady demand, offerings even at advances being of small amounts and it required only moderate buying to carry the rate for the French check up from 2.81 to 2.89. Belgian followed French closely, but little interest is shown in Belgian exchange in this market. Italian exchange was firm for a time, but became heavy toward the end of the week, when it was down about five points from the range prevailing a week ago. Dutch and Swiss exchange moved in harmony with sterling. Swiss francs and guilders both sagged steadily, but the slow movement carried rates to new low levels for recent trading. Spanish exchange had another downward movement, peseta checks ranging from 15.42 to 15.30 during the week. The only important movement in Scandinavians was a decline of seven points in Norwegian crowns.

"Interest was created in German exchange by statements that restrictions in Berlin had been removed and reference to this action were followed by some outside buying, on which reichsmarks, which had long been held at 23.81, moved up to slightly above 23.84.

"Silver exchanges, which were weak in the preceding part of the month, developed a strong tone. Hongkong moved up more than a cent. Almost as great a gain was made in exchange on Shanghai. Canadian exchange developed strength in yesterday's trading, when it rose to 100.18. Japanese showed a reactionary tendency after the strength of the two preceding weeks."

Trading in foreign exchanges was again on a small scale today and fluctuations held within narrow limits. Further rise in rates on Paris was the only feature of the day. Sterling held steady and changes in other parts of the list were insignificant.

PROBABLE EXCHANGE DIFFICULTIES ON WAY

Special Wireless to New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Belief grows that a coal settlement will be reached soon, but some anxiety exists lest the Government in its desire for peace will consent to some disguised form of subsidy. This anxiety is based not merely on the consideration for the burden to taxpayers, but on the belief that Great Britain will never obtain the full efforts and efficiency of employers and workers alike along the lines of state interference and subsidies. Meanwhile the coal situation undoubtedly aggravates the autumn exchange problems. Great Britain paid cash for most of the coal imported consequently the worst effects of our imports are over. Our exports of coal, however, have always been financed on three months credit and as exports were nil in the last quarter, payments to us in the ensuing quarter will be nil as against some millions a year ago.

Moreover, even if an early trade revival is made possible, it is more probable that imports of raw materials will first be stimulated, thus increasing our exchange difficulties. Hence the general disposition is to expect firmer money rates next autumn, though doubtless efforts will be made to avoid the rise in the Bank of England discount rate.

This view gets further emphasis from the likelihood of large loan activities beginning next month and the London Times is uttering warnings against our lending in excess of savings. It emphasizes also the fact that our central gold stock is $10,000,000 less than a year ago. Nevertheless, many are disposed to advocate a bolder policy of lending abroad, especially to overseas dominions.

The impending Empire conference in London and the economic outlook favor the likelihood of a clearer recognition of the advantages of solidifying the Empire's financial and commercial resources wherever possible. It is believed that some amicable agreement may be reached before long concerning the claims of the Grand Trunk Pacific Railway bondholders.

Skill of New Governor of Bank of France.

Steadiness of the French franc is believed to be due more to skillful handling on the situation by the Bank of France than to any specific Government program for stabilization. The present governor of the Bank of France is regarded as an exceptionally able man with sound banking and currency views.

The impending autumn conference of the League of Nations is awaited with some anxiety, the feeling in London generally being that Germany must be represented on the General Council and it is believed that responsible financial interests on both sides of the Atlantic will take that view.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Cotton goods sales for the week in the gray goods division ran ahead of the average output, most of the trading being in print cloths and sheetings. Very good business has been booked on fine printed wash goods for spring with a few of the large printers. Yarns were firmer. Burlaps held about steady with trading moderate. Raw silk advanced 10c to 15c a pound.

Silk goods markets were quieter than usual, due in part to the number of mills that close for the holiday week and lack of normal activity in fall cutting circles.

Men's wear continued in fair demand for fancy worsteds and some of the new spring woolens, while the garment strike continued to restrict the movement of goods in cutting channels where cloakings and suitings are handled.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Stock prices were whirled upward in rapid fashion during the early part of today's market, but fell back sharply just before the final gong on a large volume of week-end realizing. Closing quotations, however, disclosed a fair sprinkling of net gains ranging from 1 to 5 points. Trading was rather heavy for a midsummer half holiday session, the day's sales aggregating 782,800 shares.

Bullish operations were stimulated by the publication of an optimistic statement by William C. Durant, prominent operator, just prior to his departure for Europe. The encouraging tone of weekly trade reviews and publication of additional excellent July railroad earnings statements also helped to create a more cheerful feeling among professional traders despite the prospects of a dull week before Labor day.

United States Steel common again resumed the leadership of the market, showing an extreme gain of over 2 points to 151⅝, but slipping back a point from that figure on the late wave of profit-taking. Total sales in that issue ran close to 80,000 shares, or about one-tenth of the day's entire volume of business, one block of 10,000 shares changing hands at 151.

[illegible] were again active in a number of specialties, new peak prices for the year, or longer, being attained by Amalgamated Leather common and preferred; Brunswick Terminal, Consolidated Cigar, General Asphalt common and preferred; Owens Bottle, [illegible] and White Sewing Machine. Continental Baking issues were in vigorous demand touching their highest prices since admitted to trading on the "big board." Columbia Gas, International Telephone, National Cloak & Suit and Sloss-Sheffield Steel also recorded substantial gains.

The average of 20 leading railroad issues mounted to the highest level since 1916. Atchison was again the leader in that group, touching a new high record for all time at 153, but closing a point below that figure.

Foreign exchanges held steady in quiet trading. Demand sterling ruled unchanged around $4.84 11-16. French francs were slightly firmer around 2.88 cents on reports that the French Government's stabilization scheme contemplated a parity around the 3-cent level. Changes in other continental rates were nominal.

TRADE MORE ACTIVE ON CURB PAST WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Trading conditions and volume on the New York Curb Exchange in today's short session followed a course similar to that which prevailed during the greater part of the week. Quiet strength was shown in the more prominent issues and a more settled tone was evidenced in the absence of the wide fluctuations that occurred in some issues in the last few days. General Motors new was in fair demand at the start, crossing 143 and Foundation Co. foreign made a further gain of about a point. Fox Theaters displayed strength at the higher levels reached on the recent movement. Warner Brothers Pictures opened fractionally lower at 49 and then declined to 47½.

Several issues were well supported at the year's high quotations. Among these were Todd Shipyard and National Baking and new peak figures for the year were established in Glen Alden and Lehigh Valley Coal sales.

American Gas and Associated Gas were in early demand at moderate advances. Oil shares were quiet with most strength shown in Carib Syndicate and Cities Service, the latter moving to a new high.

Trading during the past week was more active than had been noted in a long period, violent advances occurring in a number of stocks and a long list made new high records on vigorous upward movements. These displays of activity and strength, however, did not extend to the oil group which for some reason continued to move within narrow limits. Various issues failing to respond to special favorable developments.

The widest movement was in Warner Brothers Pictures as a direct result of reports about an innovation in the motion picture operations. Stanley Co. of America made a new high record and National Casket did likewise.

Utilities were irregular but most of those issues were in supply at declines.

There were heavy dealings in bonds during the week, some of them making wide movements. The foreign bonds were strong with the exception of a reaction in United Steel Works issues after those documents had a sharp advance.

Weekly Metal Review

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Aug 28.—The volume of buying in the steel market during the past week has kept up well, and it is generally believed that the August average will compare favorably with July. There was a falling off in some descriptions, but gains in others, and in the aggregate the sales were little changed. Foreign offers were quite liberal at the seaboard, but Japan was credited with buying tin plate in considerable volume, and prices were well maintained.

Pig iron was in fair demand and prices were steady.

Copper has remained quiet. Consumers are supposed to have covered the bulk of their nearby requirements and buyers generally have been holding off, probably in anticipation of lower prices should there be no improvement in trade abroad. Further price shading has been reported, and it is believed have been smaller sales as low as 14¼c for electrolytic. Producing interests, however, show little disposition to press for business, and rather a steadier tone developed late in the week, with sellers holding for 14¼c.

Tin maintained a firm undertone, owing to expectations of bullish month-end statistics and the fact that production is hardly keeping pace with consumption. There was good buying of prompt and nearby deliveries by consumers early in the week but recent demand came principally from dealers.

Lead held steady, owing to the healthy statistical position, with demand improved on account of the better tone abroad.

Zinc was irregular, following fluctuations in London. Recessions attracted increased demand from consumers, however, and a steadier tone prevailed at the close.

Antimony was easier, owing to increased offerings of nearby supplies.

Lead was quoted at $8.90 per 100 pounds in St. Louis Saturday. Zinc was weak at $7.45 per 100 pounds.

LUQUE HOLDS BROOKLYN TO THREE HITS

New York Errors Help League Leaders Offsetting Good Pitching by Greenfield — Meadows Credited With Victory.

Once again both Pittsburg and Cincinnati won their games yesterday the Pirates nosing out the Giants, 8-7, and the Reds blanking the Robins, 7-0, behind excellent pitching by Adolfo Luque.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—Pittsburg made a clean sweep of the three-game series with New York and retained its National League lead when the champions got an 8 to 7 victory in the final game here this afternoon.

Kent Greenfield was a victim of bad breaks and should have had a shutout victory. Errors caused his downfall. Yde, who opposed the youngster at the start, lost control and had to retire, but his successor, Meadows, could not hold the lead and with his mates behind was removed for a pinch hitter, whereupon the Pirates tied up the score and went out in front.

The Giants made a bid in the ninth to tie up the score, but Morrison yielded only two runs, one shy of the necessary count.

Even in defeat Greenfield showed in fine form. Never was there a Pirate rally but that there were errors mixed up. The first four runs should never have been chalked up and with one out in the eighth, Cohen erred to start the Pirate rally. Then Tyson, playing deep, misjudged Barnhart's rap and although he ran in fast, he could not reach the ball and it went for a double.

Earl Smith was the hero with a timely single to put the Pirates out in front. Glenn Wright, out of the game three weeks, batted in a pinch to drive in what proved to be the winning run. Wright will be in the double-header in St. Louis tomorrow.

HOT & OFF THE BAT

By John E. Wray

"What's the Odds?"

WITH Dempsey and Tunney figuratively draping the ropes with one another's limp forms, in pre-battle oratory at least, fans are wondering just what ring authorities think about the respective chances of the men in their coming title fight, Sept. 23.

Two days ago Wall Street was betting 8 to 5 that the champion would retain his title.

St. Louis, however, as usual, differs from Wall Street. Professional betting odds today in local "big stores" were:

Dempsey, 2 to 5.
Tunney, 2 to 1.

In other words, the customer who bets on Dempsey must put up $5 to win $2, while the backer of Tunney can win $2 for every dollar that he wagers if his man is successful.

Few Certainties in Sport.

THIS betting would indicate that Tunney had about the same chance to beat Dempsey that Chief Uncas has to trim Crusader.

But certainties in the sport world are scarcer than a seat at Sportsman's Park will be this afternoon, if the sun shines. Heavyweight championship history records a succession of beaten favorites because the public "strings with the champion" until he finishes face down.

One of Dempsey's earlier victims—a fighter whose defeat lent the present champion some early luster—was Gunboat Smith. The Gunner gave Dempsey the onceover, Friday, and came away DISAPPOINTED.

Dempsey is six weeks from being able to make a punching bag out of Tunney or anybody else. The champion was probably pulling his punches," the Gunner commented, "or else is not hitting as well as usual.

"Dempsey needs some big, tough men in his camp, men he can whale away at without pulling his blows."

The Gunner changed his mind about Dempsey yesterday. After Smith himself had exchanged a few passes with the champion, the Gunner was almost ready

40 TO 1 SHOT VICTOR IN HOPEFUL

Lord Chaucer Wins $60,000 Two-Year-Old Stake at Saratoga in Thrilling Finish.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SARATOGA, N. Y., Aug. 28.—In a sensational finish in which the first three horses came to the wire noses apart, Lord Chaucer, in the colors of Mrs. R. E. Baker, admirably ridden by Coltiletti and quoted at 40 to 1 in the betting, scored by the narrow margin of a nose, thereby gaining first money in the Hopeful Stakes, richest event run in the East this year. It was a great finish and it brought the 30,000 fans to their feet in a big, noisy demonstration. The victor deserved all the applause that greeted him on his return to the scales.

Harry Payne Whitney's Termagant, on whom the Whitney stable placed their faith, was second, with Scapa Flow, W. M. Jefford's standard bearer third, and Pantella, coupled with Termagant fourth. Lord Chaucer was neglected in the betting. The winner received $48,850. He ran the distance in 1:19 4-5 over a good track. Termagant got $6000 and Scapa Flow $3000.

Widener Horses Disappoint.

The surprise of the race was the poor performance of the Widener entry. Chance Shot and Kiev failed to show any speed.

The result of the race might have been different had McAtee, on Termagant, attended to his own business. He was eager to beat Scapa Flow, and he took him to the outside, and they both finished in the middle of the track. There was considerable bumping between the two, with the result that both suffered.

The start was good and the field went away in a line. Termagant, Pantella, Scapa Flow and Chance Shot were first away but the latter immediately dropped back. Termagant and Scapa Flow and Pantella were head and head for the entire trip, while Lord Chaucer was away back. The three were head and head but at the turn into the stretch McAtee on Termagant went wide, carrying Scapa Flow with him. Then the real bumping began. While all this was going on, Coltiletti was riding Lord Chaucer hard. The colt responded with a great burst of speed and closi

Walter Hagen Wins Western Open Golf Title

Scores Record Breaking 279—Sarazen and Cooper Tie for Second.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 28.—Walter Hagen of Pasadena, Fla. today won the Western open golf championship at Highland Golf Club with a record score of 279 strokes, outstripping all other competitors by several strokes.

He virtually clinched the title in the morning round by scoring a marvelous 66, which equalled the course record set by Harry Cooper, a few minutes before. He finished with a par 70, nine strokes ahead of Cooper and Gene Sarazen who had led the field during the first rounds.

Starts With an Ordinary Round.

Hagen did not start propitiously on the 72-hole journey, the first 18-hole stage costing him 75 strokes, or five above par for the 6559-yard links.

Hagen's 36-hole score of 143 left him tied for third place and a number of stars were bunched near the top, making the contest look like a thriller among the 71 survivors of the elimination rounds. Hagen took away some close-finish prospects, however, by scoring a remarkable 66 this morning.

Seldom, if ever, has a golfer scored 31 for nine holes of a full-sized golf links, but Hagen did it today, bagging four birdies, and not going above par on any of the other holes; and he barely missed an eight-foot putt for a birdie three on the eighteenth for a 30. Once Hagen shot 33-29—62 on a Florida course, but it was far easier than the Highland links.

This marvelous round put Hagen four strokes in the lead, as Sarazen took 72 for a total of 213, while Harry Cooper, despite his spectacular 66, had a total of 215. When Sarazen took 39 for the first half of the final round and Hagen got to the last quarter post in par 35, all but the most conservative granted him the title barring a fatal accident, especially as Cooper took 38 for the same nine.

Bobby Jones Greets Hagen.

This left Hagen with a lead of six strokes over his nearest competitor, Cooper, with only nine holes to play and, without extending himself he breezed home in another par 35 for the record total of 279. His score was seven strokes better than the record for the national open held by Chick Evans, who played with Hagen today surrounded by a large gallery.

Cardinals Get Catcher Snyder From New York

Receiver Who Started Major League Career Here Comes via Waivers.

By the Associated Press.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 28.—With the announcement that Catcher Frank Snyder had been released to the St. Louis Cardinals by waivers, Manager John J. McGraw said that the Giants have purchased Catcher Al Devormer from the Louisville club of the American Association.

Cash and players were given for Devormer, who was once with the Yankees, coming to the American League from the Pacific Coast League.

Snyder went from Springfield to the Cardinals in 1914, remaining with St. Louis until traded to the Giants in 1919. A native of San Antonio, Tex., Snyder is 33 years of age.

President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals was pleased with the news when the Post-Dispatch informed him that Snyder had been obtained from the Giants. He said the club had filed a claim for Snyder but that he had not been officially notified that he had been awarded to St. Louis.

"O'Farrell is a wonderful catcher, but a veteran like Snyder will assist us in the drive down the stretch," said Breadon.

"Vick and Warwick lack the experience necessary in a hot race like this one."

Breadon said when he is officially notified that Snyder has been awarded to the Cardinals he will discuss with Manager Hornsby the player to be released to hold the Cardinal roster within the prescribed limit of 25 players. There are now 25 men on the club and it will be necessary to drop one of them to make room for Snyder. After Sept. 1 the player limit is lifted.

Browns Still Can Tie for Pennant

LOSING to the Athletics in Philadelphia yesterday, the Browns surrendered their mathematical chance to capture the 1926 American League championship. They now are 27 games behind the leading New York Yankees, with only 27 more games to play.

However, should the Browns win all of their remaining games and the Yankees lose 27 straight contests, the teams would be tied.

MOUNTAINEERS' SQUAD TO BEGIN FOOTBALL PRACTICE TOMORROW

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Aug. 28.—The vanguard of the 1926 West Virginia University football squad, which goes into three weeks' preliminary training at Jackson Mills State camp on Monday, arrived here today in the persons of Ted and Butch Nixon, freshman stars of last year, who are counted on heavily by Head Coach Ira Rodgers this season.

Forty-nine men who are eligible for the varsity will assemble Monday, along with between 40 and 50 freshmen candidates. The Mountaineers play a most difficult schedule this year, embracing Pittsburg, Washington and Jefferson, Missouri, Georgetown, Georgia Tech, Wesleyan, Washington and Lee, David Elkins, Centre and Allegheny.

Hornsby's Men, After Two Defeats, Show Real Fight by Overcoming Three-Run Handicap Early in Game—Thevenow Has a Big Day at the Bat—First Place Within Reach Today.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Bob O'Farrell's triple to left center with the bases filled was the big punch in a six-run third inning, which enabled the Cardinals to defeat the Phillies, 9 to 3 in the third and final game of the series yesterday afternoon, thereby keeping pace with the league-leading Pirates, who nosed out the Giants and the second-place Cincinnati Reds, who held their one-game margin over St. Louis by trouncing the poor Brooklyn Dodgers.

In victory, the Cardinals once more looked the part of pennant contenders. Facing a three-run deficit after the second inning, they might have been excused if they had felt downhearted after their two successive defeats at the hands of the eighth-place Fletchermen. But the Cardinals had talked over these two defeats. They realized that they were still in the race for the flag and they bent to their tasks and overcame that lead, regaining their poise in the field, despite a discouraging second inning in which all the breaks were against them.

Important Games Today.

Pittsburg's Pirates, the champions of the baseball universe and leaders in the race for this year's league flag, will call at Sportsman's Park this afternoon and despite their two defeats in three games with the Phillies, the Cardinals are within striking distance in good strategic position if they can defeat the Bucanneers.

The standing of the three contenders follows:

	W.	L.	Pct.
Pittsburg	70	49	.588
Cincinnati	73	52	.584
Cardinals	72	53	.576

Two victories over the Pirates this afternoon will enable the Cardinals to pass the Pittsburg club and meantime the Cincinnati Reds will be playing the Chicago Cubs, a team with an excellent pitching staff spurred on by the chance of finishing in the money.

Reinhart Gains Triumph.

Arthur Reinhart pitched the Cardinals to victory in the final with the Phils, and except in the second inning, when the visitors profited by several breaks, bunching four of their eight hits, the St. Louis left-hander doled out the hostile hits one to an inning.

Still in the Hunt.

One was out in the second inning, when Wrightstone singled to center and stopped at second on Henline's one-bagger to middle field. Huber then hit a tremendous line drive to center and it appeared that Douthit was going to haul down the drive, but his attempt at a back-handed catch failed, and the ball rolled to the center-field fence for a double, scoring Wrightstone. Henline stopped at third, but when Thevenow's relay to the plate bounced past O'Farrell, Butch also scored and Huber reached third.

Bentley followed with a little fly to right field, which Bottomley or Hornsby should have caught. But Southworth raced in and bluffed the infielders away from the ball and then failed by half a step to reach it, the ball plunking against the turf at his feet and skidding away for a double, Huber scoring. Reinhart tossed out Pierce, but those three runs loomed large on the score board, which by this time was telling the news of Pittsburg's victory over the Giants and Cincinnati's triumph over the Dodgers.

Thevenow, the Hitting Kid.

Tommy Thevenow, whose unfortunate throw helped the Phils to get the three runs, atoned for his bad toss by starting the third inning with a line double to left. Reinhart sent a grounder to Wrightstone, and the second baseman, whose brilliant play in previous games helped to turn back the Cardinals, finally faltered and fumbled, and Thevenow reached third and Reinhart first.

Holm lined straight to Sand, and the runners scurried back to their bases, but Southworth bounced a single over second and Thevenow scored and Reinhart advanced to the middle sack.

Then fortune smiled on the Cardinals. Pierce lost his control and lost it so completely and so suddenly that before a Phillie pitcher

Alexander and Rhem to Oppose Pirates: Wright to Be at Short

MANAGER HORNSBY will pin the Cardinal pennant hopes on Grover Alexander and the strong-armed Flint Rhem in the double-header with the league-leading Pirates this afternoon. Kremer and Songer are expected to pitch for the world's champions.

Pittsburg will present its strongest front. Word from there is that Glenn Wright, star shortstop, will return to the game after an absence of three weeks. In a previous game here Wright hit two home runs, one over the left-field fence and one into the pavilion in right field.

Everything broke wrong for the Cardinals in the second inning yesterday, when the Phils scored three runs. With one out Wrightstone singled to center and stopped at second on Henline's single. Huber lined deep to center and Douthit barely reached the ball, but missed his attempt at a back-handed catch and the ball rolled to the fence for a double. Wrightstone scored and when Thevenow took Douthit's relay and threw to the plate the ball bounced past O'Farrell. Henline also scored and Huber reached third. Bentley then sent a pop fly to right, the ball falling just out of Southworth's reach. It went for a double, scoring Huber.

President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals said the actions of the Knothole Gang Friday made him think seriously of discontinuing the practice of admitting the boys. When Holm made an error Friday the boys yelled "We want Blades." "The club goes to a great expense to entertain the boys and it hurts to see demonstrations of such poor sportsmanship," said Breadon.

Lester Bell ran back for a clever catch of Bentley's foul to end the Phillies fourth.

The big third inning gave the fans their first chance in a month to sit back and enjoy the game without the fear of sudden disaster.

Thevenow atoned for his second inning-error by shooting a double down the left-field line to start the big frame. Reinhart then reached first on Wrightstone's fumble. Southworth's single and four walks tied the score and O'Farrell then cleared the sacks with a triple to left center, a mighty wallop. Baecht then relieved Pierce.

Baecht is a sturdy youth from Illinois. He reported at Sportsman's Park this spring and asked Hornsby for a job. He didn't look good to Rog, who gave him the gate.

There were three Cardinal sacrifices in the sixth inning in which the seventh St. Louis run was nudged over the plate. Thevenow beat out a bunt to Huber for a starter. Reinhart laid down a sacrifice bunt but was safe when Bentley dropped Baecht's good throw. Holm then sacrificed and Thevenow scored on Southworth's long sacrifice fly to Nixon.

Mokan made a clever running catch of Hornsby's short fly to end the sixth.

Too bad the Cardinals didn't

FRANCE BEATS JAPAN TO BECOME CHALLENGER OF U. S. FOR TENNIS TITLE

Harada's Dazzling Duel With Cochet Is Feature; La Costa Clinches Series

Oriental Player Takes Match 6-1, 6-3, 0-6, 6-4, Driving With Great Power and Accuracy; Tawara Easily Overwhelmed.

By the Associated Press.

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Aug. 28.—France is America's challenger for the Davis Cup, historic tennis trophy, for the second straight year, but only after an unexpectedly close and sensational battle with Japan in the inter-zone series that closed today in the West Side club's stadium.

Rene LaCoste, the sombre-visaged French stylist, settled the issue when he overwhelmed Tsumio Tawara, 6—1, 6—3, 6—2, but the victorious team was held to an even break for the day when Takeichi Harada, ace of the Japanese forces, smashed his way to a spectacular victory over Henri Cochet, 6—1, 6—3, 0—6, 6—4.

It was through no fault of Harada's that France won the series by a final score of three matches to two. The sturdy Japanese accounted for both of his country's victories, his defeat of Cochet today being even more convincing than that he registered over LaCoste on Thursday and establishing him as the outstanding star of competition.

Doubles Really Decided.

As it turned out the decisive triumph yesterday by France's doubles combination, Cochet and Jacques Brugnon, was the real deciding factor, although the final outcome also emphasized the importance of Cochet's last minute comeback to victory over Tawara in the first singles match.

Although Le Coste's triumph over Tawara this afternoon clinched the series, the French stylist's victory gained through his superior steadiness and all-court work, was colorless by comparison with the exciting combat between Cochet and Harada.

The closing encounter sparkled with exchanges in which the hard and accurate driving of the Japanese prevailed over the brilliant but erratic volleying of the Frenchman. Making sensational recoveries and capitalizing his fast service, Harada kept up a raking fire to the corners that baffled Cochet, except in the third set, and kept the Frenchman from making many sorties to the net.

Challenge Round To Start Sept. 9 At Philadelphia

FOREST HILLS, Aug. 28.

WITH France's right to oppose America in the Davis Cup challenge round settled, America's Big Four tennis team will this week have its final tuning up.

The members of the team are William T. Tilden, Bill Johnston, Vincent Richards and Norris Williams. All will play in the national doubles at Longwood this week.

The first Davis Cup matches are set for Sept. 9 at the Germantown Cricket Club, Philadelphia. Sept. 9.

The national singles start Sept. 13 at Forest Hills.

Cochet's attack twice soared to such spectacular heights that it seemed he would stage another uphill fight to victory, but Harada each time had the reserve to stem his rival's rush. The first of Cochet's spurts carried through the third set, which he won at love with the loss of only five points. The second occurred in the final set, when the Frenchman rallied to capture four games in a row after dropping the first five. In the tenth and deciding game Harada was three times within a stroke of victory before he grasped it.

The matches were witnessed by the largest gallery of the season, 3000 spectators, including Gloria Swanson and her husband, the Marquis de la Falaise de la Coudray, and Edward W. Browning and his young wife, Frances "Peaches" Browning, who attracted at times almost as much attention as the players.

In an exhibition contest Jacques Brugnon and Jean Borotra, colorful French star, who arrived here yesterday, defeated Zenzo Shimizu, Japanese captain, and Teizo Toba, substitute player, 6—4, 6—1.

Favorites Win Opening Women's Tennis Matches

Three Former Champions to Get in Action Today; 16 Contests Decided.

By DAVISON OBEAR.

Sixteen singles matches were decided in the annual municipal tennis championship for women players on the Forest Park courts yesterday afternoon. A number of second-round contests are on the schedule of play today. First-round matches in the women's doubles event will start this afternoon.

Mrs. Melicent Baehr, Lottie Hagemeyer, Virginia Baer, three former municipal champions, advanced through byes and defaults. They will get into action, however, today with opponents in the second round. All of the other favorites in the tournament won matches during the day.

Only one of the 16 singles matches went to three sets. Verona Lindemann, the O'Fallon Park girl star, went down to defeat before Josie Moellenboeck of the Oakland Tennis Club, in a three-set encounter. The score was 8—6, 5—7, 6—4. Miss Moellenboeck was a trifle too steady for her younger opponent.

Mrs. Ann Lindemann, runner-up in the 1925 tournament, reached the second round by defeating Lucieann Descholdt, the Fairground player, in straight sets, 6—1, 6—2. Fay Pasternak, one of the seeded players, advanced by eliminating Florence Hartman of St. Louis Park, 6—0, 6—0.

Sadie Hartz, another St. Louis Park entrant, furnished a surprise by winning a straight-set victory from Adaline Weber of Fairground Park in a final-round match yesterday. More consistent playing gave Miss Hartz the match. The score was 6—1, 6—3. This is the first time in several seasons that St. Louis Park has been represented in the municipal championship.

Several interesting matches are on the program for today. In one of them, Lottie Hagemeyer will oppose Serita Osborne, while in another Zita Doyle meets Ann Kaiman. Fay Pasternak and Alice Brokaw, two Forest Park players, will meet in another second-round match, which should result in a close score.

Yesterday's Results.

First Round—Mrs. Melicent Baehr won by default from the Carondelet entry; Hortense Doyle, Forest, defeated Valaia Holtz, Fairgrounds, 6—3, 6—4; Ruth Minnucianne, Oakland, defeated Jeanne Springmeyer, Fairgrounds, 6—1, 6—2; Fay Pasternak, Forest, defeated Florence Hartman, St. Louis, 6—0, 6—0; Alice Brokaw, Forest, defeated Evelyn Emenlorf, O'Fallon, 6—4, 6—4; Hope Stanton, O'Fallon, won by default from the Sublette entry; Johanna Bauman, O'Fallon, defeated Betty Murphy, Fairground, 6—2, 6—3.

Zita Doyle, Forest, defeated Rose Brachtesende, Fairgrounds, 6—0, 6—1; Ann Kaimann, O'Fallon, defeated Rachel Priwer, Forest, 6—1, 6—0; Sadie Hartz, St. Louis, defeated Adaline Weber, Fairgrounds, 6—1, 6—3; Josie Moellenboeck, Oakland, defeated Verona Lindemann, O'Fallon, 8—6, 5—7, 6—4; Dorothy Berkemeyer, Fairgrounds, defeated Ida Pearline, Forest, 6—3, 8—6.

Mrs. O. Ballmann, O'Fallon, defeated Mary Lawless, Forest, 6—1, 6—1; Mrs. Ann Lindemann, O'Fallon, defeated Luciann Descholdt, Fairgrounds, 6—1, 6—2; Delphine Rauch, Fairgrounds, defeated Frances Bulkley, Forest, 6—3, 6—3; Marie Krenning, Forest, defeated Genevieve Walsh, Fairgrounds, 6—2, 6—4.

Today's Pairings.

Second Round—Fay Pasternak vs. Alice Brokaw, Mrs. A. Stahl vs. Hope Stanton, Louis Rauch vs. Johanna Baumann, Zita Doyle vs. Ann Kaiman, Virginia Baer vs. Sadie Holtz, Josie Moellenboeck vs. Dorothy Berkemeyer, Delphine Rauch vs. Marie Krenning, Serita Osborne vs. Lottie Hagemeyer.

Women's Western Golf Title Is Won By Dorothy Page

She Defeats Mrs. O. S. Hall Three Up and Two to Play.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Miss Dorothy Page, a sturdy 17-year-old, golden-haired girl from Maple Bluff, Madison, Wis., is the new champion of the women's Western Golf Association. She drove her way to a 3 and 2 victory over Mrs. O. S. Hill of Meadow Lake, Kansas City, in the 36-hole final round at Olympia Fields today, with a superior long game, which gave her the advantage when the Missouri Valley champion suffered six bad breaks on the greens for as many hop-outs or rim stops.

Miss Page got four tee shots of over 300 yards, half a dozen between 250 and 300 yards, and regularly outdrove her opponent with both firsts and seconds, but the short game of the Kansas City woman was even more remarkable and a fair break with Dame Luck would have given her the match.

She got the only eagle of the day, a three on the 420-yard afternoon fourteenth, by pitching 40 feet from the sand beyond the green into the cup. It was her second spectacular shot, for on the morning fifth she dropped a 40-footer from the long grass at the right of the green.

Miss Page played the 34 holes in 161 and Mrs. Hill in 162.

The new champion is a daughter of a professor of law in the University of Wisconsin. She was junor champion of the association two years ago and won the driving and putting contests in the present tournament.

The runner-up won the hearts of the large gallery with her plucky game and sensational rallies, has been Kansas City and Missouri Valley champion for the last two years, and was second medalist in the qualifying round Monday with a par 83. She took up the game in the summer of 1923.

Mrs. Dave Gaut of Memphis, Tenn., won the championship consolation flight final, 1 up, over Mrs. Lee Mida of Butterfield, Chicago, the medalist of the qualifying round whose 80 Monday established a new course record for women.

Tilden Defeats Chapin For Casino Tennis Title

Big Bill Drops First Set, 3-6, but Dominates Match Thereafter — Chapin Wearies From Terrific Pace— Champion Plays 14 Sets in a Day.

By the Associated Press.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 28.—Playing through 14 sets of gruelling tennis, William T. Tilden today notched two more tournament victories on the handle of his versatile racquet with triumphs in the singles and doubles finals of the annual Newport invitation event.

Seldom has the national title holder been called on to display more of skill and stamina than he did today after turning aside the challenge of Alfred H. Chapin Jr., youthful Springfield (Mass.) player, in the concluding round of the singles, 3—6, 6—4, 6—0, 8—6.

Coming back to the court from a brief rest, with Chapin as his partner, the indefatigable Philadelphia master fought through more than five consecutive hours of play in the semifinals and finals of the doubles, defeating first Hugh G. M. Kelleher and Francis T. Hunter by 6—3, 3—6, 6—3, 6—8, 6—1, and then closing with a five-set conquest of William M. Johnston and Dr. George King at 6—4, 6—2, 4—6, 6—8, 6—4.

Chapin Surprises Gallery.

After the first set the champion dominated the play from the back court and was never apparently in danger.

Despite this fact, Chapin, whose game showed improvement, astounded a gallery of almost 4000 spectators with sensational recoveries and unusually brilliant volleying.

Chapin's stroking was effective to an even more pronounced degree in the doubles, however. He shared equally with Tilden in the honors of the day. The target of attack in both matches, the young New England player covered the court with such remarkable agility and fought back with such unyielding determination, no weakness could be uncovered in the play of the visitors.

For two sets in the doubles final Dr. King was so uncertain of his volleys that it appeared as if Tilden and his partner would close with a straight set victory. But after the second set he joined with Johnston in a speculator uphill fight which almost upset the national titleholder and his protege.

Breaks Against Dr. King.

All but one of the breaks through service by the winning team were scored against Dr. King, Johnston giving one of his best exhibitions of the tournament. His forehead drives raced through the opposing court with old-time stride.

After opening with a lead of 5—1 in the final set, Tilden and Chapin began to show the effects of their long test. Erratic play cost them the next three games, and for a time it began to appear as if the little Californian and his New York partner might turn the tide.

With only one game separating the teams, Tilden took service and calling upon his terrific cannon ball delivery in the semidarkess battered down the opposition with three aces and a finishing volley of Dr. King's soft return on the final shot.

Walks From St. Louis To Cincinnati, Wins Marathon Swim

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CINCINNATI, O., Aug. 28.

AFTER walking nearly the entire distance from St. Louis, Mo., to Cincinnati, to compete in the twelfth annual Ohio River Marathon race held here today, Lysle Hubbard, of the Toledo Y. M. C. A., won the event and established a new record.

Hubbard covered the course in 47.26 minutes, lowering a record established by Charters Montgomery of Pittsburg in 1920, by 5.79 minutes. The exact distance of the race is four miles and 80 yards.

Hubbard gained an early start on his 35 rivals and maintained a comfortable lead throughout. The swimmer had been in St. Louis to perform in an eshibition meet.

Harry Laufer, of the local Y. M. C. A., twice winner of the marathon and world champion swimmer, was forced out of the race by an attack of cramps, after going half the distance.

Roy Burghaus, of St. Louis, got off to a good start, but was soon outdistanced by the others.

Yankees Lose to Tigers 8-4; Lead Cut to 7 Games

Hoyt and Shawkey Fail; Ruth Hits Fortieth Home Run; 30,000 See Contest.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28. — The Yankees weer outbatted two to one by the Detroit Tigers today, and lost an important game in the race after they had tied it up for Hoyt, who proved again an unlucky starting pitcher. With the Indians winning two in Boston, the Yankee lead for the pennant was cut to seven games. The score was 8 to 4.

Detroit started out in the lead, for Hoyt was easy to hit, while Wells was effective. In the fourth he passed Ruth, however, and Meusel hit a home run into the left-field stands. A single by Lazzeri drove Wells out, and the Yanks tied the score on Combs' triple.

The Yankees could not hold the Tigers, however. Shawkey was ineffective as a relief man, while Stoner did well except for Ruth's fortieth home run of the year which came in the eighth. It was close to the foul line, and Bassler kicked so hard about it that he was banished from the game.

Fothergill made five hits, in as many trips to the plate, two of them two-baggers. Four of the hits were made after two strikes had been called. The attendance was more than 30,000.

WALTER HAGEN WITH RECORD BREAKING 279 WINS WESTERN OPEN

Among those who greeted the champion as he concluded his record performance was Bobby Jones of Atlanta, holder of all the premier titles except this one, and the British amateur, and who arrived to play with Hagen, Sarazen, Smith and Cooper in a benefit match for the James Whitcomb Riley memorial hospital.

"That's the sort of golf Hagen played last winter when he defeated me," said Bobby, "and when he is right he can lick anyone."

"The same to you," retorted Hagen, and they shook hands.

Hagen's performances somewhat dimmed the glory of Harry Cooper's scintillating work in scoring his 66, which first broke the course record. Cooper took two strokes off par on each nine, ensnaring seven birdies, including three two's, but went one over par on three holes.

Another spectacular round was played by Al Espinosa of Chicago, who got a 68, but his bad start of 79 raised his total to 291, despite a par 70 for the second circuit.

While there was no pressure on Hagen for first place, there was a considerable contest for second place, which was shared by Cooper and Sarazen with 288. MacDonald Smith was only one stroke behind to finish in fourth place, while Jock Hutchison got fifth place with 290. Al Espinosa, John Farrell, Harry Hampton and Al Watrous were tied for next position with 291, while tenth place was shared at 292 by Laurie Ayton, Charley Hall and Emmett French.

Chick Evans led the amateurs with 295. Eddie Held of St. Louis, and Densmore Shute of Huntington, W. Va., were next with 299. Joe Turnesa of New York, who was runner-up to Bobby Jones in the national open, never got started and accumulated 302 strokes, his last round costing him 79.

Ernie Nevers, former Leland-Stanford football star, who beat the Mackmen in St. Louis, started for Sisler. He did well until the sixth. Then a flock of Philadelphia base hits, coupled with Brownie errors, sent four local runners across the plate. That finished Nevers and it finished the Browns for the day.

Sisler's men could do nothing with Ehmke with runners on the paths. The lone run came in the seventh on singles by Schang and Robertson, Gerber's infield out and a sacrifice fly by Pinchhitter Williams.

Just how poorly the Browns fared at bat is seen by the following. In the first, Rice, Sisler and Miller singled to fill the bases, but McManus hit into a double play. In the second, Schang and Robertson opened with safeties, but there were no runs. Thus five singles were wasted in the first two innings.

From then on there was little chance for Sisler's men until the seventh, when they broke through. In the eighth, two hits and a pass filled the corners, but Robertson could not help, while in the ninth, two were on the runways when Sisler struck out to end the round.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—The Browns made 11 hits off Howard Ehmke today, but those smashes netted only one run and as a result, Sisler's men were defeated for the third time in the series by the Athletics, 5 to 1. It was Ehmke's sixth successive triumph.

Last Call for Entries in All-America Team Contest; Competition Closes Tuesday

Prizes Will Total $200 in Cash; Hundreds of Readers All Over Middle West Have Submitted Their Ideas on Mythical Club.

Rules Governing Babe Ruth All-America Team Contest

Any reader who mails to the Post-Dispatch between Aug. 1 and Aug. 31 a team of 10 players (except Ruth himself) in the National and American Leagues for the season of 1926, with a letter of not more than 200 words, explaining the selection of the team, is eligible to compete.

The reader whose team—two pitchers and eight men in the other positions—is the same or nearest Ruth's selection and is accompanied by the best letter giving reasons for the choice, will be declared the winner.

The contest winner must not only select the same 10 players as Ruth, but must assign them to the same 10 positions on the team.

Players may be placed in positions other than their regular places provided they have played in those places in at least one regular league game in 1926.

Players must be selected on the basis of their playing in 1926, NOT on records made in previous seasons.

In case no team is exactly the same as that selected by Babe Ruth, the one nearest will be named on the merit of his accompanying explanation.

Violation of any rule set forth here will render selections unavailable.

The winning contestant will receive $100 in cash and the runner-up and third best selections and letters $50 apiece.

In addition, Babe Ruth himself offers an autographed bat to the winner of the first prize. The bat will also be inscribed with the winner's name.

Last call for entries in the Babe Ruth All-America team contest! Tuesday is the final day on which selections may be filed and they must be in the Post-Dispatch office by midnight of that day.

As has been announced, a total of $200 in cash trophies will be awarded the winners, $100 to the first prize winner, and $50 each to runner-up and third best.

Babe Ruth, with choices of sport editors at his elbow, will pick and announce his 1926 choice in about a week and the winners will be named after the judges have gone over the hundreds of letters which have come in from all over St. Louis and the surrounding country.

Dempsey Shows Better Against Sparring Mates

Kurp Hits Floor Head First When Champion Socks Him on the Chin.

By the Associated Press.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 28.—Jack Dempsey breezed through a workout equivalent to 10 rounds today before a crowd of 2500 at the greyhound racetrack. The champion looked better than he did yesterday, chiefly because he could extend himself against new sparring material.

There were no casualties, however, with the exception of Joe Kurp, Shamokin, Pa., light-heavyweight, who hit the floor head first when Dempsey nailed him on the chin with a left hook.

Dempsey devoted most of his attention to shooting over a right to counter a left jab.

Gunboat Smith, the veteran California heavyweight, whose proud distinction is that he hit Dempsey the hardest blow the champion ever received, put on the gloves with Dempsey to get a "little expert knowledge" of his condition. Smith visited the camp in the role of a newspaper correspondent.

Gunboat Smith Almost Out.

After the exhausted Gunner recovered his breath, he asserted the only man capable of lickin' Dempsey is one who has mastered a one-two punch and could hit on equal terms with the champion.

Charley Anderson, a 220-pound Negro, from Chicago, who joined the camp today, faced Dempsey for two rounds, giving him a good workout.

Frankie Carpenter, of Freeport, N. Y., a light-heavyweight, also stepped two rounds. Once he nailed Jack with a left hook to the chin that brought gasps from the crowd. Little Kid Herman, Los Angeles middleweight, made a tremendous hit by his willingness to swap punches with the champion. Herman has the speed of a lightweight and forced Jack to travel at a terrific clip.

New sparring material will start rolling into camp early next week. Martin Burke of New Orleans probably will arive Monday. Burke has worked with Dempsey before.

CAPE GIRARDEAU GRID WORK TO START SEPT. 6

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CAPE GIRARDEAU, Mo., Aug. 28.—Red and Black gridders of State Teachers' College will again go into pre-college training about Sept. 6 to get in trim for games coming shortly after the opening of the fall term, Sept. 14. Players will probably be taken to some resort near here where a field may be had for daily scrimmages, and where sessions in football technique can be held under tutelage of Coach F. J. Courleux, college mentor.

Prospects appear favorable for a strong eleven for the Indians this season.

for the ambulance, as the session ended.

He now pronounces Jack unbeatable except by a fighter who can hit as hard as Dempsey, using a one-two punch!

There isn't any such animal.

A Serious Mistake.

SOME boxers think that by 30 days of sparring against partners whom they necessarily favor and that gently, can make up for three years of idleness. It may; there always remains a big doubt, until they have been tested.

Boxing against partners is an altogether different thing from fighting a man who means business.

Against most partners the fighter is forced to go easy with his men and is handicapped by the fact that few training mates are good enough to extend him. Partners who are not capable of giving their principals a real fight and who are not willing to stand up and trade punches are not helping him much.

A boxer is not ready to fight until he has proved against a real man his ability to TAKE as well as give.

Dempsey has only one real partner in his camp—Big Bill Tate. If they would match Bill and Jack in a few six-round fights in private, Dempsey would very soon find out whether he is Dempsey or just the fine-looking memory of one.

Bill CAN fight.

Real Sportsmanship.

UNSELFISHNESS, the basis of real sportsmanship, is not always at its best in the sport world, even among amateurs. But now and then someone bobs into view to revive hope that all is still well with our athletic ideals. Here's one:

The 10-mile swim was about to start from the Chain of Rocks. One of the rules provided that each contestant must be accompanied by a boat and attendants.

At the eleventh hour, Clarence Ross of New York, two-time winner of the 10-mile championship, was without a boat.

At this point Charles Nelson, an entry from the Lorelei pool, came to the rescue and surrendered his boat. Nelson had a good chance to figure in the contest. But rather than see the champion left out he agreed to sacrifice himself.

Real stuff that.

But as the starter had the athletes lined up for the jump off, with Nelson out, a motor boat chugged up and volunteered to help.

Nelson was able to compete. He finished eleventh in the big field. For his self-sacrifice he is entered on the list of "real sports."

Money and the Amateur.

PROBABLY the purest amateur in the tennis world is Little Bill Johnston, No. 2 ranking player and member of the Davis cup team. Whenever a question of amateur status comes up in the tennis world, Little Bill's name is absent.

Tilden, Richards, the Kinseys, even Miss Wills, all have been criticised for writing or other forms of so-called capitalization of their tennis fame.

But does anyone recall a word about Little Bill?

Yet even Little Bill now is waving in the breeze. Yesterday he was quoted as saying that if offered $100,000 to turn "pro" he would have to think it over.

"One hundred thousand dollars is a lot of money," Little Bill is quoted as saying.

It is. And if Mr. Pyle is able to offer such money for his professionalization scheme, it seems certain that we will be minus our veteran Davis Cup team next year.

When Little Bill wavers, all the rest of the world must have fallen!

High Price of Horseflesh.

TODAY in France they are discussing the sale to Count de Rivaud for 600,000 francs, of Balmoral, a yearling by Sardanapale out of La Bahia.

That sounds like a lot of money; but in terms of American exchange today it is only $17,130. This compares but poorly with the $50,000 paid last year for the yearling daughter of Mon o' War, War Feathers,

In reality, however, the purchasing power of the franc is much greater in France than the rate of exchange indicates, and the actual value of Balmoral might range as high as $50,000.

But in any case it looks like a fine time to buy hoss flesh in France. And they grow real ones there, as witness Epinard.

There and Here.

IN England we read of professionals and amateurs, "players" and "gentlemen," Lords and laymen, playing side by side on the all-English cricket team, that has just defeated Australia.

In this country it would be impossible to bring about such a situation as mingling professionals and amateurs together in any form of contest or even exhibition, where gate receipts are charged.

It is time to revise our rules concerning the amateur since, in spots today, the interpretations are little short of idiotic. A rule that invites constant cheating and secret evasion should be abandoned, since it not only fails of its purpose, but promotes hypocrisy.

Some Game.

WE also read in connection with the cricket final that two batsmen retained their innings for 3½ hours, scoring over 400 runs!

Cricket matches last days, and their innings last hours. Imagine a world's series fan going home in the third inning, returning to the park the next day for the fourth and fifth innings, and perhaps seeing the windup of the game on the third day.

In England they say cricket is little different from our own world's series which, after all, takes seven days to decide on occasion.

The fact that the series is made up of seven separate and complete units may help some, but doesn't altogether absolve us.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—McCarthy's Bruins continue to go forward marching on. They made it seven in a row today and a clean sweep of the series by stemming the Braves, 5 to 3, before a handsome holiday crowd.

Bob Osborn toiled for the Cubs and turned quite a commendable job, granting the bean chewers eight hits.

In the fourth the Cubs overcame a two run lead held by the Braves when they counted three times.

Singles by Stephenson, Wilson and Grimm figured in the attack. Two more cut counters went over in the fifth when Wilson's triple scored Adams and Grimm's smack registered Hack.

The Braves combined a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly for their last score in the eighth.

DUQUOIN TEAM MAY CLINCH PENNANT IN HARD ROADS LEAGUE

Special to the Post-Dispatch

DUQUOIN, Ill., Aug. 28.—Baseball games that may clinch the Hard Roads League pennant for the Duquoin Merchants will be staged here in a double-header Sunday afternoon when the locals meet Harrisburg.

The Duquoin team has won 14 straight games in the second half with no defeats and a double victory tomorrow will virtually win the pennant for them.

Six-Run Inning Gives Cards Victory Over Phillies, 9 to 3

could warm up to relieve him, Bottomley walked, filling the bases and Bell and Douthit also walked, forcing the tying runs over the plate.

A Hit That WAS a Hit.

By this time there was activity in the Fletcher bull pen, and O'Farrell began to swish his bat. It was time for a blow, for runs one at a time were produced too slowly. He fouled one into the stand and then he connected squarely and the ball sailed far into left center and Bottomley, Bell and Douthit scampered over the plate and O'Farrell reached third. Now that it was too late, Baecht relieved Pierce and Thevenow, up for the second time, flied to Nixon to end the inning.

Just to show that they could hit right-handers as well as left-handers, the Cardinals did some plain and fancy work at the plate to score three runs off Baecht.

In the sixth, Thevenow bunted safely and Reinhart sacrificing, was safe when Bentley dropped Baecht's throw. Holm sacrificed and Thevenow scored on Southworth's long fly to Nixon.

In the seventh Bottomley opened with a single to right, advanced on Bell's sacrifice and after Douthit had walked and O'Farrell flied to Nixon, Thevenow tripled to right center, scoring Bottomley and Douthit.

Except for that throw of Thevenow's the Cardinals played an errorless game and that error was a technical rather than an actual one. His throw was straight to the plate, but the ball took a bad bounce and the scoring rules forced the official scorer to charge Tommy with a boot.

A crowd of 10,000 attended the game and cheered the Cardinals in victory. In fairness to the spectators it must be said that even when the Phils took that second inning lead there were no jeers or boohs such as marred the Friday game. There were just a few short sports on hand Friday.

Levsen Pitches Double Victory For Cleveland

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BOSTON, Aug. 28.—Emil Levsen, young right-hander for the Cleveland Indians, pitched and won both games against the Red Sox this afternoon. His iron man stunt gave the Indians a four straight cleanup of the series and means that the losing streak of the Sox has reached nine.

In the first game the Sox only made four hits and three of them were infield rollers. In the second inning a sacrifice fly, combined with the scratches, gave the Sox their one run of the game.

Emil, whose home is Nevada, Ia., held the Fohls to four hits again in the second game and the single Boston run was the result of Rosenthal's single, Regan's double and an infield out in the seventh. Levsen gave one pass in the first game and only two in the second game.

In the eighth inning of the first game George Burns equaled the big league record of 59 doubles in a season held by Tris Speaker, by cracking a two-base hit off Russell to the left-field embankment.

The scores were 6—1 and 5—1.

have a six-run inning in their bat bag in the first game with the Phils. The cellar dwellers folded up after the Cards' big third frame.

Another great day for Tommy Thevenow. The kid hit a double to start the third, singled to start the sixth and tripled in the seventh to drive in two runs.

Stutz, who finished the game at short for the Phils, is a comedian. He handles a bat with the skill of a juggler, twirling it and bouncing it on the plate. The fans enjoyed his act.

Comedy is fine, when the home team is winning.

Hornsby went hitless in five trips to the plate, but he contributed the brightest fielding feature of the game when he raced far to his left, scooped up Wrightstone's grounder with his gloved hand and threw him out in the ninth inning.

The grand-stand gates will be opened at 9 o'clock this morning to accommodate the early birds.

Venders of hot dogs had a world series workout, preparing for the line of fans expected to form this morning to buy tickets for rush seats in the pavilion, bleachers and grand stand. About 12,000 unreserved seats in the upper deck of the grand stand will be available, 5000 in the bleachers and 3200 in the pavilion.

Finley to Defend Title.

By the Associated Press.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Aug. 28.—Jimmy Finley has started promoters bidding for him to fight for the junior welterweight championship, which he was ordered to defend immediately by Judge Hedding, guardian of the title belt.

SOUTHWEST MISSOURI TENNIS TOURNEY SEPT. 4

The Southwest Missouri tennis championship for men's singles and doubles will be played on the courts of the Springfield Tennis Club, Springfield, Mo., Sept. 4, 5 and 6. The tournament is sanctioned by the United States Lawn Tennis Association.

Invitations have been mailed to all of the leading tennis clubs in the Missouri Valley and it is believed that the number of entries this year will far exceed that of other years. NOR'EASTER IS VICTOR IN 2-YEAR-OLD STAKE AT LINCOLN FIELDS

DR. WASHINGTON, FAVORITE, IS LENGTH BEHIND

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LINCOLN FIELDS, CRETE, Ill., Aug. 28.—Nor'easter, a colt by North Star III-Bunchy, demonstrated his speed and fitness this afternoon when he carried the J. N. Camden colors to victory in the $5000 Dearborn Stakes at six furlongs, beating a field of four crack 2-year-old colts. A length back of the winner at the wind-up, Dr. Washington, odds-on favorite, took place money, finishing a head in advance of H. G. Bedwell's Lamorte. General Hideman, making his initial appearance here, was a poor fourth while Swizzle was last.

The stake was the headliner of probably the best offering of the entire Lincoln Field meeting and its running was witnessed by a crowd that jammed every available bit of space in the spacious grandstand and overflowed on the lawns. The attendance was easily the banner one of the season, while the clubhouse balconies were packed with a notable crowd of society folks.

Small Field, Perfect Start.

The field that faced Starter Hamilton in the Dearborn was the smallest of any in any stake decided thus far at the meeting. The defection of Prevail, Khalifa and Lovely Manners left only five to contest the issue, but the comparatively small field did not detract from the interest in the outcome of the race.

Dr. Washington, on the strength of his track record-breaking performance of a few days ago, was installed the public choice, but he failed to live up to what was expected of him. Nor'easter was second choice and his backers drew down a fairly good price. The victory of Nor'easter marked his third successive triumph in as many starts at the meeting. He went the six furlongs in 1:12. The value to the winner was $4940.

The start of the race was perfect and Nor'easter, with J. Burke up, shot to the front without delay and, leading by a comfortable margin, withstood successively the challenges of Gen. Haldeman and Lamorte in the first three-quarters of the journey and stood off the closing onslaught of Dr. Washington.

The latter was slow to get going and at the three-eighths pole was racing second to last. In the stretch, however, he came with quickening strides under pressure from his rider and gaining steadily got to within a length of Nor'easter.

Gen. Haldeman stopped after a vain attempt to overhaul the leader and was beaten off before the final stage was reached.

SPARTA SOCCER ELEVEN COMING TO AMERICA

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—The smartest soccer eleven in Continental Europe is coming to the United States to play the elevens of this country. It is the team of the Spartas of Prague who have the fair right to think they are world champions if a victory over Uruguay is worth anything. They thrashed the Uruguay's after the South Americans won the Olympics.

This team of visiting Czechoslovakians has defeated the Hakoahs about a dozen times in matches in Europe. Folk thought the Hakoahs were pretty good when they visited the United States and some of their players have been taken on by our teams to play soccer this coming fall and winter season but the Hakoahs concede they never have been the equals of the Czechs.

There are two reasons why the Czechs are coming to this country and the first is that their countrymen who reside in the United States are mighty proud of them. They want to show off their home grown athletes. The second is that the Sparta Club of Chicago, which is an off-shoot of the Spartas of Prague, has undertaken to back the trip.

Lord Chaucer worked his way up through the field, responded gamely to punishment through stretch, run and got up in the final strides. Termagant, away rapidly set a fast pace through the going but bothered Scapa Flow repeatedly in the running and out-lasted him at end. Latter quick to begin, moved up stoutly on the outside, overcame repeated bumping and held on well. Pantella, on the inside all the way, showed a good effort. Candy Queen followed the pace for the first part, but faltered in the deepest going, but came again at end. Adomagne showed a good effort. Chance Shot and Kiev could never get to the eaders.

Odds: Lord Chaucer place 15 to 1, show 8 to 1; Termakant place 7 to 10 show 1 to 3; Scapa Flow show 4 to 5.

THE HUNTING - - CALL - -

By ALEC MERMOD

IT will soon be time to begin to get your bird dog in condition for the opening of the season, Nov. 10.

Just as soon as we have a bit of cool weather dogs should be given a little work each day, gradually increasing the exercise till all surplus fat is worked off, and their feet have toughened. This last is very important, for no dog can do good work with sore or tender feet.

Too many hunters neglect getting their dogs in condition before the season opens. They just pile into the field on opening day with a dog that has had no exercise and with tender feet. Of course, the dog is eager to go and soon wears himself out and is then condemned by the owner. This first day will set your dog back several weeks and he is apt to suffer permanently from his efforts while out of condition. After working your dog a few days examine his feet carefully, and if you notice any cracks in the pads bathe his feet in hot water, then cover liberally with mentholatum, castor oil or vaseline.

A few days before the season opens apply pine tar to each foot by softening the tar to the consistency of strained honey. Place this in a dish or pan and hold each foot in the tar for about a minute, then apply talcum powder or ordinary dust from a dirt road, but be sure that there is no sand in this dust.

Know Your Dogs.

THIS treatment should be repeated two or three times during the season, and you will never have a sore-footed dog.

We all know that the city is a mighty poor place to keep a dog and most of us board our dogs out in the country during the summer months, which is as it should be; but the trouble is we don't get out to see our dogs often enough to keep up the acquaintance and our dogs are apt to forget who's boss.

Every dog owner should visit his dog frequently during the summer and beginning with Oct. 1 he should get out three times a week to give his dog a run.

By doing this your dog will renew his loyalty and on the opening day will start into his work, hunting birds instead of looking around for the man who has cared for him all summer.

Quail Likely to Be Plentiful.

FROM all indications and reports, the quail crop is coming along in a very satisfactory manner, but the hunter who is accustomed to do his shooting on high ground is not going to find many birds unless we have a heavy rainfall between now and the opening date. The long dry spell has dried up most of the small spring branches, which has caused the birds to move to the bottom lands bordering the larger streams, and these birds are apt to remain in the bottoms unless driven out by high water.

The hatching season was ideal and very few of the nests were abandoned on account of weather conditions, so we won't have many covies of "peepers" or "blue heads," though the birds will not be as large or as strong as usual on account of the backward spring, which delayed nesting.

Bottomley Leads N. L. in Doubles With a 35 Total

Cardinals Are Third in Team Hitting With Season's Mark of .285.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Turning into the stretch in the National League pennant race, the three clubs fighting for the lead were similarly bunched in their hitting. On the fringes stand the Chicago Cubs, while Philadelphia, bringing up the rear as games go, ranks right up with the Cubs in batting.

Cincinnati leads the slugging, figures including Wednesday's games show, with an average of .294, the Pirates being second with one of .289, and St. Louis next, with a .285 figure. The Phillies and Cubs tied at .283 after a week of general recession in the batting of the teams and leading individuals.

The Cardinals remained rather prominent in both struggles for the leadership with but one among the top 10 hitters, while Cincinnati placed three, including the league-leading Hargrave, and Pittsburg four. Rogers Hornsby and Southworth, however, figured with averages just out of the list to complement Lester Bell's labors for St. Louis.

Bottomley Leads in Doubles.

Extra-base hitting was not so good. Hack Wilson of Chicago still leads in homers, but increased his previous total of 18 but one, while Jimmy Bottomley of the Cards failed to add to his 16. Bottomley devoted his attention to doubles, three of them putting him in the lead with 35, while his nearest rival, Heathcote of the Cubs, stuck at 32. Curt Walker of the Reds added two three-baggers for a leading season's collection of 20.

Cuyler of the Pirates stole two sacks for a new leading total of 28, but watched the phenomenal climb of Sparky Adams of the Cubs. The Chicago second sacker got away with seven for a total of 21 as Kiki's chief challenger.

Rhem of the Cardinals won his sixteenth game, his defeats remaining at five, while Mays lost his tenth for the Reds without adding to his 16 victories. Kremer of Pittsburg won his fourteenth and his record stood at four losing starts. Charley Root of Chicago chalked up his one hundred and eleventh strikeout, and Dazzy Vance his one hundred and first.

Fothergill Holding Own.

The hitting in the American League is currently about as warm as the battle for the rights to enter to the world's series. Just now the batting of the teams as such and the leading batsmen generally is at the bottom of a slump first indicated some time ago when the Yankees dropped from the .300 class.

The Yanks lead at the end of the week closed with Wednesday's games was with a .296 average, Washington rating second with .293, Detroit third with .291, one of the two team increases during the period, and Chicago fourth with a .289 percentage.

Fothergill of the Tygers is holding his own after a slump, figures released today giving him a .388 average. Babe Ruth, incidentally failing to add to his total of 39 circuit clouts, during the past week dropped from .382 to .378 and Burns of the Indians fared a little less poorly than Manush of Detroit to tie in third and fourth places with percentages of .368.

Doubles for Burns.

Long distance slugging is conspicuous by absence, Ruth's failure to get in the proximity of the bleachers being echoed among the middle-distance hitters. Burns has added one to his doubles for a collection of 57. Two triples, however, ran the string of Gehrig of the Yankees to 18.

Hunnefield of Chicago added his twenty-second stolen base during the past week, while his teammate Johnny Mostil also added one and went into a tie with the 20 of E. Rice of the Senators.

Among the twirlers, George Uhle moved into the fore last week by his twentieth and twenty-first victories, with the season's defeats remaining at eight. Pennock of New York did not lose any, but added only one to his previous total of 18 games won. Lefty Grove of the Athletics pitched his 176th strikeout.

Leading league hitters: Fothergill, Detroit, .388; Ruth, New York, .378; Burns, Cleveland, .368; Manush, Detroit, .368; Goslin of Washington, .362; Hailmann, Detroit, .357; Collins of Chicago, .347; E. Rice, Washington, .346; Mostil, Chicago, .345; Falk of Chicago, .345.

SHELLS,

MEET TODAY IN FEATURE GAME OF PROGRAM

Others to Survive Are Laclede Council, Pants, Engineers, Laclede Gas, Schenbergs and Sunlights

The municipal eliminations have reached the quarter-final stage as a result of yesterday's games and eight of the best squads in the city will battle today in the public parks.

All four games give promise of being hotly contested struggles. Perhaps the largest crowd will go to see the Shells and Tower Camps play in Forest Park on Grounds No. 12. These teams are two of the strongest in the muny organization and it is a toss-up which will win.

Yesterday the Shells defeated Bray-Hambuechen, 11 to 4 and Tower Camp scored the only shutout of the day, Heitz being the victim, 10—0. Abkemeier allowed the losers only five hits but it is doubtful if he will be able to start against the Shells.

Next in prominence comes the Pants-Laclede Council contest at Concordia Park. Hasmer, Pants hurler, struck out 13 batters in setting down the Southwest Business Men yesterday and he, and Stanze allowed only six hits, winning 10 to 3.

Laclede Council kept in the running by beating the Maplewood Browns of the Employed Boys' League, 8-4. Laclede has a fast team and is one of the dark horses in the race.

The Schenbergs, defending champions, are expected to defeat Sunlight, in spite of the fact that the latter walked over the Union Electric Office team yesterday, 23 to 2, making 22 hits. In beating the Office team of the Wagner Electric League, 9 to 2, the champions finished under wraps and gave three pitchers a workout. They were A. and F. Georgen and Teserau, who allowed the losers only five hits.

Carondelet Park's feature will be the Laclede Gas-Engineers' game. The Engineers yesterday had an easy time trimming the Holy Innocents, 19 to 3, and Laclede defeated St. Andrews, 14 to 4, due chiefly to sloppy defensive work on the part of the losers.

All games today start at 2:30 p. m.

The municipal eliminations have reached the quarter-final stage as a result of yesterday's games and eight of the best squads in the city will battle today in the public parks.

All four games give promise of being hotly contested struggles. Perhaps the largest crowd will go to see the Shells and Tower Camps play in Forest Park on Grounds No. 12. These teams are two of the strongest in the muny organization and it is a toss-up which will win.

Yesterday the Shells defeated Bray-Hambuechen, 11 to 4 and Tower Camp scored the only shutout of the day, Heitz being the victim, 10—0. Abkemeier allowed the losers only five hits but it is doubtful if he will be able to start against the Shells.

Next in prominence comes the Pants-Laclede Council contest at Concordia Park. Hasmer, Pants hurler, struck out 13 batters in setting down the Southwest Business Men yesterday and he and Stanze allowed only six hits, winning 10 to 3.

Laclede Council kept in the running by beating the Maplewood Browns of the Employed Boys' League, 8-4. Laclede has a fast team and is one of the dark horses in the race.

The Schenbergs, defending champions, are expected to defeat Sunlight, in spite of the fact that the latter walked over the Union Electric Office team yesterday, 23 to 2, making 22 hits. In beating the Office team of the Wagner Electric League, 9 to 2, the champions finished under wraps and gave three pitchers a workout. They were A. and F. Georgen and Teserau, who allowed the losers only five hits.

Carondelet Park's feature will be the Laclede Gas-Engineers' game. The Engineers yesterday had an easy time trimming the Holy Innocents, 19 to 3, and Laclede defeated St. Andrews, 14 to 4, due chiefly to sloppy defensive work on the part of the losers.

All games today start at 2:30 p. m.

They Don't Come Too Big for Sherdel, The Cardinals' Great Little Pitcher

Southpaw Persevered and Worked Until Now He Has Varied Assortment of "Stuff."

NO. 4.—OUR PENNANT CHASING CARDS
(Bill Sherdel.)

THIS is the fourth of a series of intimate character sketches of the men in Cardinal uniform who are trying to give St. Louis its first pennant since 1888. Others will appear from time to time.

WHEN the Cardinals were playing at their old park at Spring and Natural Bridge, the proud and haughty Giants came to town one day to romp over the second division St. Louis club. As the Giants were making merry during preliminary practice a slender youth, small enough and young enough to be a mascot, compared to the strapping Giants, was making his way quietly from the clubhouse to the Cardinal dugout.

The playful Giants noticed the boy and one of them called to him, in a patronizing tone:

"Where are you going, my little man, and who are you?"

This was supposed to be very witty and jocose and the Giants, enjoying their own jokes as nobody else could, laughed and chuckled right heartily.

The slender youth looked over the group of Giants and replied:

"I'm going over here to warm up. I'm the guy who's going to trim you big stiffs this afternoon."

It was Wee William.

It was William Henry Sherdel talking, and he did pitch that afternoon and he did beat "the big stiffs."

Sherdel has gained weight since then. He now weighs 160 and is five feet ten inches tall. He was born in Hanover, Pa., Aug. 15, 1896, and after being with Milwaukee for two years, joined the Cardinals in 1918. He is a self-made pitcher. He had nothing but courage and pitching brains when he joined the Cardinals. He worked and worked and worked, always practicing this delivery and that delivery. Now he has a good fast ball, a tantalizing slow ball, the [illegible] crossfire in the league, and usually his control is excellent.

Last year he led the Cardinal staff with 15 victories and six defeats and was among the league leaders.

Third Baptist Trims Wagoner

In Junior Division, One-Armed Pitcher, 17, Fans 13 Batters.

Wagoner Place was defeated by Third Baptist in the Sunday School League, 4 to 3. As a result of the victory the two teams will meet again next Saturday to decide the championship of the league. Third Baptist rallied late in the game to win, scoring all of their runs after the sixth inning.

In the Junior Division contest, Oliver Paul, the 17-year-old one-armed pitcher, turned in a remarkable game, allowing only four hits, striking out 13 batters. Paul also showed his power at bat, getting a home run, a triple and a two-bagger. The box scores of the two games are as follows:

Look Out, Bottomley!

OAKLAND, Cal., Aug. 28.—Cameron Best, husky 20-year-old first baseman of the Taft (Cal.) baseball club, a semiprofessional organization, was signed here today with the St. Louis Cardinals. Billy Hollander, scout for the Cardinals, said that Best had been instructed to report next spring.

Too Much Razz Reason for Frisch And Carey Cases

Bully-Ragging Causes Players to Lose Self-Respect, Says One of Them.

By George Chadwick.

(Copyright, 1926.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Baseball, by all the signs and barometer readings, is on the threshold of a new order. The baseball player of a new day is asserting himself. He is a high brow compared with the lights of the old timer, and he has decided to draw the line against abuse and tongue lashings.

That is what is behind the projected baseball players' union, or protective organization, whatever it may be called.

To make the point clear, it might be called the Baseball Players' Union Against the Noble Art of Being Cussed Out. The notice about it leaked out prematurely. Nowadays players—these kids of the newer generation and maybe some of the older men—thought they would have it all fixed up among themselves before they published it to the world.

Someone Talked.

Maybe the "rebellion" of a few Pittsburg players and the case of Frank Frisch, captain of the New York Giants, and a lot of other gabble that has been going on, induced someone to talk too soon.

That someone did talk too soon is certain and it is not denied that the old union of the genteel stars of the diamond is on its way again—and if there should happen to be a rival league stirring up baseball, which isn't out of the question, the players might make more turmoil in the sport.

Tough language is at the bottom of it. There isn't a doubt of that. Steve McKeever, part owner of the Brooklyn club, has had it put straight to him by his players. True he hasn't much of a team, judged from playing success, and maybe the players wouldn't bring a King's ransom if they were sent to the block, but they aren't deaf like an anchored jackass and they have drawn the line on words.

The player's viewpoint was given to the writer by one of their number who cannot be named because of his present relationship to a professional club. His is a voice from the ranks. He said:

"The ballplayer of today, the player who has come to the fore since the World War, the player who is less often of the sand lots, the player who goes from college to the professional game and the player who goes more often from the town team or who represents the village star, cannot be a success under the old type of slave-driving, abusive, hard-stuff manager."

Too Much Razzing.

"There are managers in all leagues who can tear to pieces the self-respect of any player who is signed to a contract, and especially of those players who have not been reared in an atmosphere of crab, carp and cuss.

"Frank Frisch left the Giants. Some say he deserted. Well, then he did. I say he left because his nerves were unstrung by the assertiveness of John McGraw. He heard newspaper men [illegible]y it began last spring. A manager of much success is McGraw, but maybe not always a wise judge of human nature. The old type of ball player he could drive, push and shove into a championship. But those old birds had no nerves. When they were told to take a man's leg off at second base, they took it off. When they were told they were thicker in the dome than printers' ink and so dumb they couldn't talk with their fingers, they accepted it and probably played ball the harder and better.

"McGraw hasn't been picking up those kind of players in recent years. His is still the master mind but he hasn't remodeled his ways to suit his men. The reaction had to come.

"Fred Clarke, an old-time manager, who played baseball to win on the rough basis that baseball was played in his day blurted out that the Pirates needed a center fielder in place of Max Carey. Players who overheard him appealed to their field boss to take a vote on whether Clarke's presence on the bench was desirable for the success of the team. I'm not making any plea for those players. But in the days when Fred Clarke was manager, there were no players on his team who would have appealed to anybody to take a vote about anything. They'd swallow whole what he said and like it."

"Do you think that ball players of the old school played better ball rasped or not, than the players today?" the writer asked.

"I do. But why? Maybe they are not managing them right now. Maybe they are too high strung to be driven. Maybe you could lead them where you can't drive them. A ball player has got to have nerve to be a star—but if he gets nerves, he is gone."

Little World Series Opening Today Likely to Be Battle Of Right-Handed Pitchers

Haines Has Been Most Effective Cardinal Hurler Against Pittsburg; Southpaws of Both Clubs Have Had Little Luck Against Each Other.

By Herman Wecke.

Statistics for the season indicate that it will be right-handers against right-handers on the hurling hill when St. Louis' second "little world's series" in four years will be started at Sportsman's Park today.

This series, between the Cardinals and world's champ[illegible] burg Pirates, will have [illegible] tant bearing on the final outcome of the National League race. It will go a long way towards deciding whether the Cardinals are to remain in the hunt for the title. It also can make or break the Pirates.

The last "little world's series" for St. Louis, back in the late September days of 1922, proved disastrous for St. Louis. It came when the New York Yankees grabbed two out of three from the Browns in a "croocial" series. In the coming "croocial" set five battles will be waged.

Teams Evenly Matched.

On the season's play the nines are evenly matched. Each side has won seven contests, with one battle ending in a 3 to 3 tie in nine rounds. There is very little difference in the figures.

For instance, the Cardinals in the 15 games have scored 66 runs, an average of 4.4 a game; the Pirates have counted 72 or 4.8. The hits total 125 or 8.3 a tilt for the Cardinals and 121 or 8.1 for the Pirates. The Cardinals have made 19 errors and the Pirates 20 in batting each other in previous clashes.

Figures further prove that left-handed pitchers have had little luck against the rival clubs. Wee Willie Sherdel, one of Hornsby's aces, has not hurled an inning against the Corsairs; Art Reinhart has pitched but 2 1-3, but in that time has been found for two runs and six hits, while in the two rounds Hallahan has worked against the world's champions, two hits and two runs have been made off his slants.

Songer and Yde Pounded.

Pittsburg's two southpaws—Songer and Yde—have fared no better. Songer is credited with one victory and one defeat, but in 15 innings he has been on the hurling hill against the Cards he has been found for nine runs and 14 hits. Yde in three frames has yielded four run and three safeties. Songer has never gone the full route.

From this it can readily be seen that the opening statement "that it will be a series of right-handers against right-handers" will not go far wrong.

And what have the rival northpaws done in games in which the two contenders have met?

Haines Is Cards' Best.

Season's records would indicate that Jess Haines is Hornsby's "best bet." Big Jess is credited with two victories and no defeats. In 20 rounds, the Pirates have scored only five runs, an average of a little better than two a game. Victor Keen, if he were in his early-season form, would come next. Keen stopped the Corsairs his first two outs, with three runs in 19 innings, but since then has been bumped. Flint Rhem, though he owns a 2-1 record while facing the Corsairs, has been bumped for 24 runs in 35 rounds. Grover Alexander has faced the Pirates but once. And he twirled a whale of a game although defeated.

McKechnie's main hurling reliances probably will be Ray Kremer, Lee Meadows and Vic Aldridge. All have been bumped rather freely in previous contests. Kremer has been scored upon 13 times in 28 innings; Aldridge, 11 in 24, and Meadows 15 in 23.

Meadows, one of the league's leading flingers, has started against the Cardinals four times and has been pounded off the hill twice. Aldridge and Kremer also have been routed by Hornsby's pennant chasers. Johnny Morrison, recently reinstated by McKechnie, has held the Cardinals to four runs in 14 innings, but he nevertheless has been defeated twice. Morrison on both occasions had the misfortune of opposing Keen, when the former Cub was at his best. Sheehan, McKechnie's only other tried right-hander, has been hit hard by the Cardinals.

Manager Hornsby has been the star slugger in the clashes between the two clubs. Hornsby was not in the last series in which the world's champions made off with three out of four. But prior to that he belted the Corsair hurlers for an average of .476 with 20 hits in 42 trips to the plate. Bottomley has hit .271 and Bell .241 against Pittsburg flingers. Billy Southworth in seven clashes has an average of but .160.

The new captain, Pie Traynor, and Hazen Cuyler are the heavy gunners of the enemy. Traynor has swatted .372 against Hornsby's pitchers and Cuyler .281.

"IT'S NO FIGHT UNTIL I GET HURT," SAYS DEMPSEY

'THEN I CAN'T STOP HITTING,' SAYS CHAMPION

In All Previous Fights Jack Has Displayed His Best Effort Only After Being "Stung."

By Jack Dempsey,

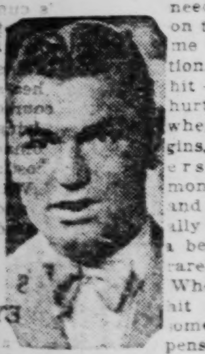
(Copyright, 1926.)

As Told to a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NOW that Gene Tunney has decided to take my advice about socking me with right-handers, almost to the exclusion of all else, I want to give him a little more advice—like this:

"When you do nail me with your right, be sure—for your own best interests—that you win a championship with the final shot or two. Otherwise you may get mussed up.

A fight really isn't a fight with me—until I'm banged and hurt. I need a good sock on the chin to get me into real action. Having been hit — and really hurt—well, that's when the fun begins, the customers get their monty's worth—and my rival usually gets himself a beating that he rarely forgets.



Jack Dempsey

Whenever I'm hit and hurt, something happens to me. I just can't explain it unless it's to say that I forget it's just a boxing duel and I get to feeling that I'm going to be crushed unless I crush the man before me. I probably do throw caution and skill and whatever science I have to the four winds—but I haven't ever lost my marksmanship, nor my hitting power in such moments.

Ask Luis Firpo—he knows. He hit me with a right-hander—nearly ripped my head off. I guess I became a wilder man than the wild bull himself after that. I didn't do any further boxing, nor sidestepping. It was kill or get killed then. And before it was all over Firpo came to realize that bumping me on the whiskers with a right hand has its handicaps for the man who does the bumping.

Signal for Some Real Hitting.

CARPENTIER and I were going along nice and refined like for a while—and then Georges connected. Bang! Bang! Bang! He rattled his right off my chin. Right then and there Georges wrote "finis" on his ambitions to be heavyweight champion of the world. For those blows caused me to see red; they made me forget all else except that I had been hit and the man who hit me must be annihilated.

Gunboat Smith hit me with a right-hander years ago, when I was little more than a beginner. It was his fight up to that time. After that—well, the crowd insisted that from the time the old haymaker landed until the four-round quarrel was over, I knocked the Gunner all around the ring and won the fight by a mile.

I slapped Jess Willard around rather lustily in the first round. Then I decided to rest up a bit. Near the end of the second, Jess spoiled my plans. He cracked me with a right hander. Right then and there I stopped resting. I tore into him in the third and when that round was over Jess was so badly used up he had to quit.

Why Gibbons Stayed Limit.

TOM GIBBONS never hit me a solid right-hand punch—none that hurt. And so Tom got off rather easy. Bill Brennan poked me quite a few lefts in the early part of our fighting. Along in the tenth or eleventh he cracked me—and hurt me—with a right hander. Right then the old flame, or whatever it is that burns within me when I'm hurt blazed up. I went after Bill—and I knocked him out.

Yes, practically all of them have pushed out right handers and nailed me flush on the chin. But what happened afterward—and where are they now?

Tunney says he's going to crack me with a right—and then some more rights. Chances are that he will. But when he does, the customers can begin packing up preparatory to going home.

Just now I'm not attempting any exact prediction as to how long that fight is going to last. But I'll make the prophecy that it isn't to last very long after Tunney hits my whiskers and gets me a little fretful. None of my fights ever have lasted very long after I was smacked—and this one isn't going to be any exception.

Most Colorful Woman Player Is Lili de Alvarez, Says Helen Wills

Ever-Changing Attitudes of Spanish Girl Make Her Particularly Entertaining, California Girl Writes.

By Helen Wills.

WITH the tennis season at its height, and the tournaments in full swing, most attention is being centered on the top notch players. But they do not have entirely all of the interest, for we read about junior players who are taking part in meetings of their own. The one just finished at Chicago, the national junior singles for boys, the most important one of the year, fairly sparkled with fine play. Several of the competitors were from California, and I have often seen them on the courts there.

To young players who are desirous of becoming proficient in tennis I would urge tournament play. It certainly is of value. The opportunities offered by match play for improvement are almost unlimited. It seems to me, when I was learning to play, that I gained more from competing in a tournament than from many days of practice.

One valuable thing is that one comes up against a great number of different kinds of games. Variety of opposition is important in keeping a game alive.

Tournament Play Builds a Versatile Game.

I can think of many players who have taken part in tournaments as soon as they learned the very first things about tennis. On the Riviera, last winter, I inquired about Mlle. Lenglen's early tournament play, and whether or not she had taken part in the many events which are held each winter in the south of France. I was told of the small, thin, black-haired girl who had played in match after match when her tennis was in the beginning stages, and how she was, at first, given 30 by her opponent in the handicap events which are held along with the regular tournaments. She began to play in tournaments when she was yet not good enough to take part in the ordinary events, but had to confine her play to the handicap matches which are run off at the same time as the games of the more experienced players.

Mrs. Lambert Chambers, and Miss Elizabeth Ryan used to defeat her regularly, and with ease. But now, the game which took so long in the making and which was defeated time and again, has become as nearly perfect as tennis can be. Judging from Mlle. Lenglen's record, one would say that tournament play was certainly very valuable in the building up of a fine and reliable game.

Of the players whom I saw abroad this summer, I was most impressed by Senorita Lili 'd Alvarez, the young Spanish girl. Much has been said, and written about her, and I think that she deserves all the interest which has been shown in her, for she is a very attractive and fascinating figure.

Colorful Figure Is the Spanish Girl.

She is vividly alive on the Court, always keen and alert. Every stroke that she makes carries some of her fire and dash. One thing that is very evident is that she is keenly enjoying the game as she plays it, shot for shot. She is good natured, too, and does not cover her emotions, ever. When the rally is terribly close and exciting, her eyes sparkle and she laughs. When she makes a bad shot she tosses her head, or makes an impatient gesture with her racquet. For this reason she is ever changing, and is much more entertaining to the onlooker than a quieter player.

Some other time, I'm going to tell of her strokes, which are beautiful, and very unusual, and which deserves a thorough description.

I have heard a number of people who have followed tennis very closely ask whether or not Senorita d'Alvarez had been approached with an offer to turn professional, and if she would consider a tour with Mlle. Lenglen. I do not know if she has received an offer of this sort. If she has, and decides to accept, it would make Mlle. Lenglen's tour an absolute success. Some marvelous tennis would result. Two of the most scintillating women players of the world would be engaged in a series of matches for the entertainment of tennis enthusiasts.

Her Interest in Sport Very Diversified.

But, I think that it is unlikely that Senorita d'Alvarez will be seen in America at all this year. Her interest in sport is wide and varied. She is as good a skater as a tennis player and likes skating just as well. Every winter she is seen on the ice at St. Moritz in Switzerland. Probably Switzerland, instead of a professional tour with Mlle. Lenglen, will claim her attention for the coming months.

I have drawn a sketch of Lili about to make a backhand drive. She has had to run very fast to reach the ball and I tried to catch her in full swing, just before her racquet strikes the ball and follows through. On the particular day at Wimbledon when I made the notes for the drawing, she was wearing a brilliant scarlet sweater and headband to match. She was a very charming figure, with her dark hair, olive skin and sparkling brown eyes.

Comedian Hired To Keep Yanks On Bench Happy

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.

MILLER HUGGINS, the manager who guides the destinies of the big clugging Yankee ball team, is taking no chances in his club suffering what they term in war shattered morale.

Hug has hit upon a novel idea of having someone on the bench who can keep up the spirit of the players while they are away out in front in the heat of the pennant race. He has corralled Joe Brown vaudeville actor and musical comedy star, to assist his team in making life a little merrier as they plod on their weary way.

The actor sits on the bench and urges the players on giving forth an alleged witty remark now and then, which keeps the players in laughter from the first until the final inning.

This is just one of Huggins' ideas of winning a pennant; he has many, but this one seems to be, as they say, "one for the book."

RUNNING AND HARNESS RACES ON MID-WEST FAIR CARD, TOMORROW

Fairmount Park will be the scene of the opening of the Mid-West Fair tomorrow morning and one of the features will be the daily racing card, composed of two harness and two running events, over the mile oval.

Pat Galliger and George Gray have charge of the running, trotting and pacing races. Such Fairmount favorites as Gnome Second, False Face, War Winner, Rajah, Reap, Belle Fay, etc., are at the oval ready to vie with imported stars from the Illinois State Fair and county fairs which closed yesterday at Hamilton, Mo.; Troy, Mo., and Anna, Ill.

These races are to start at 1 o'clock each afternoon, with the harness events to be decided by three heats and during the 30-minute intermissions the horseshow parades, etc., will be staged.

Many of the leading harness horses in the Middle West are to take part in the races at Fairmount, among which is a 2:25 trotter, Bondale, owned by William Wall of St. Louis, and Robin Reaper, 2:30 trotter, which will carry the colors of Thomas Quinn of St. Louis.

ANDREWS' YEAR AS DRY CZAR A CONSTANT STRUGGLE WITH POLITICIANS AND BOOTLEGGERS

Not Allowed to Pick Own Men and Assailed By Prohibitionists, Chief Still Has Made Some Progress.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.

GEN. LINCOLN C. ANDREWS has been the dry dictator of the United States for a little more than a year. On taking over Roy A. Haynes' job, Andrews declared that his idea of prohibition enforcement was "one big, efficient business organization fighting another big, efficient business organization." There is no doubt that he has made the prohibition enforcement machinery more efficient than it had been under Haynes, but the bootlegging industry did not quit. It increased its efficiency. It was the old story of the projectile and the armor—as soon as a heavier armor was made, a more powerful projectile was invented to penetrate it.

Andrews came to the office of Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of prohibition enforcement with a fine record of achievements. He had been a high ranking graduate of West Point, a brilliant and scholarly cavalry officer, an accomplished organizer during the war and the respected chief of the military police in France. Retiring as a Brigadier-General, he was an eminently successful re-organizer of defunct railroads in New York State. He had energy, high ideals, social graces and a courageous mind and spirit. He was no grandstander.

Andrews' Program Logical—on Paper.

Before taking active command of the prohibition forces last year, Andrews devoted several months to study of the bootleg industry. In mid-summer he took over the supervision of the prohibition personnel, the Coast Guard and the Customs service with the primary view of co-ordinating their activities for more rigid enforcement of the Volstead act.

Haynes had been in office four years. A member of the old Ohio "gang," he had been content to go through the motions of enforcement. Whatever enthusiasm there was in enforcement was injected by the Antisaloon League and the Women's Christian Temperance Union, which dominated appointments.

Andrews demanded a determined offensive against the sources of supply, leaving the small distributors to state officers. When it was pointed out that some states did not have enforcement laws, he countered with the assertion that once the sources of supply were dried up the distributors would have nothing to distribute. The plan was logical—on paper.

His next job was to purge the list of enforcement agents. Boldly he asserted that politics would have no place in his regime. That one statement alone revealed that he would have trouble in Washington, where politics governs all officials from the President down to the lowliest file clerk. Politics, which was to be ignored, delayed the start of the offensive from Aug. 1 to Oct. 1, not an auspicious beginning.

Politicians Refuse to Be Ignored

Even before he selected his chief enforcement agents, Andrews had trouble with his plan for 22 prohibition districts which were to take the place of the state areas.

Former army and navy officers were to have preference under Andrews' scheme. When the selections for the 22 administrative districts were finally made known, Andrews was given credit for naming only two administrators, Frederick C. Baird, traffic director for the Bessemer & Lake Erie Railroad, who was lent by Elbert H. Gary, and Col. Halsey Dunwoody, who was assigned to the Florida district. Dunwoody soon resigned. Later Andrews appointed to the Los Angeles district, Col. Ned Green, now under indictment for using confiscated liquors. Politicians named the others.

Besides ignoring the Antisaloon League in making appointments, Andrews has been guilty, according to Wayne B. Wheeler's followers, of several overt acts. One that raised a storm of protest from the dry leaguers was his issuance of a permit for the manufacture of malt products containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol. This was intended for a tonic and was declared to be non-intoxicating because the solids prohibited excessive drinking. Hopeful seasoned drinkers tried it and found Andrews was right. Nevertheless, the Antisaloon League shouted that here was a downwright violation of the law.

Offended Drys Clamor for Scalp.

Another act that brought direful press statements from the league and the church propaganda organizations was his admission before the Senate prohibition investigating committee that the sale of a low percentage, non-intoxicating beer would aid enforcement. The storm was so strong that he had later to modify his original admission with some ifs, ands and buts.

The dry organizations are now clamoring for his scalp, fearful that he will resign in October or November and issue a statement, as some of his administrators have done, to the effect that the Volstead act cannot be enforced. Already many people are insisting that Haynes should be given back the job or that Wheeler himself should be appointed. Wheeler has spurned the crown, asserting that he can be of more service to the cause in his present capacity, which is dictator to Congress on dry legislation. He would rather make the laws than enforce them.

Washington does not know whether Andrews will quit. A few persons say they saw the letter of resignation he sent to Secretary of the Treasury Mellon just before he sailed for England. Both Mellon and President Coolidge denied that he would resign, but Mellon evaded an answer when asked if he had received resignation.

Congressional elections will be held in November and if Andrews' lack of success during the past year can be suppressed until then, that will be one less issue to be met. The victory of the wets in the Pennsylvania, Missouri, Ohio, and Kentucky primaries made the dry talking politicians timid.

Andrews Silent, Plans New Drive.

Andrews himself will not discuss his resignation. He declares he is "carrying on," making plans for another offensive.

This second "great push" is scheduled for the fall, as was the one last year. Andrews is now on his vacation but is said to be preparing plans for a meeting of enforcement agents to be held in Washington Sept. 10.

In spite of his mistakes and disappointments, Andrews has been able to make a better showing than Haynes for three reasons. First, his mind is big enough to comprehend the enormity of the bootlegging industry and consequently he can at least map out on paper an adequate campaign against it; second, he can co-ordinate and get better results from the forces at his disposal, and third, he has built up a better personnel.

If he stays in office only for the

Eliot of Harvard---Mature Thoughts of Sage Who Lived Through Three Generations

Intimate Picture of the Late Charles W. Eliot, Famous President of Harvard, and His Views on Life, Religion, Marriage, Labor and American Problems.

"THE leading private citizen of the Republic."

So Woodrow Wilson described Charles William Eliot, in 1908, on the eve of Dr. Eliot's retirement from the presidency of Harvard University.

What was truly said then was equally true in Dr. Eliot's final years, and up to his death last week. Mr. Wilson himself, and Colonel Roosevelt, were private citizens of greater prominence in the years after their presidential terms; but Dr. Eliot saw no lessening of that widespread public regard which caused Mr. Roosevelt once to say:

"Charles W. Eliot is the only man in the world whom I envy."

As the head of Harvard for a 40-year period which ended soon after his seventy-fifth birthday, Dr. Eliot became an educator of world-wide note. But his greatest measure of public repute, and probably of public service, has come in the 17 years since. No one would have blamed the venerable scholar if he had devoted his lengthened years chiefly to golf, cereals and midday naps, amusing himself by handing out an occasional philosophic remark as his younger contemporary, Mr. Rockefeller, hands out newly minted dimes. But that was not Charles W. Eliot's idea of rounding out a career.

Education of those who have not the means for college study, or who have passed the conventional student age, was always a concern of Dr. Eliot. But soon after he became president emeritus, a plan occurred to him for widening the cultural opportunity, through reading, of the common man and woman. The famous "five-foot shelf" of ancient and modern classics resulted.

Several more inches would be added to the traditional "shelf" if the addresses and writings of Dr. Eliot, in the period since his retirement, were preserved in a form like that which he gave to the works of the earlier sages. Education, religion, labor, national politics, international relations and matters of human courtesy, public sports and current fashions, were the themes of his utterances.

Span of Life From Stage Coach to Airplane.

And whenever Dr. Eliot spoke or wrote, he had something to say. He might arouse controversy, but his sayings were not to be easily overturned. If his tone was that of a sage, his foundation of intellect, and his background of observation, were equally those of the sage.

His span of 92 years has been equaled in length by few eminent men, even among those who are most often thought of as "grand old men." Gladstone died at 89, John Quincy Adams at 81, Whittier at 85 and Bryant at 84.

He was born when Andrew Jackson was little more than half through his stormy period of presidential service; three years before the young Victoria ascended the throne of England. He became president of Harvard two years before the German Empire was founded. He saw the early stages of the antislavery movement in his native New England, the Mexican War, and the Civil War. He saw the rise of modern navies, and the development of nearly every weapon of warfare now in use, and saw them used, in his later years, in the Spanish-American War and the Great War.

He saw the American system of railroads develop from stage coaches to a few short lines near the seaboard. He saw the introduction of ocean steamers, the telegraph, telephone and electric light. He saw the postal service at every stage since the first use of adhesive postage stamps. He saw the growth of the modern newspaper, of preventive medicine and bacteriology, of photography, motor vehicles, aircraft and radio.

Heaven, Hell and Church of Future.

The division of New England Congregationalism into Unitarian and Trinitarian faiths had occurred before his birth, and Dr. Eliot was reared, and remained, in the Unitarian wing of the church. He lived to see the passing, in large measure, of old orthodox prejudices. Yet one of the most controversial times of his life followed his remarks, made in 1914, on the "Church of the Future." Many believed that Dr. Eliot was seeking to organize a new body, or to become the prophet of a new religious movement. He had no such intention, and his utterances were not, in his view, sensational.

An address delivered at Harvard contained his original discussion of this topic. "The fear of hell," he said in this address, "has not proved effective to deter man from wrongdoing, and heaven has never yet been described in terms very attractive to the average man or woman. Both are indeed unimaginable.

"The modern man or woman would hardly feel any appreciable loss of motive power toward good or away from evil if heaven were burned or hell quenched. The prevailing Christian conceptions of heaven and hell have hardly any more influence with educated people in these days than Olympus and Hades have."

"The church of the future," he said in a later article, "will be free alike to men and women who cling to ancient creeds and to those who believe that they have no creed. It will have no creedal or racial terms of admission. It will be active in palliative works of charity and mercy, and in all efforts to prevent suffering, disease and sin. The most characteristic attitude and purpose of its members will be that all fight persistently the awful evils which actually exist in human society, barbarous and civilized alike, no matter what theories they may individually hold as to the origins of those evils.

"Especially they will accept the teachings of Jesus of Nazareth about children, family loves and friendship, and will try to develop all the good tendencies in their own children, other people's children and the community, and to suppress the evil. The spiritual leaders in that church will be the ministers, the poets and the singers; but the laymen, young and old, will have a large share in all the church's fightings with existing wrongs. This is the church which through its hopeful visions will in time bring about a great revival of religion."

While holding these views as to the religious development of the future, Dr. Eliot thought it likely that many would continue to prefer a religion making the orthodox claims of authority, or one sacerdotally administered.

People were used to a degree of religious heresy from Dr. Eliot. But a blast of criticism came when he attacked the melting-pot theory of America's destiny. Always an advocate of liberal immigration laws, he uttered a warning to Jewish and Irish audiences in Boston that the races should maintain their racial identities. "There has never been any melting pot in the United States, and there is not likely to be in the future," he declared. Evidently, it would have been useless for the producers of "Abie's Irish Rose" to give Dr. Eliot free seats and hope for a subsequent testimonial.

Glowing Thoughts In Terse Sentences

Dr. Eliot's facility in composition is best illustrated in two inscriptions he wrote for public places.

For brevity, the sentences over the Samuel Dexter Memorial gate at Harvard is a remarkable example. In 14 words, Dr. Eliot delivered an eloquent message.

Over the entrance from the outside, one reads:

"ENTER TO GROW IN WISDOM."

Upon leaving the grounds through the same gate, one looks up and reads this sentence:

"DEPART TO SERVE BETTER THY COMMUNITY AND THY KIND."

Beneath the six allegorical statues around the Union Railroad Station at Washington are the following sentiments supplied by the pen of Dr. Eliot:

"Fire—The greatest of discoveries, enabling man to live in various climates, use many foods and compel the forces of nature to do his work.

"Electricity—Carrier of light and power, devourer of time and space, bearer of human speech over land and sea, greatest servant of man, itself unknown. 'Thou hast put all things under his feet.'

14,500,000 Volumes of Five-Foot Book Shelf Sold in 18 Years

SINCE Dr. Eliot, then about to retire from the presidency of Harvard, selected in 1908 the five-foot shelf of books which he held sufficient to give their reader a liberal education, more than 14,500,000 volumes of these "Harvard Classics" have been sold, the publishers announce.

The sales, as estimated by the publisher, have amounted to $20,827,000. "These figures, unprecedented in the history of publishing," the publisher commented, "serve only partly to indicate the far-reaching cultural value of Dr. Eliot's cherished ambition to make Americans a nation of readers. Distribution of the five-foot shelf of books has permeated the entire country, geographically and socially."

In an interview, soon after the books appeared, Dr. Eliot advocated giving "10 minutes a day" to the classics, naming Plato, Epictetus, Marcus Aurelius, Dante and Adam Smith as writers and thinkers who should be thus studied. This advice has been the basis for numerous "capsule form" reading and educational courses.

Anecdotes Which Reveal Personality of Dr. Eliot

DR. ELIOT was a master of language. He knew when a few words were better than many. At a Harvard commencement many years ago, he announced the honorary degrees, paying appropriate tribute to each of the recipients. One white-haired man, the last in the line, stood before him, and Dr. Eliot said only:

"John Greenleaf Whittier, Poet."

Boston tradition tells fondly how Dr. Eliot, at his summer home in Maine, was carrying a shovel when a visitor confronted him. The visitor asked what he meant to do with the shovel. Pointing to a pile of dirt in a driveway, Dr. Eliot said, "I intend to diminish its altitude."

A guest at his summer home, the wife of another university president, has told how Dr. Eliot appeared at the door of her room one day, helping a servant to carry a basket of laundry. After a moment of apparent study, the scholarly host said, "I am very sorry, Mrs. ———, the slip said three petticoats, but only two have been returned."

"I was looked upon as the handicapped member of my family," he said in a reminiscent talk a few years ago. "So much so," he continued, "that I received a special legacy of $1000." Apparently, he referred to a disfiguring birthmark on the right side of his face. This, with his near-sightedness, was his only apparent physical handicap. The limitation of sight made it impossible for him to recognize people at the ordinary distance, and had much to do with the tradition that he was haughty and undemocratic in his personal contacts.

Dr. Eliot was an oarsman, trained in the Harvard crew in the days when college crews rowed in heavy cedar barges, upholstered with cushions. He kept up his practice in rowing, and at 70 was able easily to outdistance a young man who undertook to race with him. At 78, he won a 200-yard sprint against a competitor of 74.

Twelve years ago, when Dr. Eliot was 80, Dr. Eliot was driving a team of horses on a roadway of Mount Desert Island. The team started to run away, and the aged driver leaped from his seat, pulling at the reins, and was rolled in the dirt before he brought the animals to a stop.

CONSERVATIVES OF ENGLAND, WEIGHED IN OUR SCALES, SEEM LIKE WILD RADICALS

Numerous Socialistic Policies, Long Taboo in United States, Are in Force Over There, With Approval of Tory Government.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.
LONDON, Aug. 19.

SO this is a Conservative Government! And to think that we called La Follette a radical!

Undoubtedly this is a Tory Government. It is the most conservative Government that Great Britain can possibly have under the present alignment of political parties. Of the three existing parties the one in control is by all odds the most reactionary. It contains the nobility, the landed gentry, the bankers and industrialists, the old-line army and navy crowd. It is called the Conservative Party, and it IS the Conservative Party, if there is one in Great Britain.

Very well, let us see how this Tory Government operates. Let us see how its conservatism manifests itself in the conduct of public affairs. Let us examine how it demeans itself toward propositions which Americans are accustomed to consider radical. I fear that a lot of us are in for a shock.

Before going into it, however, let us get one important matter out of the way. Perhaps the most radical measure which the late Senator La Follette ever advocated—certainly the one which drew the loudest criticism—and probably the one which contributed most to the stampede to "Coolidge and caution" in 1924—was his proposal to limit the power of the Supreme Court to annul acts of Congress by declaring them unconstitutional. Vice President Dawes and others called this "plain bolshevism." If it is, England went bolshevik about a century ago, for no court in Great Britain can void any act of Parliament. "The last act of Parliament is the law of the land," was the famous phrase in which this principle was stated, and it is literally and absolutely true.

As a matter of fact, "Parliament" really means the House of Commons alone. The House of Lords has gradually been deprived of virtually all its power, and no King would dare veto an act. So that, when the House of Commons passes a law it says the last word on the subject. Courts can construe the law, in the attempt to define precisely what the Commons intended, but if the construction doesn't suit the commons, the law is promptly amended to make the intention clear and there isn't a court that can touch a line or letter of it.

Insurance and Pensions for Workers.

So much for that particular piece of "radicalism." Getting back to the present Tory Government, what do we find? We find the following:

1. Every worker in Great Britain is insured against ill health, accident and unemployment, and employers are compelled to pay the cost of most of the insurance.

2. Every worker is entitled to receive an old age pension after reaching the age of 60 years, and the employers are compelled to pay a large share of that cost.

3. The Government has built thousands of houses for working people, with public money, and sold them to the workers at cost, on easy terms.

4. Rents on dwellings occupied by the lower middle classes and the laboring classes are absolutely limited by law, restricting landlords to a profit of seven per cent on their investment.

That is what the people of Great Britain call a conservative government! All the projects advocated by the other parties, Liberal and Labor, are more radical still.

Take the matter of health and unemployment insurance. When any person employs another person, even if it be only a cook or nurse-maid, the employer is required to obtain a card. Each week he is required to put on that card 16 cents in stamps, and the employe is required to put on it 10 cents in stamps. This weekly payment of 26 cents keeps up the employe's health and unemployment insurance.

What are the benefits? If the worker is sick, or suffers an accident, the Government furnishes free medical attention. If a hospital is necessary, that is free. All dental work is included.

What the "Dole" Does for Jobless.

If the employe loses the job, the unemployment insurance begins.

That is the "dole" of which we have heard much. It isn't a great deal but enough to keep body and soul together. The amount depends upon the insured's circumstances, the number of dependents, for example.

For a single, able-bodied man, it is about $5 a week. For one with a large family it might reach $15 a week. Of course, the insured must have made a genuine effort to obtain employment, and must stand ready to accept employment when it is offered. It is admitted that the Government labor exchanges are very efficient in checking up on shirkers. Almost nobody contends that any large number of persons are drawing the dole while deliberately remaining idle. If a job is offered, and refused for no good reason, the dole stops.

Criticism of this practice has been widespread in this country as well as in the United States, on the ground that public funds were being used to maintain a class of parasites. As a matter of fact, the dole actually costs the Government very little. The weekly stamp payments—made by employers and by employes with jobs—takes care of most of it. At any rate, the agitation against it has almost died out here. The Conservatives manifest no intention of stopping the unemployment insurance, and the Liberals and Laborites are all for increasing it.

Tory Votes Gave Old Age Pensions.

The old age pension actually is a Conservative party measure. The author of the system is the present Chancellor of the Exchequer, Winston Churchill, universally known as the "hardest-boiled" Tory in the Cabinet. He brought it in, and it was passed by Tory votes.

A small old age pension already existed. It was sponsored successfully by Lloyd George before the war, and provided for the beginning of small payments to persons reaching the age of 70. Churchill's bill, the present law, greatly increased the benefits, and moved the age limit forward 10 years. The amounts are variable, depending on the pensioner's circumstances, and also upon the number of years which the pensioner has been making payments. Speaking generally, they range from about $4 a week upward. In this case, as in the others, a large share of the bill is met by the employers of industrial labor.

For the present, however, this pension is costing the Treasury a lot of money. The bill became universally effective at once. A man or woman who was 59 years old last year begins drawing the pension this year. Thus to inaugurate the system full-fledged, made a large expenditure necessary in the early years of its operation, but the drain on the Compulsory Bible Reading.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE need for moral instruction to the growing youth is the outstanding problem of the time. The irresponsible parent cannot be reached by the community, so the tendency of those "good intentioned" reformers is to let the State assume the burden by introducing the Bible in the public schools. California is the first State to place the initiative on the ballot for decision at the next November election. Although 11 states have placed the Bible on the curriculum by legal enactment, the first amendment to the Federal Constitution reads: "Congress shall make no laws respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibit the free exercise thereof." The Fourteenth Amendment reads: "No State shall make, or enforce any law, which shall abridge the privileges or immunities of citizens of the United States."

Appeal to the Supreme Court is pending on these issues, which, like the Oregon case, may result favorably for freedom of conscience. Tennessee's evolution convulsion is reflected in the spasm of Texas which follows the trend of the so-called mind of the legislator, when not able to solve a problem. They pass a batch of laws, and declare while buffeting the torrent, that the flood has subsided.

Government Aid to Watchmakers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

YOUR editorial of Aug. 18, "Our Mail Order Government," creates in the minds of your readers the impression that the United States Government furnishes a course by mail through one of its various bureaus, and that watchmakers holding a certificate of "Junior watchmaker" or "Certified watchmaker" are merely beginner graduates of the Government's mail order correspondence course in watchmaking. Such is not the case.

The Horological Institute of America issues the above certificate and not the Government. They do not offer any courses in watchmaking. They do offer an examination to watchmakers who have already completed courses in horological schools or have completed an apprenticeship, to prove their proficiency as a workman.

Watchmakers who take these examinations are charged a fee of $7.50 for the "Junior" and $10 for the "Certified examinations." These fees with membership fees take care of the operating expense, and not the Government as stated.

For Better Traffic Signals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHAT is wrong with the stop signals? Here it is: They should have the word "Go" and "Stop" to show up on both sides of the sign. Take, for instance, the one at Grand and St. Louis avenue on the southeast corner. When you stand at the northeast corner and look at the back of the sign you don't see anything on it as there is no wording—only the light. The meaning of the green or red light is not known to everyone and particularly children, so if the words "Go" and "Stop" would be on both sides it would be all O. K. You have to go around the signal from side to side to see which side says "Go" or "Stop" as the case may be. I hope this suggestion will be the means of putting the extra word on the opposite side.

A Cross World Puzzle.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHEN between the years of 1915-1918 the allies borrowed money from us in billions of dollars, it was done with the understanding on both sides that the money would be paid back, mostly out of German reparations and war indemnities to be imposed and collected according to historical precedent.

But there were strings attached to these accommodations: Every cent advanced had to be spent right here in these United States for ammunition, food and sundries, not a dollar to cross the sea. Then we proceeded to sell them what they needed, but at our own prices, which had the sky for the limit.

Now that the war is won we want our money back with interest and we want it in cash, not in merchandise; no chance for a profit or rakeoff, no sir! Furthermore, we claim that their money has depreciated so that at the present rate they would have to pay us back about eight times as much of their own money as they received from us. Germany refused to pay any adequate sum; when France tried to collect reparation money which was honestly due, we not only refused to help, but even criticised her for trying to enforce payment.

So there you are, both sides are sore, and who is right? I leave it to better heads to figure it out.

THE PLIGHT OF THE STATES.

Comment upon the political incidence of Ma Ferguson in Texas has by this time touched everything except what actually lies behind it, and that is the plight of the states.

It is an effort to think of Ma as having any relation to the theory of government conceived by the founders of the republic, but it is nevertheless true that they foresaw her and all her works. They foresaw the ridicule into which the State would fall if it were deprived of its dignity and sovereignty, even to the light banter which characterized the Ferguson-Moody wager. The Worcester Telegram thinks the wager is beneath the dignity of government and that Ma is therefore not bound by it, but this is not just what it has suggested to serious-minded people interested in the preservation of the United States.

They cannot forget that things very much like this are happening in many of the states. There is only one other woman Governor, and she seems to be a very good one; but there are plenty of men Governors in the Union no better qualified than Ma is, and the plight of Texas is not unlike that of many another state. State government has sunk to a level it never touched before. The Governor of one state had to be taken from office and placed in prison because of fraud. The Governor of another state reigns as an antibiologist. Another one has just been cleared of a pardon-selling charge. Others are merely crafty politicians, as the Governor of Illinois is.

The truth is that the states have been deprived of their rights until their pride is humbled. They are no longer those sovereign communities they formerly were. Their dignity has been invaded by one piece of Federal legislation after another until their importance is scarcely less than that of counties. Who wants to be the Governor of such a community? No one, truly, save a Ma Ferguson, a Peay, or a Small. Does someone comparable to the Governors of old, someone interested in making local government successful, as Grover Cleveland was, want to be Governor of Texas, of Tennessee, of Illinois? Is there somewhere another Woodrow Wilson upbound from great service in the state to great service in the nation? No, indeed.

We have one state with the quality of sovereignty and consequent pride of self. It has a great Governor. His name is Al Smith. Almost all the rest of them, with the exception of states stubborn of their sovereignty, as Wisconsin is, are a wretched and misgoverned lot. They have been disinherited. It is their lesser fortune that has handed them over to the political oddities whose eccentricities fill the news, that has exchanged the toga for the Mother Hubbard, the scepter for a jester's bauble.

Would it not be a good idea to look at the Ma Ferguson incident from this point of view? It may revive in us for the states the ambitions of the founders.

THE REED-FOR-PRESIDENT BOOM.

The Livingston County Democratic Committee has given its imprimatur to the Reed-for-President movement. So far as we know, it is the first 'official organization to hoist the flag of the Missouri Senator. The fame that goes with being the "original" supporter of a successful candidate for the Presidency awaits the forehanded committee in the event of Senator Reed's election. Nor will it be altogether without glory if he gets no farther than the half-way post—the Democratic nomination.

At this stage of the race for the nomination no one can say what are Senator Reed's chances. A Rip Van Winkle awaking today after a sleep since 1924 would say they were nil. But in the brief span since Reed failed to win Missouri's delegates to the Madison Square Garden convention, the swirl of swift-moving political events—events which he himself, to an astonishing degree, has helped to shape—has thrown him forward as one of the commanding figures of the day. A recent Post-Dispatch survey of editorial opinion regarding Reed showed a nation-wide discussion of his presidential prospects. Not all of it, by any means, was friendly to his reputed ambition, but there was general praise for his ability and courage. It was patent that his work in the Pennsylvania and Illinois primary election investigations had made a profound impression.

What is most to the point at this time is that the Reed boom is being seriously talked about. His name has been added to those of such aspirants as Smith, McAdoo, Ritchie and Donahey. Against the background of the publicity that Reed is getting, the indorsement of the Livingston County Democrats becomes something more than an idle gesture.

KENTUCKY'S SURRENDER.

Once Kentucky had charm and individuality. Now it is hard to distinguish it from Kansas. The hills are full of anti-evolutionists, prohibitionists and reformers, and the Ku Klux Klan's fiery crosses burn under the walls of its abandoned distilleries. Governor Fields is dry as a chip and Congressman Barkley is running for the Senate on an anti-racing platform. The Kentucky Jockey Club has been forced to battle with every Legislature to sustain its existence. Moral questions have invaded the State's politics and elections are conducted like evangelistic campmeetings under the leadership of a few highbinders who are after graft and patronage.

A writer in the Baltimore Evening Sun points out that Kentucky's complete and abject surrender to the wowsers coincided with the retirement of Marse Henry Watterson. That isn't quite true, but it is at least a gratifying idea. It is comforting to think that perhaps Marse Henry could have postponed the State's forfeiture of its self-respect. Yet Marse Henry, we believe, had long been an anachronism. Two of the causes against which he had inveighed longest and loudest he lived to see find place in the Constitution as the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Amendments.

After his death publishers refused to incorporate in collections of his editorials those on women suffrage and on liquor, though on these two subjects he wrote some of his most sparkling articles. The Courier-Journal, which he had edited for so many years, began trimming for the breeze. Before Marse Henry was cold in his grave, it had reversed him on nearly every question, including horse-racing, woman suffrage and prohibition. Today this once-celebrated newspaper has descended to a dull level of conformity with nearly all the weird fetiches of the day. For all it contributes to a civilized outlook on life, it might just as well be published in Dayton, Tenn., or Wichita, Kan.

In Kentucky, Watterson is dead as the dodo. With the exception of a few like Desha Breckenridge's of Lexington, there are no voices lifted up for the grandeur, the glory that once was Kentucky. The squareheads and the highbinders are sitting on top of the heap.

THE CORN-BELT FARMER.

The Corn Belt Committee, composed of 32 organized groups of farmers in the Middle West, have had a survey and report made of the cost of farming in Illinois, Iowa, Nebraska, North Dakota, Wisconsin and Minnesota.

The newspapers contented themselves with printing only the main deductions presented: that the farmers, instead of taking a profit, in these six states are taking a loss of $2480 per farm per annum.

The system of accounting used to prove these losses is no doubt the last word in scientific bookkeeping as adopted in our leading manufacturing corporations, but it also may be safely said that the farmer does not keep books in the manner prescribed.

For the State of Illinois the committee's system of computation causes the farmer's operating expenses to amount to $4646.68, while his total farm revenue from all sources aggregate only $2548.40, making his annual loss $2120.08.

It must fill the souls of the agricultural experts of Illinois' great State College with pain to look upon the income revenue sheet of this report, where the bushels per acre of grain are shown at less than one-half the forward farmer expects to make as his crop; where brood sows average three pigs per litter, milch cows average only a gallon of milk per day, hens lay only 72 eggs per annum.

The report exhibits, as the total income from a unit 136-acre Illinois farm, the sum of $2548.50. By increasing the yield of grain and hay crops per acre, to fair figures, and by having hens lay 120 eggs a year and sows litter six pigs and cows give down 6500 pounds of milk per annum, the income sheet rises to $4381.88.

If we accept the higher figure of revenue produced and permit the report's operating cost figures to stand, we find that each Illinois farmer is losing $264.80, instead of $2120.08. Do not forget, however, that included in the operating cost figures of the report is placed $1800 as salary for the farmer and $930 in interest charges on the valuation of his farm, which the farmer looks upon as income if his farm is clear of debt, and not as operating expense.

The efficient farmer, on these revised figures, makes a net income of $2465.08 per annum, instead of taking a loss. An A-1 farmer will, and does, more than double these profits.

A BRILLIANT INTERVIEW.

The interview with Jiddu Krishnamurti, published in Friday's Post-Dispatch, was a brilliant piece of writing. It was done with a cynical touch; the author made it clear that he did not believe the young hundred-pound Hindu to be a messiah. Yet it is seldom that a personality and a philosophy are so luminously caught within the space of a few sticks of type.

We see Krishnamurti as a person of extreme sensitiveness. He flinches from questions about God. His slight figure recoils, his thin hands jerk to his face. We get all the characteristic color of a poetic and mystical person. We see Krishnamurti's modesty and reticence. He uses the word genius, but quickly, almost bashfully, corrects any possible misunderstanding that he meant to apply it to himself. Questions as to the role of the world teacher that is claimed for him pain him like blows. Yet he tries to answer them, and even in cold type can be felt his warm earnestness and his profound seriousness.

From the many things he must have said in a long interview, the writer selected utterances of real value, and incorporated a whole philosophy in a paragraph. Throughout the interview the reader is aware of Krishnamurti's audience of 30 reporters and writers—a tough audience. It is not friendly, it is not hostile, but worse. It is inclined to scoff at the occult pretension of this exotic little man, who claims godhead and likes golf and tennis. The audience has come, as the writer put it, to rummage his soul. The fact that the writer stresses this fact is what makes the interview more than fair to Krishnamurti. It shows him under fire, working well under the killing effect of ridicule.

We know nothing of Krishnamurti's divine pretensions, but, through the medium of an unusual article, we do know he is a personage. He may not be the world teacher, but he is a critic of no mean penetration. We have met Krishnamurti.

THE IRON JAW MYTH.

An Australian dental expert, Dr. W. Stanley Wilson, informed the First International Orthodontic Congress, which met lately in New York, that there is nothing to this theory that the square jaw indicates grim determination and indomitable will power. If one's submaxillary development is all the collar ads or pugilistic circles think it should be, that merely means that nurse or mother didn't let one suck one's thumb in infancy. Only that, and nothing more.

Nearly everyone knows some genty with an Andy Gump chin who gets what he goes after, or another with a stern and rock-bound jaw who still is waiting on tables. No orthodontic oracle was needed to tell the world that there was enough in this theory to depress a man with a fishy profile. Yet it is unlikely the myth will fade under the pitiless publicity of expert testimony.

Men have known for years that knocking wood didn't amount to much as a preventive measure, but are still rapping, and the old-fashioned man who carried a buckeye to ward off rheumatism is still carrying it. A ladder leaning against a building on a busy street will have little traffic under it, although the passing show knows that the only hard luck attached would be for it to fall on an unfortunate.

So it is likely the people will continue to regard adequate chewing gum equipment as a sign of strong character, and expect failure from the fellow whose chin failed. The people are pretty smart in some ways, but they yield their fool notions so reluctantly that most of the clairvoyants continue to eat regularly.

(Screen Rights Reserved.)

G. I. Cann had resolved from early youth to be different, to be the man apart. He had sternly rejected singularity in dress when he one day observed another man wearing a straw hat with a black band. His plan was unique, and was the result of long and careful meditation.

But once G. I. Cann had thought out his method of being singular, the process remained his closely guarded secret. His most intimate friends never knew how he had attained distinction. Even in his cups, when the average man tells everything he knows and some things he is not at all sure of, G. I. Cann did not divulge what had made him what he was that day.

His secret was, indeed, well worth guarding. From his start as an errand boy, that air of distinction, of singularity, had carried G. I. Cann steadily up the rungs of the ladder of success until, on the day when he was struck in the spot marked "X" by an automobile driver who fled the scene of the accident, he was president of the corporation. (Any corporation; we're not particular.)

His 16-year-old son sat at his death bed. "Daddy," he lisped—let him lisp, proofreader; they all do it in the movies; besides, this kid is a moron—"tell me the secret of your marvelous success." Summoning his fast-ebbing strength in one stupendous final effort, the millionaire exclaimed: "I never had the idea I could write poetry."

Moral: Great literature, such as this, has no moral.

WHAT IS IT?

What sort of question is prohibition? Senator Williams says it is not a political question. Mrs. Willebrandt says it is, and no gentleman would call a lady that, except in the British House of Commons. Senator Wadsworth says it's a moral question, but we do not know if he borrowed the idea from our Senator or the other way around. All very complicated and confusing. Cannot a referendum be held to determine what kind of question it is, besides being a very vexing one?

We cannot understand the denunciation of sinners from the pulpit or over the radio by ministers of the Gospel. If the sinners were there to hear, it might do them some good, but we understand the sinners are out playing golf or drinking gin. As it is, the righteous feel a satisfied glow that they are not sinners. More good would be done by telling the righteous what fine people they are, and coldly ignoring the sinners.

A HUNDRED YEARS FROM NOW.

A hundred years from now, my dear,
When both our hearts are stilled,
Some man a maid will still revere,
Two hearts by love be thrilled;
The drama's new in loving hearts,
And old as Adam's clay;
Since in the play we all have parts
I'd fain act mine today.

A hundred years from now, my dear,
When you and I are dead,
The scientists have made it clear
That love will all have fled;
I do not let that gloomy thought
Bring wrinkles to my brow;
I've found the one for whom I've sought,
I'd do my loving now.

A hundred years from now, my dear,
When you and I are dead,
I hear that men will lack the cheer
Of wine when it is red;
Then from the cup I'd gladly haste,
The cup with all its slips,
If you, my dear, would let me taste
The wine of your sweet lips.

A hundred years from now, my dear,
When both our hearts are stilled,
Some maid the self-same tale will hear
From lover better skilled;
Perhaps I could improve the way
In which I fondly sigh;
It takes two actors, love, to play,
So kindly help me try.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

THE ISSUE IN MASSACHUSETTS.

From the Springfield Republican.

WITH Col. Gaston opposing Gov. Fuller for re-election, the prohibition issue promises to be pushed into the foreground in the Massachusetts campaign. The Boston papers take this for granted. Gov. Fuller is dry, Col. Gaston is wet. Col. Gaston's father, when he was Governor back in the seventies, attacked the State prohibition law of that period. A few months ago, the State was plastered with a circular containing Gov. Gaston's arguments in favor of the repeal of the dry statute. The son last week wrote a letter in which he said: "Let us achieve temperance and not fail of that great end by attempting to enforce unenforceable laws." It is already clear that Col. Gaston will now make the fullest possible use of the prohibition issue in order to attain the governorship. If the issue cannot be kept out of the State campaign, it cannot be easily ignored in the senatorial campaign. Prohibition in the seventies was purely a state issue; today it is pre-eminently a national issue. Mr. Walsh, however, will fit nicely into such a situation. He is as wet as Col. Gaston. Together they will boldly appeal to the wet sentiment of Massachusetts, hoping to split the Republican party. Politically speaking, they could pursue no shrewder course. There are votes in beer and gin cocktails. The Democratic party in this State, being mainly urban, is overwhelmingly wet; the Republican party is partly wet. If the wets could be consolidated under the Walsh-Gaston leadership, they might easily win the elections, throw out Gov. Fuller and send Mr. Walsh to Washington.

THE DOVER BRAWL.

From the New York Herald Tribune.

GRAPES seem to be very sour in the neighborhood of Dover, England. It will be strange if British sportsmen in general do not resent the attempt by a few whiners to belittle Gertrude Ederle's victory over the English Channel. The grumblers complain that she had too easy a battle, that the tugboats sheltered her, cheating the waves and tides. One might suppose from reading the criticisms of "local experts and others" that Miss Ederle swam in a tea cup calm. The Westminster Gazette graciously concedes that there is "no aspersion on the bona fides of Miss Ederle's achievement." It is pretty paltry business, then, to try to minimize it by thinking up a lot of "ifs" and "but fors" and "at the same time" as though, after all, she had done nothing extraordinary. Miss Ederle's exploit speaks for itself. No amount of backbiting can obscure the fact that she beat the men's record across the Channel.

HOW TO HELP THE FARMER.

From the Kansas City Star.

KANSAS and Missouri already have been impressed with the saving that will come to them in the improvement of the lower river. This is not guesswork. It is based on the experience of the barge lines already in operation on existing inland channels. The one sure way to bring relief to agriculture in the West is to bring the farmer nearer to the markets in which he must sell and buy. This can be done by providing him cheap water transportation on the great inland system that nature has laid out.

The interview covered a variety of subjects. America, he said, must become a partner, not a patron, of all the world. He saw the passing of labor unions and capitalistic combinations, and believed it may be advisable to amend the Volstead act slightly to permit beer. Among other things, he said:

"I believe the era of struggle between capital and labor is drawing to a close because it is so well known that this struggle is unprofitable for both. I believe unions in labor and combinations among employers will pass, for the common sense of arbitration without organized moral or physical force is becoming more apparent and convincing.

"We have in alcoholism a major evil which must be fought. I see distinct advantages for our country in prohibition, if it can be thoroughly enforced, and I think it can. It may be advisable to amend the Volstead law slightly to permit the manufacture and sale of light beer, but beyond that it would be dangerous to go. New generations will find that they can get along without liquor. When the discovery is made by young Americans that drink is neither desirable nor useful prohibition will be truly effective because it will be an accepted and not a controversial fact.

"Live on honor; be honest, sincere, candid; be generous.

Women and Divorce Evil.

Hardly more than a year ago, speaking at a meeting of women in Boston, Dr. Eliot gave these views on marriage:

"I believe that marriage and the natural, normal result of marriage—the birth and bringing up of children—is infinitely the best career for women, and married life the best life for men.

"It opens to competent women the most beautiful, rewarding and influential career in life, a career in comparison with which all other careers are very inferior.

"It seems to me that most happy marriages begin with a sudden emotion that takes the parties by surprise. When they see each other for the first time there is a certain intangible something that goes out from one to the other that opens the way for further understanding and sympathy. This is love at first sight.

"It is the firmest foundation for any match to be built upon.

"The attitude of young people toward marriage is one of the most important things. If they have the right idea about it they are much more likely to make a success of it than if they are laboring under a false impression about it. They must take it seriously in the first place and not enter into it lightly or frivolously, considering that they can get out of it if things go wrong.

"Unfortunately, education seems to have a bad effect upon marriage and the bearing of children."

John F. Moors, a member of the Harvard Corporation, and a close friend of Dr. Eliot, tell hows, at a Radcliffe College commencement, Dr. Eliot made an impromptu reply to a polished address of Prof. Charles Eliot Norton.

"I am appalled," he said in beginning, "that my crude words should follow this exquisite address." But he proceeded to amplify the picture of an idealized America drawn by his colleague, and said finally, "I agree with Prof. Norton in hoping that each of you young women will have a library, and that in it will appear the works of Shakspeare and those of Marcus Aurelius. But I would add one other little volume, the first and best expression of that democracy for which we in America stand—the Four Gospels."

Moral Courage and Lack of Bitterness.

"The quality in him which most impressed me," this friend said, "was his moral courage. He did not ask what other people were thinking; he asked only what he ought to think and he became the first private citizen of America largely through his espousal, without wavering, of unpopular causes.

"After the great war he did not hesitate to stand against the panic over the 'Red Menace' and against the bitterness felt for our former enemies. He joined without a demur a small group of protest against a bill before the Massachusetts Legislature which, presented in terror over bolshevism, tended to destroy our liberties. And he joined with equal promptitude another small group which undertook the not then popular task of feeding the hungry children of Germany.

"One day, looking at his noble figure, his personification of America at its best, I asked him, 'Have you ever minded adverse criticism?' He replied, 'I cannot remember minding it. But I fear now that I am getting old, for I receive much praise, and I find I like it.'"

Five Things America Has Given Civilization.

Dr. Eliot, in 1896, listed what he termed five great American contributions to civilization. These, he said, were Peace Keeping, Religious Toleration, Development of Manhood Suffrage, Welcoming of Newcomers and Diffusion of Well-Being. Of these he wrote:

"All are essentially moral contributions, triumphs of reason, courage, enterprise, faith and justice over passion, selfishness, inertness, timidity and distrust. Beneath each one of these developments there lies a strong ethical sentiment, a strenuous moral and social purpose. It is for such work that multitudinous democracies are fit."

Supplementing this list in 1922, Dr. Eliot added, as further American contributions to civilization:

"Development of greater tenderness and deeper reverence toward women and children than any other race or nation has ever exhibited.

"Co-operation in resisting or preventing evils and wrongdoings. Two recent reforms in the field of public health—the prohibition amendment and the repression of venereal diseases and of the commercialized vice which produced and spread them—have been products of this co-operation of private citizens for public ends. Thus," he continues after a discussion of the liquor traffic, "the American democracy has led the way in strenuous conflict against one of the worst evils which have beset civilized mankind in modern times."

In the same article, published in Foreign Affairs in September, 1922, Dr. Eliot proceeded to argue that America's next contribution to civilization should be "full participation in world affairs."

Minority Lawlessness and Lack of Ethics.

In an article published in 1922, Dr. Eliot said:

"Two flagrant violations of the invaluable principle of majority rule are, first, the filibustering performance in the United States Senate, whereby two or three senators, or even one, can prevent the adoption of legislation known to be acceptable to both Senate and House, merely by talking against time; and second, the successful resistance to the execution of the Volstead Act, by a minority of the total population. Both these violations of majority rule are deplorable, but they are not hard to remedy, and are probably teaching a useful lesson on unsound democratic practices. Lynching, and the operations of the Ku Klux Klan, supply other examples of minority lawlessness."

As to the relation of these problems to education, he had this to say:

"The present exclusion of training in ethics from all public schools is one of the most unfortunate results of the toleration in religion which was embodied in the Constitution, and of the multiplicity of religious and Christian sects strongly represented in the American commonwealth. A feasible mode of giving instruction in ethics in the free schools has yet to be invented. There is no better field for philanthropic and patriotic endeavor."

Often Criticised Aims of Labor Unions.

In his view of labor unions, Dr. Eliot emphasized the restraint on the individual and the injustice sometimes wrought to unorganized workers, though he did not deny that certain advantages not otherwise obtainable had been gained through organization.

He held the eight-hour working day to be a justifiable demand, but did not believe that even the growth of labor-saving devices would justify a shortening of the working day below that limit. He criticised what he believed to be a tendency of labor unions to discourage thrift, on the ground that saving and accumulation might tend to make the workingman a capitalist. Few would repeat that argument in these days of labor union banks.

Another touch, in Dr. Eliot's earlier labor discussions, which would hardly meet with approval today, was his suggestion that workingmen ate too much meat. "Higher wages, shortened hours, better clothes and more meat," he said a dozen years ago, "do not necessarily contribute to genuine happiness any more than the luxuries of the rich do."

Testifying in 1915 before the Federal Industrial Commission, Dr. Eliot opposed legislation providing for minimum wage schedules and uniform working hours. He said then that one reason why workers found it so hard to live on their wages was that they bought and ate too much meat. He said he believed in organized labor, but not in the closed shop.

An Independent in Political Strife.

In politics, Dr. Eliot for many years steered a course not unlike that of many New England "mugwumps." Devoted to civil service reform, and with strict ideas o official rectitude, he opposed the re-election of President Grant, whose first administration had been marked by scandals in official life, not involving the military chieftain himself. He supported McKinley in the memorable "first battle" campaign of William Jennings Bryan in 1896. Opposing imperialism, and criticising the McKinley administration for the Philippine warfare, he still refused to support Bryan in 1900. In 1904 he supported his one-time student, Colonel Roosevelt, against Parker.

Later he shied off Roosevelt. The temperaments of the two men were uncongenial and led them in opposite directions. "Beware of the magnetic man," counseled the cool, unemotional Harvard president.

He remained an enthusiastic supporter of Wilson, and had only praise for the President's determination to avoid aggression against Mexico, and for the fiscal legislation of his first administration. The Adamson law of 1916, passed and signed under pressure to avert a railroad strike, was condemned in some quarters as a sacrifice of principle. Dr. Eliot, while not approving the Adamson law, did not find it a reason for withdrawing his support of the President.

Dr. Eliot was ready for war, on the side of the allies, before the President was, but he realized the President's greater responsibilities, and was a loyal supporter of the President's policy toward Germany, in the attempt to keep America out of war. His most earnest and most heralded stand with President Wilson came on the issue of the League of Nations. Dr. Eliot favored the Wilson program throughout, and urged particularly American acceptance of a mandate for Armenia, as desired by the President. On the issue of European relations, he supported Cox against Harding in 1920. In 1924, he spoke and wrote in behalf of the candidacy of John W. Davis.

Volumes Which Made Up Dr. Eliot's Famous "Five-Foot Book Shelf

IN 1909, Dr. Eliot made fulfillment of a promise he had launched 15 years before, when in a speech on "The Happy Life," he had said:

"For one-tenth part of a year's wage a young mechanic can buy, before he marries, a library of famous books, which, if he masters it, will make him a well-read man."

In 1909 President Eliot named his list of books, which omitted all Shakspeare and the Bible, and comprised the following:

Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin, Journal of John Woolman, Fruits of Solitude by William Penn, Bacon's Essays and the New Atlantis, Milton's Areopagitica and Tractate on Education, Sir Thomas Brown's Religo Medici, Plato's Apologia, Phaedo and Crito; Golden Sayings of Epictetus, Meditations of Marcus Aurelius, Emerson's Essays and English Traits, the complete poems of Milton, Jonson's Volpone, Beaumont and Fletcher's The Maid's Tragedy, Webster's Duchess of Malfi, Middleton's The Changeling, Dryden's All for Love, Shelley's Cenci, Browning's Blot on the Escutcheon, Tennyson's Becket, Goethe's Faust, Marlow's Dr. Faustus, Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations, Letters of Cicero and Pliny, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Burns' Tam o' Shanter, Walton's Compleat Angler and Lives of Donne and Herbert, St. Augustine's Autobiography, Plutarch's Lives, Dryden's Aeneid, Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, Thomas A., Kempis' Imitation of Christ, Dante's Divine Comedy, Darwin's Origin of the Species and the Arabian Nights.

This became famous as Dr. Eliot's "Five-Foot Bookshelf," though he stated later that it might require six feet of space.

HATRIDGE GETS WRIT OF ERROR

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 28.—An order granting a writ of error and supersedeas bail in the sum of $6000 was made today by the Supreme Court in behalf of Irwin C. Hatridge, former cashier of the First State and Savings Bank of Wood River, Ill., who was convicted of accepting deposits when the bank was insolvent. He had been sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and fined $142.

The Wood River Bank failed in November, 1922, when State examiners closed the doors after finding questionable loans aggregating $160,000 among the assets.

Curbing Landlords and High Rents

The housing program is so vast and so complicated that a book would be required to describe it. However, this can be said: That all political parties long go recognized the principle that it was the Government's business to see that the people had houses to live in, and that they were not overcharged for rent. Of course, if a Boston fish merchant wants to rent Lansdown House or Crewes Manor for $25,000 a season, he is allowed to go as far as he likes. But laws were passed providing that certain classes of houses, of the sort occupied by laborers and the lower middle classes, could not be rented for more than they brought before the war.

When landlords went on a sort of a building strike, refusing to erect any more houses on the ground that the Government wasn't allowing them a fair return, the Government simply sailed in and built thousands upon thousands of cottages all over the country. It did it this way: The Government advanced the owner something like two-thirds of the money necessary to complete a house. Then it furnished building materials at cost. It required that the houses should be built to certain specifications. Then it provided that if the owner rented the house, the rental should not exceed a certain figure.

This offered an opportunity to two classes. It enabled people who wanted to build property for rental purposes, and who were willing to accept 7 per cent for their return, to erect houses under very easy terms. And it enabled workers who desired to build home for themselves, to do so at rock bottom prices and easy terms.

Only a few days ago the Government put through a supplementary measure for the benefit of rural workers. It was a subsidy, by which the Government furnishes two-thirds of the money necessary to put in proper repair the houses occupied by agricultural workers.

Liberals Not Yet Satisfied.

One hears the American reader exclaim: "If this is Conservative Government in Great Britain, what do the Liberals and the Laborites propose to do?" It is a fair question, but no complete answer can be given here. The reader will be absolutely right in apprehending that the programs offered by those parties in the field of social legislation are more drastic in character than the reforms which are being carried forward by the Tories. Originally, of course, most of the present reforms were originated and brought forward by the Liberals and Laborites, and as public sentiment became ripe for them were subtly adopted by the Conservative party, in that fashion peculiar to conservative parties the world over, since time began.

Both the Liberals and the Laborites criticise the Conservative measures, not because they go so far, but because they claim they do not go far enough. The Laborites, of course, desire the nationalization of the coal mines and all forms of public utilities. On the Liberal side, Lloyd George is now espousing a vast program of land reform which probably is more revolutionary and sweeping than anything which has been seriously urged outside of Soviet Russia. Basically, it proposes to make the landed classes cough up all the "unearned increment" which they have accumulated through appreciation in the value of their land, the money to be used for good roads and other improvements for the general welfare.

And to think that we called La Follette a radical!

PLANS FOR FRENCH POLAR EXPEDITION

Scientists Will Spend Winter at Spitzenbergen and Start Across Polar Basin in February.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.
Copyright, 1926.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Lieut. Georges Darcis announced today that preparations had been completed for the French Polar expedition, which will be the most elaborate scientific and exploring expedition ever attempted in the Polar regions.

The party will sail, Sept. 15, from Havre and expects to reach Spitzbergen just before navigation closes. After spending the long polar night assembling and testing automobile sledges by searchlight, the expedition will set forth in the February dawn for the crossing of the polar basin.

Six motor sledges constructed by Brasier, the French automobile manufacturer on a design originally devised by the Norwegian explorer, Sverdrup, will carry the party on a three months' journey across the ice.

They will carry two hydro-airplanes of collapsible design, with which to make reconnaisances.

The party will include many eminent scientists. It will seek not only to determine whether any undiscovered land exists in the Polar basin, but also to solve atmospheric, magnetic and biological problems.

Lieut. Darcis insists that the Amundsen-Ellsworth-Nobile flight could not definitely establish the absence of land, except over the limited area visible from the airship. The French expedition will take soundings constantly and follow any indications thus obtained by aerial reconnaisance. A powerful wireless apparatus will keep the outside world informed as to the expedition's progress.

Lieut. Darcis estimates the time of the journey at two months, but is planning for supplies for three months.

EVENING AIR FOR AUTOS

Moist Air Improves Engine Performance.

"Ed. Technical," in Ford Owner and Dealer, Magazine, Gives New Ways of Obtaining Humid Atmosphere Without Waiting for a Damp Evening.

(Reprinted from Ford Owner and Dealer Magazine.)

> The car runs better on a damp evening, but that is not always the most pleasant time for driving. THE WAY AROUND THE DIFFICULTY IS TO PROVIDE YOUR CAR WITH EQUIPMENT WHICH FURNISHES THE FOG AND DAMPNESS ALL THE TIME. Whatever your own opinion on the "wet" and "dry" question, the car is definitely on the side of the "wets" and thrives better when things are not too "dry."

Why does "night air" have such a good effect on the performance of a Ford engine. Almost every car owner has noticed how much more smoothly and powerfully a Ford engine seems to run in the cool dampness of the early evening, as compared with the heat of the day.

In hilly country, where the fog sometimes collects in pools between the hills, it is interesting to notice how softly and sweetly the Ford engine purrs as it is driven through the fog. Often we have noticed a shower of sparks out of the muffler, when driving uphill with wide open throttle through foggy air. These fireworks are due to incandescent particles of carbon which are loosened by the moist air, and blown out through the exhaust. In tests by the U. S. Government Bureau of Standards, the increase in power of an engine using kerosene and water (as compared with kerosene only) was about 1 horse power or approximately 5 per cent. If an engine is overheated, carbonized, or otherwise in poor condition: it is quite possible that water vapor (by improving the internal cooling of the engine, reducing carbon deposits and cooling the oil) might effect a much greater improvement.

In our experiments, the most noticeable improvement was the greater smoothness and softness with which the engine padded long when supplied with moist air. The steam seemed to cushion and absorb the jar, by changing the sharp bang of the explosion into a more even push, thus making the engine run more like a steam engine. The engine seemed to pull hills better when supplied with cool moist air.

As the device contained no valves of any kind, it might be thought that air entering the manifold through the Moistener would have weakened the mixture and made the engine harder to start. The answer is that the hole in the manifold is rather small and pulling air through water does offer some slight resistance. These two factors working together made the engine practically as easy to start in Winter as in Summer.

When using kerosene or distillate as fuel, it has been found desirable to combine a portion of water spray with the carbureted charge, for the purpose of eliminating engine pounds, especially at maximum loads.

MODEL "A" VIX VAPOR HUMIDIFIER AND GAS SAVER ATTACHED ON FORD

Model "A" is for FORD cars, delivery wagons and trucks—Model "B" (not shown here) is for all other makes of cars, trucks and tractors including Fords and Fordsons, too. Easily attached by anyone in a few minutes. No drilling or threading. Everything necessary furnished, including complete pictured instructions.

Comes all complete, self adjusted. No attention required after installed. Is entirely automatic in operation. No expense of any kind except the first investment cost. Cannot get out of order—outlasts the car—replacement parts, if ever needed, are free. Pays for itself. Pays you a BIG PROFIT besides.

Moisture in the Engine Gives Amazing Results

By the use of the VIX Vapor Humidifier and Gas Saver, a fog of vapor moisture passing through the engine supports the combustion, and enables the motor to run on a LEANER fuel mixture. With vapor moisture mixed into the fuel—you can drive with FASTER spark and LEANER gas mixture. The monoxide carbon gas in your engine (caused by unexploded and wasted gas and oil) crystallizes into and forms hard carbon. By this VIX process, MOISTURE is introduced into the engine in the CORRECT amount required; the oxygen from the water vapor is absorbed upon contact by the monoxide carbon gas (a natural chemical action)—both are MOIST and are then expelled through exhaust values in the natural operation of the engine—BECAUSE both are MOIST and cannot crystallize or harden or become baked. You get ENORMOUS power, speed and mileage, no hard carbon, easy starting, faster pickup and a snappier, peppier motor—and you experience, too, the "VIX thrill" that only VIX users know and understand.

VIX works wonderfully in Winter weather with all non-freeze and alcohol radiator solutions. It uses the alcohol vapor, and turns it into FUEL and POWER at a BIG SAVING and shows almost unbelievable results in easy starting, increased mileage and no hard carbon accumulation.

IT IS A KNOWN FACT—TO EVERY AUTO DRIVER—THAT HIS CAR RUNS BETTER ON A COOL MOIST EVENING—THAN ON A HOT DAY and therein is our wonderful sales possibilities—and YOURS—if YOU become our distributor—to impart to every car owner—that wonderful night driving effect that we all recognize—with the added POWER—PEP—PICKUP—MILEAGE and SMOOTH RUNNING EFFECT.

GRAND DUCHESS IN COURT

Nicholas' Wife Brings Action Over Auto Accident.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—The Grand Duchess Nicholas of Russia, aunt of the late Czar, whose husband is regarded as rightful successor to the throne by the majority of expatriated Russians, has started proceedings in a Paris Police Court "against an unknown person" on account of injuries received in an automobile accident.

Clothed entirely in balck in memory of the late Czar and his family, she wore a wide hat with large side wings, as far removed from the fashion of the day as possible. She showed marked difficulty in walking, due to the accident which occurred last April. She was then passing through the Paris suburb of Saint Maur, in the automobile of Gen. Varon von Stael, when the chauffeur, blinded by the headlights of a car some distance further along the road, ran into a motor truck standing on the road. The Grand Duchess suffered many injuries. The Magistrate appointed a legal medical expert to report on the damages suffered by the Grand Duchess, and will investigate on whom the rsponsibility falls.

How Politicians And Bootleggers Beset Dry Chief

next three months, prohibition enforcement will be stricter during the next year. He has learned many lessons during the past year, and, though somewhat disillusioned, he believes he can improve the service.

If he does resign, he will hand on to his successor a plan of action that will merit serious consideration. As revealed during his short stay here on his return from England, Andrews intends to continue his drive against the sources of supply.

Alcohol Diversion Chief Objective.

This means principally a fight against the diversion of industrial alcohol. When he came to Washington Andrews had no idea that industrial alcohol was potable: He was amazed when a former distiller told him there were many in the distilling business who preferred grain alcohol to whisky in pro-Volstead days.

Concurrent with the fight against alcohol diversion, the coast guard and the customs service will seek to check smuggling, which is said to account for about 20 per cent of the illegal liquor in this country.

The mission to England was in the interest of the latter phase of enforcement. The text of the agreement with the British officials is still a secret, but it is said that Andrews was able to work on the legendary British idea that Brittania rules the waves and should therefore be jealous of the way the Union Jack was being used on rum ships. But we have rum treaties with Canada and Mexico and though the borders are tightened, considerable illicit liquor is said to be seeping through the northern boundary.

The coast guard has been in hot water since some of its members were discovered taking bribes, and, if necessary, running the liquor in from the high seas. Being underlings, and supposedly bound by long traditions of the service, they will probably get the limit of punishment.

In the matter of personnel Andrews has been most bitterly disappointed, yet he has had better luck than Haynes.

No Esprit de Corps Among Dry Agents.

The chief reason for his disappointment has been his inability to develop that esprit de corps so essential to an efficient organization. His experience had been confined to the army and to business enterprises where loyalty, initiative and honesty were taken for granted. Bribery, spying, corruption were elements associated with thieves and gunmen.

The Federal appropriation for prohibition enforcement this year has been set at $30,000,000, with indications that a greater sum will be asked for the next fiscal year.

How much is spent by the bootleggers for corruption is incalculable but if the figures set by George Remus and Dwyer rings can be taken as a standard, the big, efficient bootlegging industry is prepared to spend as much for corruption as the big, efficient, Government machine is prepared to spend for enforcement, because the cost, like other costs, is handed on to the ultimate customer.

Under present conditions, the limit will be reached when enforcement raises the price beyond the reach of ordinary citizens. The price has been increased 20 per cent in Washington. That is the way practical persons judge the results of Andrews' on year in office.

RED CROSS CONFERENCE THIS WEEK AT CORONADO HOTEL

Intensive Study to Be Made of Plans for the Tenth Annual Roll Call.

Field representatives and other members of the staff of the midwestern branch, American Red Cross, will open a five-day conference at the Coronado Hotel, beginning this morning. About one hundred staff members will attend, coming from the 17 states comprising the area, the headquarters of which are St. Louis. These states are: Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Texas, Wisconsin and Wyoming. William M. Baxter, junior assistant to the ice chairman of the American Red Cross, is manager of the midwestern branch.

The special visitors who will address the conference are De Witt C. Smith, assistant to the vice chairman, who will be the personal representative of vice-chairman James L. Fieser; A. L. Schafer, national director of Junior Red Cross, and Douglas Griesemer, national director of public information of the American Red Cross, all of Washington, D. C.

Baxter and Earl Kilpatrick, assistant manager of the branch area, will preside at the various sessions of the conference, the purpose of which is an intensive study of plans for the tenth annual Red Cross roll call which is scheduled to take place throughout America and its dependencies from Armistice Day, Nov. 11, to Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 25.

OLDEST COUPLE IN ENGLAND

J. E. Taylor and Wife, Each 102, Are Still in Good Health.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28. — Probably the oldest couple in England are J. E. Taylor and Mrs. Sophie Taylor of Orpington, near Bromley, each 102 years old and both still going strong. Mrs. Taylor celebrated her two-over-the-century birthday this month. Her husband passed this mark last April. He enjoys an occasional glass of ale and is still a regular smoker. Mrs. Taylor retains a good appetite and her eyes are so bright that she reads and knits without the aid of glasses.

Taylor's greatest complaint is that his own opinion that he is still something of a youngster doesn't coincide with that of his doctor, who has recently induced him to give up the long country walks of which he is fond.

MEVLEVI PRAYER RUG ACQUIRED BY BALLARD

Former St. Louisan Calls Early Seldjukian, Bought in London, a Beauty.

From London comes word that James F. Ballard, St. Louis rug collector, who has traveled more than 400,000 miles in search of rare specimens of Oriental weavings, recently acquired in the English metropolis another early specimen of the so-called Seldjukian type of rug, woven in the sixteenth century It is said to be a beauty. Rugs of this type, the collector is quoted as saying, were originally made as prayer rugs by the Mevlevid ervishes of Konia.

Ballard, who formerly resided at 4420 Washington boulevard, where he kept his vast collection in a fireproof gallery built in the rear of his home, moved to New York last May, taking his collection, valued at more than $500,000, with him and making a gift of a large part of it to the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He went to London in July. It was his thirty-seventh trip across the Atlantic in pursuit of his hobby.

The rug will be brought back to New York and in October Ballard will sail for India. His primary purpose, he said, was to revisit the Taj Mahal at Agra, but he added that rugs would not be overlooked. Besides crossing the Atlantic 37 times in the last 20 years, he has made two trips around the world, has visited Persia, India and Asia Minor several times, and once traveled 41,000 miles in search of one rug. For two other rugs he searched 17 years before he found them.

COMMERCE CHAMBER FOR NEUTRAL STRIP

Reasons Given by Committee for Favoring This Plan in Olive Street Widening.

The proposal for a neutral strip in widened Olive street for the use of street cars and the consequent division of that 100-foot street into east and west traffic arteries has been indorsed by the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce, after investigation by a special committee comprising Baxter L. Brown and F. Ernest Cramer.

As is known, the Board of Public Service has approved the plan and Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks is pointing out that rejection by the Board of Aldermen will delay the paving of Olive street at least 11 months.

Some of the reasons given by the Chamber of Commerce committee for its favorable action follow:

"The primary purpose in widening Olive street is to provide a traffic thoroughfare to the business and retail district. A neutral strip would not only benefit those using the street cars, who constitute three-fourths of the public using the street, but would expedite traffic in general.

"The neutral strip would enhance the safety of pedestrians and would largely overcome the natural aversion to crossing a wide street carrying heavy traffic.

"Segregation of street car and other traffic has been approved by innumerable traffic conferences dealing with expeditions and safe movement.

"The speed of street cars would be incerased from nine to 15 miles an hour. A greater number of automobiles can be operated at higher speed.

"In round numbers, one-fourth of the cost of widening Olive street will be borne by the general public, one-third by property lying to the east and west of the improved street and less than one-half by abutting property. On the basis of cost alone property owners east and west and the public at large should be given consideration in planning the improvement."

The plan will go to the Board of Aldermen when that body reconvenes next month. It is being opposed by a group of owners of abutting property.

Musicians Receive Wage Increase.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Musicians in the seven Shubert theaters last night signed a contract for a salary increase from $72.50 a week to $79. The two-year contract also provides for $97 a week for extra musicians, instead of $92.

Three Weddings of Unusual Interest To St. Louisans Set for This Week

ST. LOUIS society, including that portion of it which has been passing the summer at the seaside, the lakes, the mountains or abroad, has evinced great interest in three important weddings scheduled this week. Two of the ceremonies will take place elsewhere and the third will be in this city.

Announcement was made last week of the engagement and approaching marriage of Miss Frances Robertson Chase, daughter of Mrs. Henry Leveritt Chase of 5636 Clemens avenue, to Capt. Richard D'Oyle-Hughes, the wedding to take place Tuesday at the summer home of Mrs. Chase in Saunderstown, R. I. A reception will be held at the home of Mrs. Chase following the ceremony.

The marriage of Miss Mary Lemon Sipple, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Caleb Sipple of Brentmoor Park, and Arthur Gorman Lambert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilton J. Lambert of Washington, D. C., will be solemnized Saturday in Hyannisport, Mass., where the Sipple family is passing the summer. The services will be read by the Rev. C. C. J. Carpenter, a friend and classmate of Mr. Lambert, in St. Andrews-by-the-Sea, the Episcopal church at Hyannisport. A reception will be held at the summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Sipple.

The first notable wedding of September in St. Louis will be that of Miss Barbara Bay, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mansfield C. Bay of 6440 Cecil avenue, to Ensign George Gellhorn Jr., U. S. N., son of Dr. and Mrs. George Gellhorn of 4366 McPherson avenue, which will take place Saturday evening at 8 o'clock at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Bay. A reception will be held on the surrounding lawn for a large number of guests.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Atwood of Ferguson was the scene of an attractive late summer wedding last evening when their daughter, Miss Katherine, became the bride of Clark Proctor Fiske, son of Geo. F. Fiske of Kirkwood. The marriage was solemnized by the Rev. M. B. Yaeman of the First Presbyterian Church, at 8 p. m. in the presence of a large number of guests in the vestibule of the Atwood home, which was banked with ferns, roses and asters.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Miss Nell Atwood as maid of honor, and Miss Eliza Atwood as bridesmaid. Brooks B. Ballard of Chicago was best man for Mr. Fiske. Paul Buchmueller, Waldo Lee Johnson, William Fuhri of Oklahoma City, John P. Gilbert and George Atwood, brother of the bride, were the groomsmen and ushers. George B. Haar Jr., young son of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Haar, was ringbearer.

The bride was gowned in white tissue chiffon trimmed in Aloncons lace. Her gown was made with a bodice with long tight sleeves and a bateau neckline edged in the lace. Her full skirt reached the floor and was edged with more of the lace. A train of chiffon and satin depended from her shoulders. The bride's veil was of rose point and had been in the family of Miss Atwood's great-grandmother. It fell from a cap of rose point, adorned in orange blossoms.

The maid of honor wore orchid taffeta, trimmed with velvet of a deeper shade of orchid. Her gown was designed with a tight, sleeveless bodice, with a V neckline and a long full skirt. She wore hose to match the orchid taffeta and velvet slippers to harmonize with the velvet on her gown. The bridesmaids' gown was of similar design of peachblow taffeta. They carried bouquets of lavender asters and Ophelia roses. Miss Atwood presented her attendants with choker strings of pearl beads.

A reception was held following the ceremony.

Upon their return from the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Fiske will make their home in Kirkwood.

The marriage of Miss Adele Lucina Eames, the daughter of Mrs. Charles Ormand Eames, of 4005 Greer avenue, to Vincent Chesley Franks of Toronto, Canada, took place Thursday morning, Aug. 26, at 10 o'clock, in the Church of the Redeemer, with the Rev. Edmund Duckworth officiating.

BOY, 10, A HERO IN FIRE

Tours House Awakening All Members of Family Before Fleeing.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 28.—Steady nerves made a hero out of Henry Bear, 10 years old, today, when fire broke out at the Bear home. Awakened by smoke that burned his eyes and choked him, the lad ran to the rooms of members of the family and awakened them. The father and a 17-year-old brother, the first to be awakened by Henry, ran down the front stairs and were burned slightly. A sister and her girl friend guest jumped from a second-story window.

When all were safe, Henry climbed down a fire ladder from the porch of the home.

St. Louis Is On Late Itinerary Of Queen Marie

With Royal Rumanian Party Entering U. S. From Canada Social Circles of Northwest Are Aflutter With Preparations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The Northwest social circles probably will have the first opportunity to see Queen Marie of Rumania and Princess Ileana, because they are making a tour of the Canadian provinces before coming into the United States and the present plan is to have them enter this country at Seattle.

In the United States the Queen and the Princess will proceed by automobile for the most part through the North and West and then come to Washington. They desire to visit every one of the 48 states.

The Queen will travel as a Queen, and therefore will be received officially. An official of the Department of State will be designated as an escort and the Queen and Princess will have a large suite of ladies in waiting and court officials with them.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will receive Queen Marie at the White House upon her arrival here early in October. Capital society is aflutter with plans of entertainment. While in Washington the royal visitors will reside at the Rumanian legation, which will be turned over for their use.

In the tentative program St. Louis is to be one of the cities visited. That will not be until in October, however.

Mrs. Herbert Hoover did not accompany her husband, Secretary of Commmerce Hoover, to the West Coast as she had planned, but came back to Washington after a brief stay at White Pine Camp with President and Mrs. Coolidge. She is waiting here for the return of her son, Allan Hoover, who is in Europe. When he joins her they will go West to be with Secretary Hoover at Palo Alto for a fortnight or so.

Mrs. James Thomson, daughter of the late Champ Clark, arrived in Washington on Monday, remained for a day and proceeded to the home of her husband's relatives at Summit Point, W. Va. She will remain there for several weeks before returning to Washington for a visit with Mrs. Champ Clark, who had been at Summit Point, is returning to her home in Bowling Green, Mo.

Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Neilson and their children of St. Louis are spending several weeks in Washington.

Admiral and Mrs. Benjamin Hutchinson, who have been on a motor trip in the North, will return to Washington next week.

Mrs. James Carson Breckenridge, wife of Col. Breckenridge, who has been the guest of her mother, Mrs. A. P. Thompson, at Summit Point, W. Va., will spend several weeks in Washington in September. Col. Breckenridge is at sea.

Miss Eppes Hawes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hawes of St. Louis, will be the guest in a few weeks of Virginia Hume, who has been visiting Miss Hawes in St. Louis this summer.

The United States Minister to Sweden and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss sailed for Stockholm from New York last Tuesday. They had been in America for several months as escorts to the Crown Prince and Princess of Sweden. While in Washington Mrs. Bliss supervised the last touches of the $1,000,000 chateau she is building on the outskirts of the city. The Minister and Mrs. Bliss expect to visit St. Louis when they return to Washington, in January.

An interesting events of the last week was the presence in Washington for several hours of Lady Astor and her five children, who were en route to Lady Astor's former home near Charlottesville, Va., where they are to remain for a fortnight. Secretary of State and Mrs. Frank B. Kellogg met her at Union Station.

Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Long, who have been at Newport for August, will return to Washington early in September and reopen their home on Upper Sixteenth street N. W.

FIGHT FOR MAINS EXTENSION

St. Louis County Residents Ask That Company Be Compelled to Act.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 28.—A complaint against the St. Louis County Water Co., to compel it to extend its mains on Calvert avenue, from the St. Charles Rock road to Breckinridge avenue, in St. Louis County, was filed today with the State Public Service Commission.

Walter B. Pepper and a number of other residents on Calvert avenue filed the petition. The commission was informed that the company has refused to extend the mains.

The petitioners want a six-inch main extended south 1568 feet on Calvert avenue from the St. Charles Rock road. The water company estimates the cost would be $1.40 a foot and would charge the installation expense to the property owners along the street. This estimated cost, according to the complaint, is excessive and unjust. It is maintained the company should bear the expense. The commission ordered the water company to satisfy the complainants or answer the complaint within 10 days.

AMERICAN ART EXHIBIT WILL OPEN NEXT SATURDAY

93 WORKS TO BE SHOWN THIS YEAR

Artists From All Parts of Country Will Be Represented, Including Many Newcomers.

The twenty-first annual exhibition of paintings by American artists will open at the City Art Museum in Forest Park next Sunday.

The museum authorities had hoped to commence the show Sept. 1, but a delay in the arrival of some important paintings from other museum exhibition necessitates a four-day postponement.

This American exhibition, the most important annual event on the museum calandar, usually has begun on Sept. 15, continuing until Oct. 25. The Chicago Art Institute's American show begins Oct. 15, and, since a number of the paintings in St. Louis invariably are invited to show there, it has been thought wise to arrange the display here for an earlier date to avoid conflicting with this, if preceding museum exhibitions permit.

Important exhibitions occur throughout the year, but none has such outstanding significance as the "Annual American." Here, representative examples of recent work done in this country are displayed, typifying the finest in contemporary American art. This opportunity is a distinct aid. It keeps the local artists and students with the quality and trend of American pictures; it promotes a nationalism in art that is essential; it familiarizes local rtists nd students with the technical and aesthetic progress of their contemporaries in different parts of the country.

Ninety-three pictures in all will be shown this year. Eleven of these are by local painters, chosen recently by a Chicago jury.

The 82 out-of-town pictures are invited by the City Art Museum from other American shows. For many years, the custom has been established between prominent museums, such as those at Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Buffalo, New York and Chicago, to select paintings for the following year's displays.

An effort has been made to cover the widest possible scope in the matter of subject. Diversity from landscape and marine is supplied by the inclusion of portraits, floral still lifes, figure studies, nudes, still life, interiors and individual decorations.

No Dearth Through Sesqui.

The larger number of fine canvases that have been obtained by the museum management for this exhibition proves the fallacy of the report that the Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia has caused a dearth of good American pictures in this country. It is quite true that the Sesqui did take a great number of fine American pictures, but not all.

All parts of the country are represented in this show, the Pacific Coast, the Middle West and the East. Since New York and Philadelphia seem the most popular homes for arists, these two cities produce perhaps the greatest number of pictures. The famous art colonies of the East, New Hope, Woodstock, Gloucester and Providence, are generously represented.

Many new names appear in this year's catalogue. Exhibiting the works of practically the same list of artists in successive years does not permit seeing what the newcomers are doing, and for this reason different painters' works are included this year.

Five galleries will be devoted to the show at the Museum. They will be open free to the public each day.

AUTO CRASHES ALARM ITALY

Courts Ordered to Be Severe With Reckless Drivers.

Copyright, 1926, by the Press and Pulitzer Publishing Co. (New York World and Post-Dispatch.)

ROME, Aug. 28.—The continually increasing number of automobile accidents here has led Minister of Justice Rocco to send a circular to the presidents of the Courts of Appeal throughout the country, urging them to be careful that "this uncivil abuse be repressed at all costs and with the greatest energy, inflicting severe penalties on inexperienced or negligent drivers."

Scarcely a day passed without serious motor accidents through disregard of traffic regulations. According to a recent inquiry, most of these accidents are caused by inexperienced drivers, mostly women, who speed through congested traffic. Serious accidents also have occurred on the roads linking the Milan lakes, which were constructed especially to eliminate mishaps. It is believed that in the future licenses will be granted only after difficult tests.

FIGHT ON CONVICT COAL MINE LABOR TO GO TO COURTS

Union Officers Term Lexington Practice Illegal and Retain St. Louis Attorney to Handle Case.

BAKER IS CRITICISED FOR PERMITTING IT

Opposition to U. S. Senator Williams From Labor Element Also Expected to Result.

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Aug. 28.—A resolution of protest against the operation of a coal mine at Lexington, Mo., with convicts of the Missouri Penitentiary, and announcement that court action will be resorted to to prevent continuance of the system were developments of a mass meeting here of members of various local labor unions.

Rube T. Wood, president of the State Federation of Labor, was present and announced that legal proceedings would be instituted to terminate operation of the mine with prisoners.

John P. Leahy, St. Louis attorney, has been retained to wage the legal fight, Wood said. The labor officials contend that the practice is illegal. It was added by the president of the State Federation that other mass meetings would be held in all sections of the State to arouse public sentiment against the practice.

Termed Injury to Union Men.

The resolution adopted protested against the convict operation of the mine "which deprives 134 union miners, members of the United Mine Workers of America, of the means of a livelihood and places a blight on the community life of the city of Lexington."

Gov. Sam A. Baker was criticised in the resolution for his "refusal" to take any action on the matter, although protests have been made to him, while the State Prison Board was condemned for its action in leasing and operating the mine with convicts.

The mine at Lexington was leased recently by the Prison Board to supply coal to the penitentiary and other State penal institutions. Sixty-five convicts were sent to Lexington to begin the work and more are to be assigned there.

It was announced by the Prison Board that none of the coal would be sold for commercial use in competition with free labor, and asserted that the lease with the company owning the mine prohibited it.

Prominent Officials Speak.

Prominent labor officials who attended the meeting here last night and made addresses were President A. D. Wood of State Federation; J. P. White, former international president of the United Mine Workers of America, and now the representative of the three Southwestern districts of the organization, including Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, and D. A. Frampton, representing John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers.

Frampton declared that "we shall fight this fight from two sides." We shall oppose administration men who are under the tutelage of Gov. Baker because their pledges cannot be relied upon." This will mean, it was added, that labor will oppose United States Senator George H. Williams.

$500,000 MORE TO BE SPENT ON MISSISSIPPI RIVER WORK

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The Chief of Engineers has authorized Maj. J. C. Gotwals, the district engineer at St. Louis, to award a contract of $500,000 for further work on the Mississippi River in his district. Ten contracts, aggregating $850,000, have been let for work on the Missouri River between Kansas City and the mouth recommended by Maj. C. C. Gee, district engineer at Kansas City.

"It is the policy of both the executive and legislative branches of the Government to put the Middle Western rivers in shape for use as part of our general system of transportation," says a statement by the chief of engineers in making the announcement.

"The development of the Ohio River is being carried forward with maximum rapidity. With the active assistance and encouragement of Secretary Davis, special efforts have been made by the army engineers to expedite the progress on the adjacent rivers, in particular the Mississippi, from the mouth of the Ohio to the Missouri and the Missouri to Kansas City. In view of the large amount of work all the Government plant available for these works is in use.

"It is evident that the corps of engineers is endeavoring seriously to give our country the full benefit of its possession of the greatest interconnected body of light daught inland waterways in the civilized world."

Ministered to Gettysburg Wounded.

BURGLAR ENTERS ROYAL PALACE AT AMSTERDAM

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and the Chicago Daily News.
(Copyright, 1926.)

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28. — All Holland is highly aroused by the news that a burglar entered the royal palace last night and escaped unobserved.

The loss proved to be slight but strong criticism is heard of the fact that a burglar could penetrate the palace by a back door without being detected by the palace guard.

The burglar entered the apartments of the palace, searching writing desks and wardrobes. However, he proved to be inexperienced, for he stole only some badges of knighthood, leaving the safes untouched. He set fire to a pile of gala uniforms, but the blaze was extinguished with little damage.

Gadowsky Marriage Annulled.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 28. —Dagmar Gadowsky and Frank Mayo of the movies are no longer married. An annulment was granted yesterday on her testimony that when they went through a ceremony at Tiajuana he was already the husband of Joyce Hill, who got a divorce 24 hours later.

Closes Roads to Girls Under 18.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—Beginning on Sunday, Cook County roads will be closed to girls under 18 years of age after 10:30 o'clock at night unless they are riding with their parents, in an effort to stop numerous recent attacks on girls and young women, Leroy Davidson, chief of county highway police, announced. His men, he said, have been instructed to arrest all girls found on highways unaccompanied by their parents and to detain them until word has been received from their parents.

GREATER ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION SITE NEAR COMPLETION

Final Coat of Paint to Be Given Booths This Week After Which Exhibits Will Be Installed.

NOVEL LIGHTING SYSTEM ON GROUNDS

Flood Lights on Columns Illumine Whole Area; Giant Searchlight Visible 40 Miles.

The 45-acre plant in Forest Park that is to house the Greater St. Louis Exposition is virtually complete and this week will be given over to a freshening coat of paint and the installation of exhibits, which, it is hoped, will be complete for the opening on next Saturday at 6 p. m. The exposition will continue through Sept. 19.

Exhibitors, meeting on the grounds Friday night, imposed upon themselves the obligation of having their exhibits in place 24 hours before the opening date.

They viewed with satisfaction the first tryout of the lighting, which has been calculated to transform the grounds into an alluring night scene. The chief effects are by flood lights upon towers, pylons, columns and booths. The main avenues are lighted by incandescent bulbs, two to the pole on 300 poles, under reflectors to throw their rays upon the ground.

A searchlight, visible under favorable conditions, for 40 miles, is expected to come from the army flying field at Dayton, O., in time for the opening. It is said to have 11,000,000 candle-power.

The Russian Cossacks, 110 in number with 60 horses, are expected to arrive in St. Louis today by special train from Philadelphia, where they have been appearing at the Sesquicentennial Exposition. The Cossacks are one of the features of the night entertainment program.

Many Special Days.

A recapitulation of the assignment of "days" at the exposition leaves the program at this time as follows:

Saturday, Sept. 4—Exhibitors' day. The feature will be a downtown parade of floats depicting the industrial activity and progress of St. Louis.

Sunday, Sept. 5.—Religious and Labor day. Massed bands will give a program of sacred music and preachers will make short addresses. The chief speaker will be Secretary of Labor Davis.

Monday, Sept. 6—Labor day, given over to the various trades unions.

Tuesday, Sept. 6—Baby Pageant day; a baby contest with a parade of babies in decorated carriages.

Wednesday, Sept. 6—Missouri day; exercises under the direction of Gov. Baker and his staff.

Thursday, Sept. 9—Woman's Progress day; floral parade and pageant depicting the activity of woman in civic, industrial, political and public health activities.

Friday, Sept. 10—Political day. Candidates for public office will each have their soap box and a carte blanche to speak their minds.

St. Louis Day.

Saturday, Sept. 11—St. Louis day.

Monday, Sept. 13—Mayor's and Chamber of Commerce day, with so many Mayors of Illinois and Missouri towns as choose to accept the invitations that have been extended to them.

Tuesday, Sept. 14—Service Club day, which means Rotary, Kiwanis and like organizations.

Wednesday, Sept. 15—Illinois day, and it is hoped that Gov. Len Small and other Illinois officials will come to St. Louis.

Thursday, Sept. 16—Foreign and Americanization day—a pageant of nations in parade.

Friday, Sept. 17—Army and Navy and Patriotic day—Parade of troops and a demonstration by patriotic societies.

Sunday, Sept. 19—Athletic day, with an exhibition by turner societies.

It is announced that 46 exhibitors will participate in the automobile show, which will be in three tents, each 100 feet wide and 300 feet long.

NO PAY FOR WOMEN DRY AIDS

Comptroller Rejects Expense Account for Agent's Companion.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The Government will not pay for the expenses of women companions of prohibition informers gathering evidence, Comptroller General McCarl ruled today. Horace H. Harden of Denver, Colo., claimed $25 for the expenses of a woman companion, asserting it was necessary that he be accompanied by a woman in order to gain admittance to a road house he was investigating. McCarl refused the payment, but approved an expense by Harden of $27.75 for the purchase of liquor and $2.05 in street car fares in accordance with Harden's agreement with prohibition officials.

KU KLUX KLAN IS GIVEN PERMIT FOR A PARADE HERE

NO RESTRICTIONS AS TO MASKS AND ROBES

Local Secretary Says There Will Be Bands and Decorated Automobiles and 15,000 Men in Line.

St. Louis Klavern, Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, was given a permit yesterday to parade in St. Louis Saturday, Oct. 30, in connection with a State conclave of the order to be held at that time.

The permit was issued by Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks to J. W. Stevens, secretary of the local klan. It gives permission for a parade of 15,000 persons, Stevens asserting there would be that many in line, most of them in full regalia, but doubt was expressed at the city hall that more than a few thousands would march.

The permit, which is the first one applied for by the local klan, makes no restrictions as to masks or robes and leaves that choice to the klansman himself.

The klansmen will assemble late in the afternoon in Twelfth boulevard, north of Market street. The parade will start promptly at 6:30 o'clock, according to plans, and will move north in Twelfth to Locust, west to Lindell cut-off and thence westward to Kingshighway, where it will disband, about 8 o'clock.

Local klan officers have been promising the St. Louis members a spectacular public appearance for more than three years, and the parade will be the first public show of strength to be made by the local klan. There have been some initiations held on farms in St. Louis County, but those have been more in the nature of lodge meetings.

Before issuing the permit Director Brooks got an opinion from the City Counsellor's office in which it was stated there was no law against such a parade.

Stevens said there would be bands, decorated automobiles and other features in the parade to make it a spectacle of public interest.

Car Leaves Road; Driver Killed.

By the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Ill., Aug. 28.—George Watts, 40 years old, was killed at 1:45 o'clock this afternoon on the hard road to Peoria, when his automobile left the road and crashed into a telephone pole. Watts and Ray Shelton of South Pekin were on their way to Peoria. Three cars attempted to pass another car on the road, and Watts' machine got out of control. Shelton escaped with slight injuries.

REPORT ON TWO FLORIDA ROUTES OUT OF ST. LOUIS

Road Conditions by Way of Paducah and via Evansville and Henderson to Nashville Compared.

Because of the steady stream of motorists between the Middle West and Florida, and the certainty of a much greater flow back and forth beginning in November, an investigation of the various short routes from St. Louis has been made for the Joint Touring Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and the Automobile Club of Missouri. Here is the report on the route via Mound City, Ill., Paducah, Eggner's Ferry, Ky., and Nashville, Tenn., and that via Illinois highways No. 15 and No. 1 to Mt. Carmel, the Wabash River ferry, Evansville, Ind., Henderson, Ky., and Nashville:

Both routes converge at Hopkinsville, Ky., and continue thence via Clarksville, Adams, Springfield and Goodlettsville, Tenn., to Nashville and Chattanooga.

Illinois No. 15 and No. 1 are paved, except for two graveled gaps, to Mt. Carmel. The ferry there runs 24 hours a day. From the ferry a graveled road leads to Princeton, Ind., where Indiana No. 10 is picked up and followed to Evansville. From Princeton to Evansville the route is paved. The first few miles to the Ohio River ferry opposite Henderson, Ky., are graveled, then comes pavement to the river bank. From Henderson the route is generally good, fast gravel road to Morton's Gap, Ky.

But from there for several miles toward Madisonville the road is dirt, which gets very bad when wet. Madisonville natives tell of tourists being dragged through part of this dirt road after heavy rain. From Morton's Gap the road is generally good gravel to Hopkinsville. Then come 17 miles of rough, pot-holed macadam to the Tennessee line, then fine, tarred gravel and asphalt and pavement to Nashville.

A new road is being built between Madisonville and Morton's Gap, and the Kentucky Highway Commission states that work at paving this stretch is to begin next month, presumably to be completed in time to make this route really all-weather to Nashville by early winter. Resurfacing of the rough macadam south of Hopkinsville also is scheduled to begin in September.

The distance from St. Louis to Nashville by this route is approximately 405 miles, depending on the accuracy of one's speedometer.

The route via Mound City and Paducah goes over Illinois Highway No. 15 to the Ashley "Y," then south over No. 2 to Mounds. Thus far the road is paved except for several all-weather gaps. There is a generally good gravel road to the Mound City ferry over the Ohio River, and the road thence to Paducah is all-weather—at least, the investigators' car made it without difficulty through a series of heavy showers.

From Paducah the road is grav-

Both routes converge at Hopkinsville, Ky., and continue thence via Clarksville, Adams, Springfield and Goodlettsville, Tenn., to Nashville and Chattanooga.

Illinois No. 15 and No. 1 are paved, except for two graveled gaps, to Mt. Carmel. The ferry there runs 24 hours a day. From the ferry a graveled road leads to Princeton, Ind., where Indiana No. 10 is picked up and followed to Evansville. From Princeton to Evansville the route is paved. The first few miles to the Ohio River ferry opposite Henderson, Ky., are graveled, then comes pavement to the river bank. From Henderson the route is generally good, fast gravel road to Morton's Gap, Ky. But from there for several miles toward Madisonville the road is dirt, which gets very bad when wet. Madisonville natives tell of tourists being dragged through part of this dirt road after heavy rain. From Morton's Gap the road is generally good gravel to Hopkinsville. Then come 17 miles of rough, pot-holed macadam to the Tennessee line, then fine, tarred gravel and asphalt and pavement to Nashville.

A new road is being built between Madisonville and Morton's Gap, and the Kentucky Highway Commission states that work at paving this stretch is to begin next month, presumably to be completed in time to make this route really all-weather to Nashville by early winter. Resurfacing of the rough macadam south of Hopkinsville also is scheduled to begin in September.

The distance from St. Louis to Nashville by this route is approximately 405 miles, depending on the accuracy of one's spetdometer.

The route via Mound City and Paducah goes over Illinois Highway No. 15 to the Ashley "Y," then south over No. 2 to Mounds. Thus far the road is paved except for several all-weather gaps. There is a generally good gravel road to the Mound City ferry over the Ohio River, and the road thence to Paducah is all-weather—at least, the investigators' car made it without difficulty through a series of heavy showers.

From Paducah the road is graveled to Briensberg. Then comes the stretch that swings the balance in favor of the Evansville route. This stretch is some 16 miles long, and is about as bad a dirt road, with occasional mean rocky places, as a city driver would care to tackle. When wet it is dangerous to impassable, and when well soaked should not be attempted by anyone.

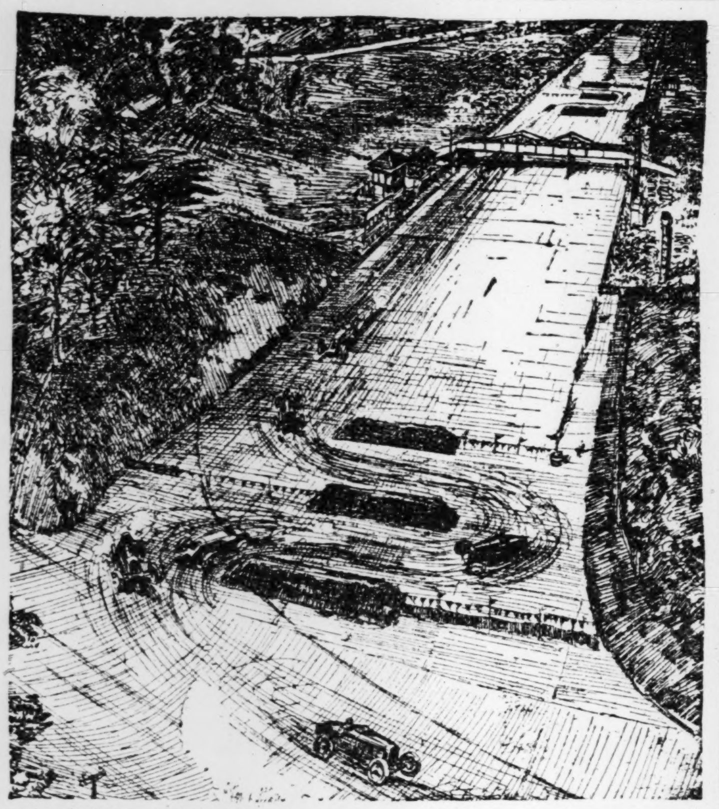
From the end of this stretch at the Tennessee River ferry to the Cumberland River ferry, and from there to Hopkinsville, the road is generally good, fast gravel. The distance from St. Louis to Nashville over this route is approximately 385 miles.

Surfacing of the bad stretch from Briensberg to the Tennessee River is being planned, but is hardly likely to be under way this year. Residents of the vicinity assert that one can motor from Paducah to the Tennessee River ferry via Benton in any kind of weather, though the road is said to be very rough. But it was noticeable that virtually all the natives were using the Briensberg route.

The route via Paducah is much more attractive, so far as scenery is concerned, than the Evansville route.

A report on the scenic route to Chattanooga via Louisville, Lexington, Ky., Cumberland Gap and Knoxville will be published soon.

Putting Thrills Into British Race



SKETCH from "Motor" of the artificial hairpin turns on Brooklands track, over which the British Grand Prix was run and won by a Delage straight eight at an average of 71.61 miles per hour for the 287 miles. These turns, made with sand banks, forced the racers to slow down from 100 and 120 miles per hour to 20 to 30, and put a premium on brakes and acceleration. The Delage won chiefly because it had the best brakes. The winning car was driven by Senechal and Wagner. A Bugatti, driven by Capt. Malcolm Campbell, was second, and another Delage, driven by Benoist and Dubonnet, third.

Maj. Seagrave did the fastest lap of the 2.6-mile course, averaging 84.99 m. p. h. Seagrave drove a Talbot, which appeared faster than the Delages, but could not overcome the handicap imposed by the better brakes of the Delages.

Moriceau, driving another Talbot, snapped an axle when running at 120 m. p. h., but escaped without injury.

As there were 110 laps of the course, and as the sand banks caused cars to make six corners and two difficult curves on each circuit, the winning car had to make 880 turns during the race.

The Talbots were unable to finish. The drivers of the Delages withstood constant torture, for faulty manifold design permitted much of the piping to get white hot from the exhaust and the cars were like furnaces. The most consistent running was done by Campbell in his Bugatti, which was a super sport model of this car which is sold to the general public.

RUN OF 5016 MILES AT AVERAGE OF 70 M. P. H. STAMPED AS OFFICIAL

A CERTIFICATE has been issued by the R. A. C. of Great Britain to Miss Violet Cordery stamping as offiical the feat of a six-cylinder Invicta car in running 5016.2 miles at an average speed of 70.7 m. p. h. and actual running time average of 73.8 m. p. h.

The run was made on the Montlhery track, in France. The car stopped 37 times for a total of 3 hours and 34 seconds, of which 2 hours 4 minutes 30 seconds was spent on minor repairs. The repairs and adjustments included tightening water pump seven times, fitting new water pump, changing jets of both carburetors, adjusting magneto, fitting new magneto part, adjusting shock absorbers, replacing a shock absorber bolt, repairing radiator, cleaning vacuum tank and replacing a bolt holding down the engine.

TOUR TO INDIANA CAVERN OF GREAT SIZE AND BEAUTY

Wyandotte Cave, One of World's Largest, Has Hill Inside It That Is 200 Feet High.

By ROBERT H. HALL,
Press Bureau, Automobile Club of Missouri.

A motor tour to one of the world's largest, and most beautiful, caves takes one over concrete and gravel roads to Southeastern Indiana and involves a round trip of about 600 miles. It goes to Wyandotte Cave, a marvel of stalactite, stalagmite and helectite formations.

Wyandotte Cave, first discovered in 1850, according to the United States Department of Interior, is the second largest cave in the United States, and has no equal in magnificence, save perhaps Mammoth Cave, in Kentucky, and Carlsbad Cavern, in New Mexico.

No Hazards in This Cave.

Situated high up in the yellow bluffs along the meandering Blue River, the cave is 297 miles from St. Louis, 338 miles southeast of Chicago, 136 miles south of Indianapolis, 181 miles southwest of Cincinnati and 55 miles due west of Louisville, Ky.

Being a dry cave, that is to say, one which has no subterranean water passages or seepage from overhead, Wyandotte Cave offers no hazards and there is no reason for fear in exploring it. Often, because of the lack of water, beautiful stalactites are found without the usual accompanying stalagmite formation.

Since the cave has not been commercialized to the extent of spoiling the original effects, it is of especial interest to those of geological bent. Guides of experience and possessing full knowledge of the history of the cave may be em-

AUTOMOBILE SHOW TO OPEN ON SATURDAY AS PART OF GREATER ST. LOUIS EXHIBIT

First Public Showing of 1927 Models in United States Will Be Feature of Exposition.

Even the management of the Greater St. Louis Industrial Exposition, which will open Saturday, Sept. 4, acknowledges that the automobile show will be its crowning exhibit feature. At this automobile show there will be the first public presentation in the United States of the new 1927 models of motor cars. The great national shows, at which these are usually first exhibited, are not held until January and February, although the cars may be in the hands of dealers prior to that.

St. Louis motor car distributers, however, will have this year the distinction of making the first public showing of the last word in motor car construction and body lines at the Greater St. Louis Exposition.

To Show All New Models.

With only two exceptions, the passenger motor car distributers in St. Louis will have a complete showing of their lines in the automobile section of the Exposition, and special effort is being made by all of them to display their most attractive body styles.

During the Exposition cars will be changed so that a brougham may take the place on Wednesday of a town car in an exhibit, or vice versa, so that during the 16 days of the Exposition virtually every body type of every motor car represented by a St. Louis distributer will be seen in the automobile show.

The automobile show at the Exposition will be a distinct exhibit, with the motor cars grouped in three tents each 100 feet wide by 300 feet long. But these tents will be like no other tents seen by the St. Louis public. The elaboration of decoration within the tents is said to be almost amazing in its beauty. The roofs of the tents are vaulted with color, and all around the sides the same color schemes are carried out with drapes, so that after the visitor passes through the elaborate entrances which hide the fronts of the tents, he will find himself inside great vaulted arenas brilliantly lighted and decorated.

To Be District Exhibit.

The automobile show will be at the extreme east end of the Greater St. Louis Exposition, immediately adjoining the two great arenas which will be used for the pageant and rodeo. Two long, wide aisles will lead through the tents with motor cars displayed on each side of the aisles, and there will be a direct connection between the tents so that the automobile show will stand out as a separate and distinct exhibit.

The display of passenger cars will be inclusive of cars of every price from the costliest, which is the Rolls-Royce, down to the cheapest, which is the Ford product. Each exhibitor will have a separate space, distinctly marked from that of the other exhibitors, with signs over each exhibit to tell the make of the car. The statement is made by a number of the exhibitors that they will have on display the most beautiful automobiles ever shown.

ployed, or one may make the trip unassisted.

Other Places of Interest.

Tourists find many places of interest in close proximity to the cave. Among these lesser sights is Corydon, county seat of Crawford County, founded a number of years before the Revolutionary War; the William Henry Harrison farm, homestead of the twenty-third President of the United States, which has one of the largest fresh-water springs in this country. Pilot Knob, one of the highest points in Indiana, and Leavenworth, a quaint river town, famous in the days of heavy traffic on the Ohio River. French Lick, renowned as a health resort, is 52 miles to the northwest. Boating, fishing and swimming in Blue River, near the cave, offer additional attractions to tourists.

Wyandotte Cave, consisting of 23 miles of explored passageways, has three separate floors. Nine interesting sights in the cave are the basis for calling it one of the marvels of this country. These aree: Monument Mountain, the Pillar of the Constitution, the Throne and Canopy, the Pillar Palace, the Rock Pillar, White Cloud Hall, the Forest King's Palace, Milroy's Temple and the Palace of the Genii.

Hill 200 Feet High in Cave.

Monument Mountain, a mass of stone of coneshape formation, rises 200 feet from the floor of the cave. Above this towering hill of stone is a great, wide dome of crystal and limestone formation which, when the great hall containing the natural freak is lighted up, gives forth a myriad hues. Around the "mountain" is a wide walk 1300 feet in circumference, while several other winding trails lead up to the peak from the cavern floor. Monument Mountain is in the first great chamber after entering the cave, and vies with the Frost King's Palace and White Cloud Hall as the greatest attractions of the cave.

Frost King's Palace is so named because of the peculiar limestone formations which present the appearance of massive ice and snow monuments. It is a wide chamber with a level floor, and is bare except for the great snowy throne at one end. The snow and ice effect is so realistic that it is sometime before one awakens to the deception.

Nature has been as lavish in making the White Cloud Hall. In the pale light the foramtions overhead are so like the sky on a cloudy day that one wonders if the heavens have not in fact been transplanted to the cave.

To reach the cave, one leaves St. Louis over the Free Bridge to Tenth street, East St. Louis, thence east on Illinois State highway No. 12, through Sandoval and Lawrenceville, where the Wabash River bridge is crossed to Vincennes, from which point one continues east over Indiana highway No. 5 to New Albany, Ind., then southwest on No. 16 to Wyandotte.

WHEN BETTER AUTOMOBILES ARE BUILT BUICK WILL BUILD THEM
AA-8

It is no longer necessary to drain crankcase oil every 500 miles. Four changes of oil a year are enough, when you own a 1927 Buick.

The crankcase in the 1927 Buick is vacuum cleaned! A vital new improvement—the Vacuum Ventilator—draws all crankcase vapors out into the open before they have an opportunity to do harm.

Now, all that is necessary is to add oil occasionally and change 4 times a year, simply as a supercaution.

The problem for years has been to stop oil dilution. And now Buick has accomplished it!

Come in and let us show you the Greatest Buick Ever Built!

PAVING IS RUSHED IN SOUTHEAST MISSOURI

Pavement on No. 16 From Cairo Ferry to Poplar Bluff to Be Fact in Few Weeks.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 28.—The State Highway Department is rapidly connecting stretches of paving on Highway No. 16 (U. S. Route 60), between Poplar Bluff and Birds Point, opposite Cairo. Work is to be completed in the next three and one-half weeks on two stretches of pavement along this route, one stretch between Fisk and Dudley and the other near Morehouse.

Frank B. Newton, division highway engineer, says that 14¼ miles of concrete have been laid from the Mississippi County line west across Scott County and part of New Madrid County, to a point near Gray Ridge, in Stoddard County, and that the remaining 3¾ miles will be rushed to completion. Of the 14¼ miles laid, a section from Morehouse east through Sikeston to the Mississippi County line, 9½ miles, is now open to traffic.

The section from Morehouse west of Gray Ridge, is under construction and closed to traffic. The detour around it extends from Morehouse north to Salcedo, thence west to Cline's Island, over a gravel road. From Cline's Island south to Gray Ridge, 2¼ miles of the detour is a dirt road which is slippery when wet. Motorists driving over this detour should use chains.

ecial to the Post-Dispatch.

POPLAR BLUFF, Mo., Aug. 28. The State Highway Department rapidly connecting stretches of ving on Highway No. 16 (U. S. oute 60), between Poplar Bluff nd Birds Point, opposite Cairo. Work is to be completed in the xt three and one-half weeks on o stretches of pavement along is route, one stretch between sk and Dudley and the other ar Morehouse.

Frank B. Newton, division highway engineer, says that 14¼ miles f concrete have been laid from he Mississippi County line west cross Scott County and part of ew Madrid County, to a point ear Gray Ridge, in Stoddard ounty, and that the remaining 3¾ iles will be rushed to completion. Of the 14¼ miles laid, a section rom Morehouse east through keston to the Mississippi County ine, 9½ miles, is now open to raffic.

The section from Morehouse est of Gray Ridge, is under construction and closed to traffic. The tour around it extends from orehouse north to Salcedo, thence st to Cline's Island, over a gravel ad. From Cline's Island south Gray Ridge, 2¼ miles of the tour is a dirt road which is slipery when wet. Motorists driving er this detour should use chains.

"Concrete pavement construction has not been started on the three-mile section in the St. Francis River bottoms east of Fisk, in Stoddard County. Eighteen-foot concrete extends from Poplar Bluff to the Stoddard County line, and about three miles east of that line. The contractor who has charge of the new work is widening the grade, constructing new grades where curves are to be eliminated and doing other preparatory work.

This section is open to traffic and passable at all times, though some parts, which have been recently graded, require careful driving when wet, Newton says.

A week of dry weather will permit completing the pavement from Morehouse to Gray Ridge, enabling the contractor to hove his outfit to the St. Francis River bottoms east of Fisk.

It will not require more than three and a half weeks' operation of the concrete-paving outfit to complete the pavement in the St. Francis River bottom, and three weeks after completion of the pavement for curing. So this section should be open to traffic in not more than seven weeks after the concrete paving starts, if weather does not delay, Newton says.

During the recent heavy rains about one and a half miles of road between Dexter and Dudley was under water. This condition was due to the extremely heavy rains and inadequate drainage.

Traffic over U. S. Highway 60 is heavier than on any cross-State road in Missouri, except the State highway between St. Louis and Kansas City. Highway 60 starts at Bird's Point and ends at Springfield. Some time ago State highway engineers reported that 1200 vehicles a day used portions of this road.

MERCEDES SPORTS CAR TO BETTER 100 M. P. H.

German Factory Designs Model to Be Fastest Sold to General Public.

In an effort to turn out the fastest "super sports" model for sale to the public, the Mercedes factory has produced a new 6-cylinder car designed to do better than 100 m. p. h. on the road as well as on the track.

The engine has a bore of 3.7 inches and stroke of 5.9 inches. It has a supercharger, magneto and battery ignition, and four speeds forward. The forced feed lubrication is supplemented by an auxiliary oil pump for use at maximum speeds. The chassis is priced at about $9000.

At 3000 r. p. m. the car is supposed to do 100 miles per hour and is said to be capable of considerably higher speed. It is built to compete with the "super sports" Bugatti, which is sold to do 120 m. p. h., and the big Renault, a specially tuned model of which holds the 24-hour record at 107 m. p .h.

AUTOMOBILE SHOW TO OPEN SATURDAY AT ST. LOUIS EXHIBIT

tomobile show at the Greater St. Louis Exposition will be that there will be no admission charge to visit it. The general admission to the exposition of 50 cents covers also the automobile show.

Truck and Accessory Display.

In addition to the complete showing of passenger cars, there will also be displays by local distributers of trucks and commercial cars of various types and sizes, and at least three exhibits of road tractors and several exhibits of passenger busses of the more elaborate kinds. There also will be a showing by a number of accessory houses of accessories, parts, supplies and equipment for motor cars, in the accessory department, which will be a component part of the automobile show.

It is expected that the automobile show section of the exposition will be the first to be completed for the opening as the manager of the automobile show, Capt. Robert E. Lee, has issued instructions to all exhibitors that their exhibits must be in place and ready for inspection by the public by 6 o'clock Friday evening, Sept. 3, so that when the exposition opens Saturday afternoon, Sept. 4, every car will be in place and every exhibit will be manned by salesmen.

One of the outstanding features of the arrangements for the automobile show is that there will not be any insistent efforts to sell every visitor by the salesmen in charge of exhibits. They will be there to show their cars and tell of their merits, and the buying is to be left to the discretion or pleasure of visitors. In other words, the automobile show is to be an exhibition of motor cars rather than a merchandise event.

The automobile show will be under its own management. A show committee, consisting of Edward Weber, of the Weber Motor Car Co.; G. W. Oliver, of the Oliver-Cadillac Co.; W. H. Vesper, of the Vesper-Buick Auto Co., and George Weber, of the Weber Implement & Auto Co., will represent the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association in charge of the automobile section of the exposition. Active management of the show and all of its details wil be in charge of Capt. Lee, who has been manager of all the automobile shows in St. Louis for many years.

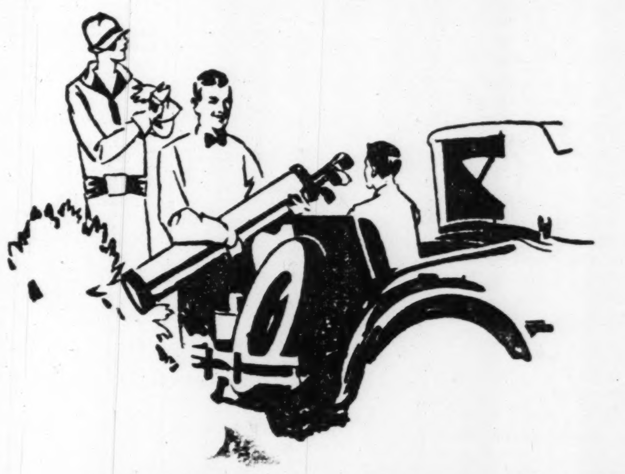
Smart New Rumble Seat For Sport Roadster



Rumble seats are justly popular. They add a smart, rakish touch to roadster lines, and increase the carrying capacity by two passengers.

That Dodge Brothers Sport Roadster now provides this convenience, will be welcome news to thousands.

Like the main seat, it is deeply upholstered in gray Spanish genuine leather, and the seat back is high and well pitched, providing unusual comfort.

When closed, the rear compartment is absolutely water-proof, even in rainiest weather.

Ample space is provided behind the main seat for golf clubs, suit cases, tennis rackets and similar luggage.

STUTZ IN ALLIANCE WITH BUGATTI ABROAD

Moscovics Tells Plans on Return From Europe—Weymann Bodies to Be Made in U. S.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Frederic E. Moscovics, president of the Stutz Motor Car Co. of America, who has just returned from Europe, reports that he has arranged with Bugatti, manufacturer of the famous Bugatti car, to represent Stutz cars abroad, and has brought about formation of an American company to manufacture the light weight, flexible Weymann bodies for motor cars.

To Have Weymann Body Model.

He also said he had virtually completed organization of Stutz distributerships in Europe, expected to export 350 more Stutz cars this year and to export fully 1000 in 1927. "Our production schedule now is 7000 cars a year," he said. "We expect to increase it to 12,000, or 40 cars daily, next year."

Moscovics said that the Weymann concern would take over a plant in Indianapolis, and that Stutz would make a special model to take a Weymann body, which weighs some 200 pounds less than the average closed body. But the Stutz factory is not interested in the Weymann venture, except as he helped it to get started, he declared.

Tells of Monster Car.

Discussing Bugatti, Moscovics says that he holds the center of the racing stage abroad, his cars having won the Grand Prix events, except the recent British race in which a Bugatti was second. "On a recent Sunday," he went on, "cars of Bugatti make won 54 races in various parts of Europe. His remarkable cars are handmade and so are toys for rich men, but their speed and endurance efficiency is truly remarkable."

Moscovics also gave details of the "Golden Bugatti," which is being built to be the world's largest motor car. It has a 176-inch wheelbase, a straight eight engine of 880 cubic inches, and is geared to run 120 miles per hour at 2000 r. p. m. It is to be the costliest of cars. Bugatti is to act as consulting engineer in Europe for the Stutz factory, while the latter's engineers will act in the same capacity for him in this country.

Moscovics said he found that the coach and body specialists of England and France were incorporating radical changes. "I tried out some newer style bodies on new safety Stutz chassis that had been specially designed for American usage, and as a result imported custom jobs will not be the least interesting feature of our cars in the future," he declared.

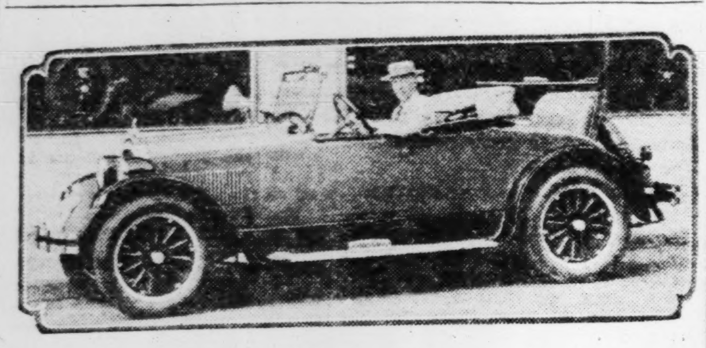
"England knows the safety Stutz principle of construction and accepts it as it does that of its remarkable worm-drive Lanchester, than which the world knows nothing higher in the price class.

"The dealers abroad are where our dealers were 15 years ago," Moscovics said. "The manufacturers abroad do not study the dealers' problems and most of the dealers are not making any money and are in very bad shape."

Lumber for Fisher Bodies.

Through subsidiaries, the Fisher Bory Corporation has acquired 60,000 acres of virgin hardwood timber in Louisiana and Arkansas. The corporation now owns over one and one-half billion feet of standing timber in Northern and Southern hardwood forests.

New Dodge Sport Roadster



The dashing new Dodge sport roadster which has just arrived in St. Louis and is being shown by the Tate Motor Co., Inc.

There is a striking contrast between the tan colored top, the brilliant pheasant green lacquer of the body and hood and the lustrous black of the fenders and shields. The highly polished nickel of the bumpers, lamp rims, radiator shell, windshield stanchions and top bow trimming adds a distinctive touch.

The cushion and back of the rumble seat, like the front upholstery, are of hand-buffed gray Spanish genuine leather, constructed over spring frames to insure maximum riding ease. The back is high and well pitched. The deck is so constructed that when the seat is folded the rear compartment is absolutely waterproof, even in the rainiest weather.

Exceptional space, easily accessible through a large covered opening behind the driver's seat, is provided for carrying golf clubs, tennis rackets, parcels or luggage.

REPORTS MANY HIGHWAYS IN EAST ARE WAVY AND ROUGH

Many stretches of the Eastern highways which have been held out for years as examples of fine paving are today a long way from being patterns in road construction, according to Joseph A. Schlecht, head of the Mound City Auto Co., who has just returned from a 3388-mile tour. Schlecht sold one of the new 147-inch wheel-base Auburn eights to George Corrao of St. Louis, and the latter made the proviso that Schlecht and Mrs. Schlecht accompany Mrs. Carrao and himself on a vacation trip.

Schlect says that a great deal of the Eastern paving is tarvia or asphalt, which has become wavy and rough under traffic far heavier than it was designed to withstand, so that touring in some parts is hard going, no matter how luxurious one's car.

He said that the Auburn eight made the 3388 miles on 254 gallons of gasoline, averaging 13 1-3 m. p. g., and that no adjustments of any sort were necessary.

ANNOUNCEMENT of the great new line of Cadillac cars—50 Body Styles and Types and 500 Color and Upholstery Combinations—met instant response throughout America.

From the public's enthusiastic attitude everywhere, from the eager and interested response to the new line of Cadillacs, it is already apparent that Cadillac's increase of 87.5 per cent over last year is to be overshadowed by a new and larger growth in sales.

It is evident that the personalization of the Cadillac through the offering of 50 distinct Body Styles and Types and 500 Color and Upholstery Combinations is regarded as an achievement crowning all the Cadillac triumphs which have gone before.

The public has always expected, and it has always received, the finest from Cadillac, both in coachwork, and in every phase of performance.

To the Cadillac owner, for instance, the fact that carefully conducted tests have proved Cadillac to be the fastest stock car in the world, simply confirms what he has always known—that his Cadillac is master over every traffic condition. He thinks of Cadillac's great speed as but one of many attributes which combine to make the very word "Cadillac" a short-form expression for perfection of harmony in all phases of fine car performance.

And he is right. For Cadillac's power and speed spring naturally and inevitably from the basic engineering design from which results Cadillac's dependability, durability and low maintenance costs.

The new line of 90-degree, eight-cylinder Cadillac cars is Cadillac's finest achievement in luxury and distinction—and the highest expression of Cadillac's performance supremacy.

We cordially invite you to make the acquaintance of the complete Cadillac line—including the standard models; the distinguished Fisher custom-built series, and the finest and most luxurious creations of Fleetwood.

BASIS FIXED FOR TAX ON CARS IN MISSOURI

Valuation for Personal Property Impost Now Made on Definite Standard.

Because disputes have frequently arisen between Assessors and automobile owners over valuation of automobiles for personal-property taxation, the Automobile Club of Missouri, in a bulletin, gives the values of motor cars as per the figures arrived at by the State Tax Commission following a consultation with officers of the club, automobile dealers' associations and manufacturers.

The action of the State Tax Commission in arriving at a standard of values will result in a fixed assessment scale for automobiles in Missouri.

The figures are as follows: Assessment valuation of 1926 models, 75 per cent of factory price; 1925 models, 50 per cent of factory price; 1924 models, 40 per cent of factory price; 1923 models, 25 per cent of factory price; 1922 models, 10 per cent of factory price, and 1921 models, 5 per cent of factory price.

For a car built prior to 1921, the assessed valuation will be 50 per cent of the 1921 valuation, provided that no car is assessed less than $50.

The bulletins giving the assessments, as fixed by the State Tax Commission, are available to automobile owners at the legal department of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

CHANDLER RUNS 24 M. P. H. IN LOW GEAR FOR 172 MILES

A Chandler Twentieth Century sedan, certified as stock, traveling continuously in low gear for seven hours and five minutes at an average speed of 24.28 miles per hour, broke all time marks for the 172-mile run around Mount Hood Loop, near Portland, Ore. It beat the previous low-gear record by an hour and 47 minutes. For more than seven hours, the Chandler's Pike's Peak motor was making 2810 revolutions a minute. This is equivalent to a sustained high-gear speed of 59 miles per hour.

To make the test more severe, the clutch pedal was removed and the clutch allowed to remain permanently in position, in order to prevent coasting on the long down grades. The car was sealed in low gear and the gear-shift lever removed.

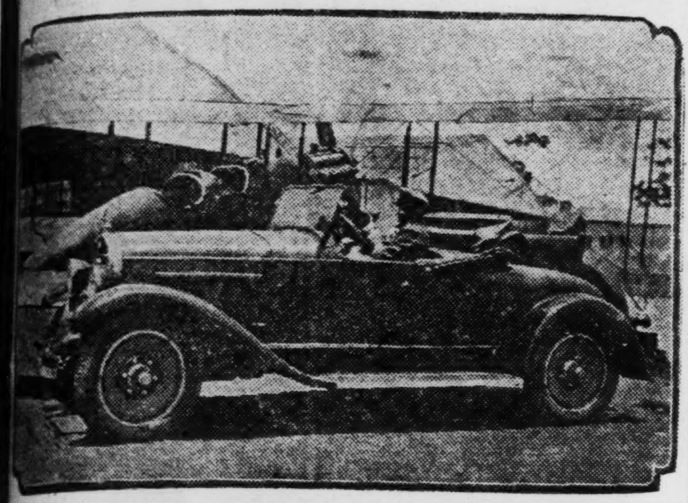
Fancies Aviation Type Car.



Lieut. Eric Nelson, engineering officer of the first 'round the world flight, in his new Wills Ste. Claire roadster. In the car with him is his dog, Nome, which was presented to him by the Mayor of Nome, Alaska, during a stop on the world girdling flight. Lieut. Nelson, who is an authority on aviation and automobile engines, became interested in the Wills Ste. Claire because of its aviation type engine with overhead valve and cam mechanism. He took delivery of the car just before departing on a trip abroad.

BASIS FIXED FOR TAX ON CARS IN MISSOURI

Valuation for Personal Property Impost Now Made on Definite Standard.

Because disputes have frequently arisen between Assessors and automobile owners over valuation of automobiles for personal-property taxation, the Automobile Club of Missouri, in a bulletin, gives the values of motor cars as per the figures arrived at by the State Tax Commission following a consultation with officers of the club, automobile dealers' associations and manufacturers.

The action of the State Tax Commission in arriving at a standard of values will result in a fixed assessment scale for automobiles in Missouri.

The figures are as follows: Assessment valuation of 1926 models, 75 per cent of factory price; 1925 models, 50 per cent of factory price; 1924 models, 40 per cent of factory price; 1923 models, 25 per cent of factory price; 1922 models, 10 per cent of factory price, and 1921 models, 5 per cent of factory price.

For a car built prior to 1921, the assessed valuation will be 50 per cent of the 1921 valuation, provided that no car is assessed less than $50.

The bulletins giving the assessments, as fixed by the State Tax Commission, are available to automobile owners at the legal department of the Automobile Club of Missouri.

CHANDLER RUNS 24 M. P. H. IN LOW GEAR FOR 172 MILES

A Chandler Twentieth Century sedan, certified as stock, traveling continuously in low gear for seven hours and five minutes at an average speed of 24.28 miles per hour, broke all time marks for the 172-mile run around Mount Hood Loop, near Portland, Ore. It beat the previous low-gear record by an hour and 47 minutes. For more than seven hours, the Chandler's Pike's Peak motor was making 2810 revolutions a minute. This is equivalent to a sustained high-gear speed of 59 miles per hour.

To make the test more severe, the clutch pedal was removed and the clutch allowed to remain permanently in position, in order to prevent coasting on the long down grades. The car was sealed in low gear and the gear-shift lever removed.

PRINCE PLANNING CAR WITH TOTAL OF 700 H. P.

Will Install Two 8-Cylinder Engines, One to Drive Front. the Other Rear Wheels.

Prince Djelaleddin of Egypt, whose 355 horsepower motor car has been described in this section, is planning a racer powered with two 8-cylinder engines of a total of 700 horsepower.

He doubhts the ability of his 350 horsepower car to beat the record of more than 170 miles per hour, made on Pendine Sands, Wales, by J. P. Parry Thomas in his "Babs" monstrosity, or to cope with the 1000 horsepower double-engined car that the Sunbeam motor works are constructing.

Plans for his new car provide for one engine driving the front wheels, while the other drives the rear wheels. In the Sunbeam, the two 500 horsepower aviation engines are to be coupled to a common shaft from which there is to be a drive to the rear axle.

GREATER GASOLINE MILEAGE WITH NEW HUDSON 'SUPER SIX'

A $10,000,000 investment was added to the already great resources devoted to the Essex, to make the new all-steel Essex coach possible. Bolted and riveted, it is as rigid as a steel building. The steel used is the same in quality and gauge as that used in cars costing several times as much.

Plate glass is used instead of ordinary sheet glass; genuine walnut steering wheel; a four-blade fan; roller valve tappets instead of the ordinary mushroom type; silent chain front end drive; overstrength frames and axles. Gasoline is strained, air is filtered and oil kept free from dirt by features of Hudson-Essex design without the need of extra accesories.

In the new Hudsons, the most striking advancements are in the chassis, as well as more beautiful and colorful body types. New methods of carburetion and manifolding give substantially increased gasoline mileage without sacrifice of power, performance or flexibility.

"Super-six" performance and smoothness have been bettered. As a further improvement, an exact running balance is now obtained in building the fly-wheel.

REFLEX HEADLIGHTS USE NEW NON-GLARE PRINCIPLE

A new type auxiliary headlight for which great things are claimed is being distributed by the Reflex Auto Light Co., 2328 Locust boulevard, of which G. C. Donnan is manager. It consists of two small, but powerful reflectors, with bulbs, mounted just beneath the regular headlights of a car. The reflex lights are mounted at an angle so that their beams are low down and are directed only in front of the car and to the right over and beyond the road ditch. Their rays are so powerful that they penetrate the glare from an oncoming car and illumine the road for 500 feet ahead. Yet it is said that they cannot glare into the eyes of other drivers.

BROCKMAN ESTABLISHES OLDS AGENCY IN QUINCY

Philip H. Brockman, president of the De Luxe Automobile Co., Olds distributer in St. Louis and adjoining territory, has established the Brockman Automobile Co. to handle Olds cars at 713 Hampshire street, Quincy, Ill. Quincy and vicinity recently was added to Brockman's territory. His service manager at Quincy will be William Tullock, who has worked for years with him in this city.

FAST RUN BY WILLYS-KNIGHT

A stock Willys-Knight six "70," driven by Al Faquier, made a new record between Houston and Dallas by covering the run of 315 miles in six hours and three minutes. Accompanied by a representative of a Texas newspaper, Faquier maintained an average speed between the cities of 52 miles per hour.

CHEVROLET COMMERCIAL CAR LINE NOW COMPLETE

Development of distinct types of commercial car bodies, designed and manufactured in their entirety by the Chevrolet organization, now gives a complete line of Chevrolet-built passenger and commercial vehicles for the first time in the company's history.

Complete trucks are available for immediate delivery. They are the one-ton panel delivery, one-ton stake and one-ton grain-carrying body. The chassis can be furnished also with cab only, suitable for mounting any special truck body.

Substantially the same cab is used on all bodies. It is entirely enclosed and weather-proof and affords the same comfort in the driver's compartment as a Chevrolet passenger car. The doors are 24 inches wide, with high-grade locks. Plate glass side windows are furnished with Ternstedt regulators, as in the standard closed car. A full ventilating windshield, glass rear windows, cab lining and cushion covering of fabrikoid leather, combination stop and tail light and conveniently-placed instrument panel are features. Seats are arranged for easy handling of controls and steering wheel. The cab is Biscay green, duco striped in gold and cowl lights are standard equipment.

For Ending Valve Noise.

To eliminate valve noise do not set valve clearance closer than specified by the factory. Too close an adjustment will burn valve seats, cause loss of power and create noise.

NEW KNIGHT-ENGINED CAR TO HAVE WORM REAR DRIVE

Following the statement by the Knight American Patents Co. last week regarding the coming production of a Knight-motored car of European tendencies by one of the present licenses under these patents, it is stated that this car will appear within the next three weeks. Another inspired assertion is that it will be one of the fastest stock cars ever produced.

It is also definitely stated that it will have worm drive.

SOUTH SIDE BUICK CO. IN FINE NEW BUILDING

Mission Style Structure One of Finest of Its Kind in Middle West.

One of the finest automobile buildings in the Middle West has just been completed at 3654 South Grand boulevard, corner of Winnebago street, by the South Side Buick Auto Co. The new Buick models are being displayed in it today, and the quick service and maintenance departments are in operation.

It is two stories high, of massive concrete, fireproof construction, in the mission style, with bronze finished entrance canopy and attractive Spanish tower at the Winnebago street corner. It fronts 100 feet on Grand and 150 feet on Winnebago street.

Beautiful Showrooms.

The showroom, 100 by 50 feet, occupies the entire Grand boulevard frontage. It has inlaid mosaic tile floor, dark oak paneling to a height of 9 feet, with upper walls and ceiling in soft cream plaster finish. The pillars are paneled to the same height as the walls. The baseboards are green and white veined marble. In the Winnebago street corner is a raised platform for special displays.

The offices, cashier's window and salesmen's rooms occupy the northeast corner of the showroom, with a mezzanine floor for the bookkeepers and file cases. A feature is a pneumatic tube system which extends from the office to the service and parts department, to expedite things for customers as in a department store. There are five trunk telephone lines. An elaborately appointed restroom is another feature.

Immediately behind the main showroom, and connecting with it by an archway hung with portieres, is the used car display room, also 100 by 50 feet, with cream finished walls, red tile effect floor, and large display windows on the Winnebago street side. Here used cars can be displayed as effectively as new cars in the main showroom.

Service and Shop Details.

Next to the rear is the quick service department, also 100 by 50 feet, with service manager's office, benches and tools. The doors from the street are electrically operated. When a patron appears in his car, a man in the service office presses a button and the doors open to permit the car to enter, then close behind it.

In rear of the building is a concrete floored service yard, 100x65 feet. Across its rear end is a well appointed shed in which cars which have been serviced may be placed to await their owners' appearance. There is also a double wash rack, fitted with the most modern car-washing apparatus.

From the quick service department an elevator takes cars that require more than a few minutes' attention to the second floor, 100x150 feet, which is devoted to maintenance shop, machine shop and parts department, the latter equipped with everything in bins and racks to facilitate rapid handling of parts.

Beside the parts department is the machine shop, with lathes and other tools, all operated by individual motors.

Around the main shop runs a series of benches, each with its own motor, water and compressed air supply, and there is an overhead hoist and trolley system. There is ample room and tool equipment for 40 mechanics to work on cars at the same time. A wash rack and a storage room for 20 cars are also on this floor.

On the roof is a duco shop, 50x40 feet, which the firm estimates will save at least a week's time in refinishing used cars which have been reconditioned and rebuilt in its shop.

The rooms in the tower will be used for storage of records and filing.

Charles Parks is general manager of the South Side Buick Auto Co., and George Lake is office manager.

VACATON TRIP OF 8000 MILES IN MOTOR BUS

General Motors Officials and Party Go Even Farther Than St. Louisan Did.

The enjoyable features of the motor bus vacation taken by Edward Weber, president of the Weber Motor Car Co., of St. Louis, and a party of friends recently are emphasized by a similar tour made by Charles F. Kettering, vice president and head of the research department of the General Motors Corp., and one of the really notable automotive engineers.

Weber and his friends used a Studebaker mus, powered with the "Big Six" Studebaker engine, and were able to make as fast time as they desired over a route from St. Louis to Estes and Rocky Mountain Parks, Colo., Colorado Springs and back home.

Made Very Fast Time.

Kettering and his party used a big Yellow motor coach similar to a number that are running between St. Louis and Kansas City an dother places. They drove the bus 8000 miles, traversing 13 states in less than a month, their route running from Dayton, O., to Indianapolis, St. Louis and Kansas City, then over the National Old Trails via Trinidad, Col., and Flagstaff, Ariz., to San Diego, Cal., north over the Pacific Highway to Seattle, Wash., east to Spokane, Wash., then to Yellowstone Park, Cody, Wyo., Cheyenne, Wyo., Denver and back to Dayton.

The men in the party took turns driving and, according to Kettering, the large part of the trip was made at speeds varying from 45 to 55 miles per hour.

They used a standard Model "Y" Yellow coach. It was christened "Miss Ohio" and the inside was finished in brown mahogany with brown curtains, brown mahogany panels and gold trim. The furnishings likewise were in brown and mahogany and included a kitchenette with a Frigidaire, a radio set and an electric phonograph. The radio reception was through a "hat rack" aerial.

Traveled in Comfort.

A tent, cots, leather reclining chairs, blankets and pillows were carried. A 10-gallon water tank under the hood of the coach heated water for toilet purposes. In short, the vehicle was made a comfortable place to live 24 hours a day.

The party out of doors practically every night. Absence of rain or bad weather during most of the journey made use of the tent practically unnecessary. Several of the party would sleep in the coach, two would sleep on top of it and the others would sleep just outside. Hotels were used only when overnight stays were made in larger cities.

Meals were taken in restaurants or hotels practically all the time. Equipment was carried to prepare food but it was found that during the time the coach was idle and food was being cooked many miles could have been covered and more of the country visited.

It was voted to eliminate cooking in favor of seeing more of the country.

Cost $8 a Day Per Person.

The cost of the trip averaged $8 a day per person, including gasoline, oil, incidental expenses of the coach, meals, ferry charges, hotel bills when stops were made in a city, and similar expenses. The average distance covered each day was 195 miles, making the cost compare favorably with a similar vacation taken by any other means of transportation.

All roads, bridges, curves and tunnels which can be negotiated by the average auto can be traveled by a motor coach. One tunnel was just wide enough for the coach to pass through with about an inch to spare. One side was scraped slightly to insure ample clearance on the other.

There were no traffic accidents and at no time was the party in danger.

The top of the coach was the favorite riding place. It gave a splendid view of the country, was cool, and was found perfectly safe. In another tour it is planned to arrange seats on the top for observation.

In the party were Kettering, his wife, his son, Eugene; C. S. Mott, another General Motors vice president; Adam Schantz, a friend of young Kettering; W. A. Christ, vice president and engineer of the Delco Light Co., and Julius Stone, president of the Seagrave Fire Equipment Co., Columbus, O.

Dangerous Driving Practice.

Driving closely behind another car when crossing a railroad track is bad policy. Its driver may not have looked where he was going, or may have planned to get over just in time.

OWNER OF CARDS CITY'S OLDEST DISTRIBUTER

Sam Breadon Also Has Sold Pierce-Arrows Longer Than Anyone Else in U. S.

Sam Breadon, owner of the Cardinals, who are making such a fight for the National League pennant, has the distinction of being the oldest Pierce-Arrow automobile distributer in the United States and also is the oldest St. Louis distributer handling one line of cars continually.

Breadon began to distribute Pierce-Arrow cars in September, 1903. At that time the Pierce-Arrow, which was to become one of the world's acknowledged quality car leaders, was a one-cylinder machine with engine on the rear axle. Breadon managed to sell one of these in St. Louis. Then came a two-cylinder model, then a four-cylinder. In 1907, the first six-cylinder Pierce-Arrow was offered. Eventually the big "66" model of 100 horsepower was developed and discontinued in 1917 because of war conditions.

In its place was developed the "33" model, and now the Pierce-Arrow line consists of the big six of 110 horse-power and the smaller series "80," which was introduced in July, 1924, and has won a distinct place for itself as a luxurious automobile of moderate price.

The newest of the "80" models, now being shown by the Western Automobile Co., which is Breadon's distributing company, is a two-passenger coupe which has a number of interesting features.

For example, it has a sewed-in leather foot and heel pad for the driver, in front of the pedals. The cushions and the pitch of the steering wheel are extraordinarily well calculated for riding comfort. It has special tubular weather strip and tubular rubber cushioning for the lid of the rear deck on one type of this model and for the rumble seat with which another type is fitted.

But, after all, it is the general motoring comfort which has been built into this Series "80" that impresses even more than its road performance and style.

STAR SIX CLIMBS HILL THAT ONLY STAR FOUR CONQUERED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 28.—A Star six has just been driven to the summit of Pickle Hill, near Culver City, which has grades up to 53 per cent to a point where the figures "57" may be seen for miles, and has pitches up to 60 per cent on the upper slopes. Two sets of chains were used on each rear wheel. A year ago a Star four was driven to the top of the same hill. No other car ever has performed this feat. Some years ago, when an effort was made to drive a car to the top, it became unmanagable, turned over a number of times as it rolled downward, wrecked itself and nearly killed its driver.

SCOUT MERIT BADGE EXHIBIT AT COLISEUM

Sixteen Troops Give Preferences for Demonstration of Various Sections.

Applications for booths at the Merit Badge Exhibit to be conducted by the St. Louis Council of Boy Scouts at the Coliseum Oct. 28, 29 and 30 have begun to be received at local headquarters, 16 troops having expressed a preference as to the merit badge they wish to demonstrate. A total of 62 badges will be shown, besides another booth containing Troop 71's natural history museum, this being the largest and most complete of any troop collection in the city.

The purpose of the exhibit is to put into tangible form the requirements of the different merit badges, showing what each stands for, what must be done to earn it, and the practical application of the knowledge gained by working for it.

Booths to Be Graded.

Thus the booths will contain articles constructed as part of the requirements, demonstrations by the scout exhibitors, collected material having a bearing on the subject, and anything pertinent that the boys believe will make the exhibit more interesting. Considerable leeway will be allowed the troops, space limitations being the most important restriction imposed.

The booths will be graded according to their bearing on the badge, workmanship, and the ingenuity displayed in selecting and arranging the material. The winning troop will receive an award.

To Pass On Applicants.

Of the 16 troops who have applied to date, only two have overlapped, Troop 1, Overland, and Troop 85, both having requested foundry work. When all or nearly all of the badges have been applied for, a committee will pass upon each applicant, and will make the final assignments, attempting to keep as closely as possible to the expressed preferences of the troops.

The badges requested so far and the troops asking for them are: Archery, Troop 21; art, Troop 60; athletics, 3; automobiling, 64; aviation, 235; camping, 46; bookbinding, 155; leather working, 122; pottery-making, 52; cycling, 59; electricity, 89; foundry working, 85 and 1, Overland; masonry, 81; music, 7, Webster Groves; reptiles, 103. This last badge, reptiles, will be exhibited for the first time at this show, the badge having just been created this spring.

ACTIVITIES OF GIRL SCOUTS

The local Girl Scout office was in the charge of Alice Field of Troop 2, Webster Groves, last week, while the regular officers were attending the Girl Scout camp at Jefferson Barracks.

Troop 23 of the St. Marcus Church has been given a silk American flag by the Women's Relief Corps of the G. A. R., Department of Missouri, through Mrs. Anna Wohosky, ex-president of the department. Although this troop was organized only recently, they have four full patrols, under the leadership of Bertha Wittler, Arline Kraftmeyer, Marie Schlensker and Melva Russler. The girls are at present specializing on second-class compass, signalling, and first aid, although several of the members are away on vacations. Marie, Marion and Doris French are in Pennsylvania, Arline Kraftmeyer is visiting near Chicago and Dorothy Doerres is in Arkansas. In the next two weeks Bertha and Marie Wittler will go to the Ozarks, Beaulah Standfuss will visit Piedmont, Mo., and Melva Russler will be at the camp at Jefferson Barracks.

Ruth Bedell's Cypress Patrol entertained Troop 2, Webster Groves, a week ago last Monday, dividing the girls into two "Indian tribes," competing against each other in "Indian" games. The Wampemnagen tribe was the winner, emerging from a tie by beating the Pottowattomies in the final event, a "single combat," wherein the warriors hopped on one foot and tried to throw their opponents off balance.

The events consisted of an "archery contest," in which the girls threw matches, with a needle in one end and a paper feather on the other, at a target; "bareback riding" with two chairs, the riders working their way to the end of the room by changing from one chair to another, and pushing the first in front of them; "walking in high places," in which a girl walked along a string stretched on the floor, continuously looking at it through the wrong end of a pair of opera glasses; and a "windjammer" or candle-blowing contest.

The patrol winning each event had its symbol placed on a totem pole erected for the purpose. After the finale the girls gathered around a campfire built in back of the church and roasted marshmallows and listened to Indian stories told by Ruth Bedell.

Boy Scout Activities

West District.

Troop 1, Richmond Heights, gave an entertainment and ice cream social Aug. 12 to raise money for the West District cabin to be built at the Irondale reservation. About $28 was cleared and turned over to Deputy Commissioner Birge. The program illustrated the requirements of scouts, from Tenderfoot to Star Scout, each requirement being demonstrated by the boys. Between demonstrations stunts were given by the different patrols. A three-piece band, composed of two members of the troop and one other boy, furnished the music. After the program was completed, ice cream and cakes donated by the scout mothers was served.

William Fry, curator of Troop 71's natural history museum, the largest troop museum in the city, returned from New York last week. While in New York he visited the American Museum of Natural History and talked with curators there, receiving information on how to conduct the collection to the best advantage. The troop will exhibit the museum at the merit badge show to be held by the St. Louis Council Oct. 28 to 30.

Fifteen scouts were present at the last meeting of the troop. Scoutmaster Smith was absent, his place being taken by Assistant Scoutmaster Voigt. Games were the feature of the meeting, "Indoor Capture the Flag" and "Spin the Hun" proving the most popular.

South District.

The Indian patrol of Troop 104 is leading the field by 20 points in an interpatrol contest started by the troop a few weeks ago. The lead is very small, however, and the contest will continue for several months. The winning patrol will have its name engraved on the troop's contest cup.

The last meeting was given over to the inspection of equipment owned by the patrols as a whole. The inspection of individual equipment will be held in three weeks. Five points toward the interpatrol contest are given to the winners of each inspection.

North District.

At the suggestion of the scoutmaster, the members of Troop 3 planned an overnight hike to the Lions' Den reservation last Thursday, the hike to be held in the near future. This troop has put in its application to take charge of a booth at the Merit Badge Exhibit to be held.

Although most of the scouts of Troop 92, of the Samuel Cupples School, are at camp or out of the city, the troop is still meeting, the scoutmaster, 10 scouts and one visitor attetnding last Wednesday. "Indian ball" was the main game of the evening, with "Taking the Neckerchief" holding second place. A new recruit, James Martin, signed up for membership in the troop. The scoutmaster announced the date for a swim for the scouts in their private pool.

Suburban District.

Members of Troop 3, Webster Groves, have received notice that the troop, which suspended operations for the summer, wil resume meetings next Thursday. Clarence Duenke, Harry Burney and Earl Peters of this troop spent Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of last week at the unattached camp at the Lions' Den reservation.

CHINESE STUDENT AT ST. LOUIS SCOUT CAMP

Will Become Chief Executive of Movement at Home When He Returns.

Yieng Swe Wu of Sio-Chi, Wusieh, China, is one of the students at the fifth national training school for Boy Scout executives, which opened yesterday at Irondale Reservation, the St. Louis Boy Scout summer camp, 80 miles south of St. Louis.

He is 32 years old, and has been in the United States for the last two years. His studies in this country are financed by the provincial government of Kaing-Su, China, and when he returns he will reorganize and assume the chief executive post of the Boy Scouts in this province.

He holds an A. B. degree from the Southeastern University of Nanking, China, and has been taking post-graduate work in physical education at Teachers' College, Columbia University, New York, where he will be awarded his M. A. degree in the fall. He also spent a period at the Chicago Medical School studying anatomy.

Yieng is an ardent advocate of the students' movement in China, and predicts the next few years will see many changes in that country, due to the influence of the younger generation. He states that in many ways the work of "China for the Chinese," inaugurated by the students, is bearing fruit, and that a new meaning of patriotism is sweeping through many parts of China.

Yieng is an accomplished musician, playing the Chinese banjo, violin and flute and has given a number of recitals in New York City. On his way to St. Louis he was the guest of officials of the Sesquicentennial Exposition in Philadelphia.

He states the Boy Scout movement is popular in China, and also that physical education, which heretofore has been considered of little importance there, is now a factor in many of the schools.

He expressed a cordial appreciation of the spirit of fair play the United States has shown to China, and said that in many parts of his Country the United States is considered China's best friend among the nations of the world. He decried the rumors that there was any danger of Russian influence toward Bolshevism, saying China had had fair treatment from Russia but had no intention of adopting soviet methods of government.

MUCH PERMANENT WORK AT LIONS' DEN CAMP COMPLETED

804 Scouts, 104 Scoutmasters and Other Adult Leaders Accommodated During Season.

Construction of permanent equipment at the Lions' Den camp has progressed rapidly in the last month, and last week marked the completion of several projects. The camp spring has been walled up and improved so that the water now has a fall of 15 inches. The camp kitchen, for unattached scouts, a roofed-over area measuring 14 by 20 feet, has been completed, and two army field ranges installed. The same type of kitchen, only smaller, and with only one stove, is being built in each of the 12 troop camps. The camp director's cabin, located so as to overlook the entire grounds, has also been completed.

From its opening in July to the present time, the camp has accommodated 804 scouts and 104 scoutmasters, assistant scoutmasters and other adult leaders. Of the scouts, 740, or 92 per cent, have camped at least one night at the reservation.

Six class A camps, or those furnishing complete equipment to the campers, and five class B camps, in which the troop furnishes its own equipment, are in use at the present time. Each of the camping troops is graded according to conduct, work accomplished and observance of camp regulations. Troop 101 received the highest grade last week, scoring 99 per cent.

CHILD WITH CLOTHING AFIRE RESCUED BY A BOY SCOUT

Victim Rolled Until Flames Were Extinguished, by Edward Komlosy, 13 Years Old.

The Boy Scout motto of "Be Prepared" for emergencies was successfully applied a week ago Friday by Edward Komlosy, 13 years old, of 7540 Ethel avenue, a second-class scout of Troop 1, Richmond Heights, whose quick actions saved a child from possible death from burns.

Teddy Vickery, 7 years old, of 1031 Commodore drive, Westmoor, was watching a bonfire in front of his home when a gust of wind blew a burning paper against his suit, igniting the trousers. Komlosy was passing some distance away, cut hearing the child's screams, rushed to him, and threw him to the ground, rolling him until the flames were extinguished.

Teddy was badly burned about both legs.

Germany to Lose First Rail Bridge.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Germany is about to lose its first and oldest railway bridge. When in 1838 the Prussian Government constructed a railroad from Berlin to Potsdam, it became necessary to span the Havel River with the Baekebruecke, then the only railway bridge in Germany. The only other steam line, which ran from Nuremberg to Fuerth, had no bridge. The Baeke bridge was never intended for the heavy locomotives of modern life. It must now give way to a more modern and stronger structure.

Works 2 Days, Gets Life Rail Pass.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—To be a minister, if only for 36 hours, as was the case for the late Herriot ministry, has its consolations. Andre Hasse, former Minister of Public Works, indicated this to newspaper men who offered their sympathy as he passed through the lobby. "I didn't entirely lose my time," he said. "Look at this." And he held out a permanent pass good on every French railroad. "It is a little perquisite of former Ministers of Public Works which has just reached me."

PARENTS FOR 8 YEARS AIDED VETERAN WHO ENDED HIS LIFE

Father Says Herman Dubin Deserted Family When Opposed in Marriage Plans.

Jacob Dubin of 3036 Thomas street, commenting on the suicide verdict in the death of his son, Herman, 24-year-old war veteran, who threw himself under a street car Tuesday night, said yesterday that he and his wife, Sarah, had done everything they could to take care of the young man.

"We supported him for eight years after he got out of the army," said Dubin. "He joined the service against our advice. We thought he was too young at 15 to go to war, and obtained his discharge at much sacrifice to ourselves. He changed his mind after he was discharged and re-enlisted and was sent to France. When he came home he didn't want to work or study and lost his Government pay by refusing to continue at school.

"Then, this year, he got married, without having a job. We tried to dissuade him and offered all the help we could. We knew that he was unable to support himself or a wife. He would have nothing more to do with us because we opposed his marriage. It isn't fair for people to think that his family abandoned him. He abandoned his family."

Young Dubin's funeral was held yesterday under American Legion auspices.

NEW M'CRORY STORE TO BE OPENED TOMORROW

Local Link in National Chain Occupies Handsome Building at Sixth and St. Charles.

The new McCrory 5 and 10 Cent Store, at the southwest corner of Sixth and St. Charles streets, will be opened to the public tomorrow morning. It is a link in the long chain of such establishments operated by the McCrory Store Corporation, which had headquarters and buying offices in New York.

Standing in a new and handsome building, on the former site of the Columbia Theater, the store is in a location long familiar to shoppers. The building, three stories in height, and fronting 105 feet on Sixth street by 125 feet on St. Charles, is faced with terra cotta, and is strikingly attractive in exterior appearance.

The interior, as it will be viewed by tomorrow's visitors, is equally attractive. A large soda fountain is a central feature of the main floor. Wide aisles, to prevent crowding. The entire main floor is viewed upon entering the front doors, and a large part of the basement is visible from the same point, through a special arrangement of the front stairway. The stairway is of brown marble. Another large stairway leads to the basement from the rear of the store.

The downstairs sales floor includes the sheet music department, with special attention to radio programs. A sanitary luncheonette is another downstairs feature. Both floors will have the benefit of the modern ventilation system, which makes a complete change of air every two minutes, the air being cooled in summer and heated in winter.

While full displays will be made in all the sales lines, the company plans to call especial attention to its electrical fixtures department, which will be housed in a booth of special design. Officers from the New York offices of the McCrory Corporation will attend the opening.

ACCLAIM GERMAN MOVIE STAR

Berlin Gives Asta Nielsen Ovation on Return to the Stage.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Seldom has an actress returning to the scene of her first triumphs been given a more enthusiastic reception than Asta Nielsen, motion picture star, received at the hands of Berlin theater-goers on the occasion of her reappearance, after 20 years, on the legitimate stage.

Her debut in the title role of Sheldon's "Rita Cavallini" was the occasion of an endless series of ovations. After the performance admirers waited patiently for more than an hour in front of the theater in the hope of carrying her on their shoulders to her hotel. The actress had escaped, however, in a taxicab.

SHORT WAVE RECEPTION

British Amateurs are getting many short-wave stations in this and other countries. It is not unusual, says "Wireless World" for British amateurs to work American stations with only two and a half watts power today, and this magazine asks correspondents to list only the more distant and important stations heard, to conserve space.

An interesting list of stations heard is submitted by H. Hizett of Sheffield, who received 223 foreign stations during the 30 days between May 22 and June 22. His list includes 134 United States Amateur stations, from all but the Pacific Coast districts, 22 in Brazil and one or more from Canada, Chile, Porto Rico, Poland, Algeria, Tunis, Austria, Hong Kong, India, Jugo Slavia, Italy, Denmark, Finland, Spain and Sweden. He says he uses an indoor aerial, and describes his set in British terms as an O-V-I.

Another British amateur named T. N. Baskerville living in Hale, Cheshire, says he recently heard both our Arctic explorers. He picked up the short-wave stations WNP, on the Bowdoin, MacMillans' ship, and also VOQ, the SS Morrissey, of the American Museum near Etah. A station in Honolulu is also on his list.

NAVY DAY ON LAND AND SEA

Navy Day will be celebrated over the air again this year on October 27th, when about 33 stations co-operate in broadcasting special programs emanating from, or pertaining to, the Navy. In some instances, Naval, or Marine bands will render selections and in others Naval officials and officers will give popular talks on the Navy, in commemoration of the birthday of Theodore Roosevelt, a staunch Naval supporter.

It is now planned to use a hookup of about ten stations on the old WEAF chain, and probably eight on the Radio Corporation chain, while about fifteen independent stations will broadcast individual programs.

The co-operation of the amateurs who are members of the Naval radio reserve is assured and the masters of merchant ships have been asked to listen in for the programs and messages.

New Mark for DX Fans.

A broadcasting station in San Salvador began service on March 1, 1926, Consul W. J. McCafferty, San Salvador, advises the Department of Commerce. The wave length is 482 meters and the power 500 watts. The equipment is of American manufacture. Public interest is high, and the sale of receiving sets is expected to increase rapidly.

SHORT WAVE SIGNALS COVER GREAT DISTANCE

New System of Naval Communication Is Much Cheaper Than Long Wave Transmission.

Recent radio tests between the naval stations at Bellevue, D. C., and Mare Island, Cal., have demonstrated that the use of the short-wave lengths 13.1 and 13.4 meters is practical in daytime transcontinental radio communications, according to naval radio engineers. This is believed the first time signals have been transmitted successfully for 3000 miles in daylight on as low as 13.1 meters. Although the navy is proud of its achievement, it is planning to try out even lower channels to ascertain what shore waves can be used practically.

The aim of this particular experiment at the Naval Research Laboratory is toward economy, since short-wave messages can be transmitted with less power than when long waves are employed. The naval Annapolis arc station, for example, uses about 350 KWs in its long-range transmissions, whereas the recent tests succeeded in shooting code messages to San Francisco with around 250 watts. If this research work proves practical, it is hoped that eventually the navy may erect 1-KW transmitters, which can carry long distance on short waves. They would cost around $10,000 as against the present cost of high-powered long-wave stations approximating a million dollars. Such a saving would be far in advance of any practical economy plan contemplated and would be reflected also in the maintenance of stations, if only a hundredth or even a tenth of the power was required.

Although the 13.1 and 13.4 trails were one way; that is, from Bellevue to the Pacific station, there is no reason why a similar transmitter located in San Francisco would not carry eastward equally well. As it happened, the Mare Island station answered on the 70-meter wave, a channel found very serviceable at night.

The naval radio engineers are seeking even shorter waves available for practical use in daylight. They are attempting to disprove a theory that the channels between 10 and 14 meters are useless for this type of service. Their present plans include tests with wave lengths around 10, 11 and 12 meters. These channels are being tested out experimentally, to pick out a practical short-wave route for day traffic. They are not assigned exclusively to the navy. The present short waves allocated to the naval service lie within the 16.6 to 18.7; the 21.4 to 26.3; 33 to 37.5 and 66.3 to 75 meter bands.

Naval experts point out, however, that these short channels are useful only in point-to-point service. The vagaries of the short waves with their strange inaudibility at some points, make those channels impractical for broadcast purposes or transmitting general dispatches to the fleet, the ships of which are at different distances from the transmitting station.

AMERICAN RADIO IN AUSTRALIA

Almost eighty percent of $235,000 worth of apparatus shown at the Australian Wireless Exhibition at Melbourne, was of American manufacture, a report to the Department of Commerce states.

More than 55,000 people visited this show, the largest of its kind ever held in the southern hemisphere. The 48 booths showing wireless apparatus of every type, created great public interest and has already resulted in increased sales. A large display of home made equipment was on view but the tendency was to center attention on complete sets with simplified methods of tuning.

Hundreds of new members have enrolled in the listeners-in league and the outlook for future radio sales is reported as favorable.

GERMAN RADIO EXPORT

Although Germany is manufacturing considerable radio apparatus, and exported 3,123 metric tons in 1925, an increase of about 85 per cent over the exports in the previous year, German dealers are making inquiries as to American-made sets and parts, according to advices reaching the Department of Commerce. Among the inquiries received were requests for data on radio sets, tubes and parts, as well as crystal and accessories.

Germany's radio exports appear to be going chiefly to Great Britain although Japan is now purchasing some apparatus. The total value of German radio exports last year was $7,037,700, a gain of over $2,366,000 over the 1924 figures.

SURVEY OF RADIO BEACONS

The first Department of Commerce airplane is now making a survey of established radio beacons along the air routes used by the Post Office, Navy and War departments. Assistant Secretary MacCracken has assigned this plane official duties in an effort to carry on the Department's new work of supervising commercial aviation. Tests of radio communication with landing fields and other craft in the air will be made shortly to perfect the radio control system planned for all national airways.

WEATHER NOT CAUSE OF POOR RECEPTION

Scientific Tests Show That "Sky Waves" 100 Miles Above Earth Are Principal Factor.

NEW York, Aug. 28.—Substantiation of the theory that radio waves split into a ground wave and a sky wave in passage from transmitter to receiver, has been found in preliminary compilation of data secured by radio engineers of the General Electric Co. in broadcast wave propagation tests conducted from Jan. 1 to May 8.

According to the split wave theory, one wave passes along the earth and the other, passing into the air probably about 100 miles or so above the earth, continues until reflected down upon the receiver by a semi-conducting layer in the atmosphere. The ground wave weakens rapidly and becomes negligible about 200 miles from the broadcasting station and reception at greater distance is due entirely to the sky wave.

In conducting propagation tests with the co-operation of radio listeners in every part of the country, the engineers were seeking, among other things, the possible relation of radio reception and the condition of the weather. The weather condition is known to depend largely on the barometric pressure over various parts of the country and radio engineers endeavored to find a relation between reception records and the barometric pressure through which the waves had passed. From present analysis of data it seems probably that barometer and weather have only a minor effect on radio conditions. The data do show that signals received at short distances are stronger when they have come along a region of even pressure than when they have come from a low pressure area to a high pressure area, or vice versa. At distances of more than 400 miles, however, the conditions on the surface of the earth seem to have little or no effect. On the basis of the split wave theory of transmission, it becomes obvious that if the sky wave goes through an arc reaching 100 miles or more above the earth, weather conditions, which are known to go up less than 10 miles, can have but little effect upon it.

Reports received and tabulated by the General Electric engineers were made on all stations received by the listener and they covered practically all stations on the air, on wavelengths covering the entire band reserved by the Department of Commerce for broadcasting and on powers from 50 watts to 5000 watts.

The investigation of fading indicated that there had been a change in conditions from January to February. In the study of January reports it was found that most of the bad fading reports came from a definite region between 200 and 400 miles from the transmitter. The February reports, however, indicate that equally bad fading occurred at all distances beyond 200 miles and was not confined to any particular zone. Ten per cent of the reports record bad fading, 35 per cent slight fading and 55 per cent no fading. They emphasize the fact that this is now one of the worst obstacles to perfect broadcast service and they further indicate that increasing the power of the broadcasting stations is the only remedy for fading now known.

In studying the average signal strength at various distances from a broadcasting station the engineers found, from the reports, that the signals decrease rapidly in volume for the first 300 miles. This is true of all transmitters, no matter what the power. The high power stations, while they decrease just as rapidly, give stronger signals at all distances. From 300 to 800 miles away the signals seem to remain fairly constant in strength and seem to depend largely on the radio conditions. In January signals were stronger 600 miles from a transmitter than at 300 miles. In February, this was no longer true. In fact, there is considerable evidence that radio reception was everywhere poorer in February than in January. As indicated, this change in transmission is due to some change in the upper atmosphere rather than a change in weather conditions on the earth.

Points of Frequency Condenser.

Among the good points of a straight line frequency condenser are: Proper spacing of plates so that there is no danger of shorting of plates, a good contact between the rotary plates and the rotary plates binding post terminal, and a good shaft bearing and general rugged construction.

CHANDLER celebrates another anniversary in its long, successful career with the most impressive line of new six-cylinder models now before the public . . .

Nineteen of them—all brilliant examples of the farthermost progress in automotive engineering . . .

Altogether finer in quality, and in style, and in comfort, luxuriously upholstered, inimitable in performance . . .

Equipped with every important asset the modern motor car should have . . . and priced much lower than Chandler motor cars have ever been priced!

That, told quickly, gives you the news of the great new Chandler models for 1927—the most appealing line of six-cylinder motor cars the industry has yet produced.

Chandler has stopped at nothing to make these cars America's greatest Sixes. Certainly no manufacturer could be in a sounder position to offer such values.

Next to the great enthusiasm and loyalty of owners, the best recommendation Chandler has is its long continuous record of success—a company with no bonded indebtedness, no mortgages or liens, no bank loans, no outstanding notes—a company with the remarkable strength of assets 20 to 1 over liabilities!

Where such strength exists, you can expect a finer product—and that is the story in a nutshell.

HEALTH INSTITUTE FOR CATHOLIC TEACHERS

Meetings at Cathedral Hall Will Open the Fall Campaign.

The health institute for Catholic school teachers to be held on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 1 and 2, at Cathedral School Hall, marks the climax of a year's successful program of parochial school health work, and at the same time opens the fall program, according to the annual report submitted yesterday by the Parochial School Committee of the Tuberculosis Society of St. Louis, of which Mrs. A. B. Harrington is chairman.

Last year's program was ushered in by the first health institute of its kind ever held in the United States, the report stated. Since then, the institute has not only proved its value to the extent that plans have been made to continue it as an annual feature of parochial school health work in St. Louis, but a number of other cities throughout the country are adopting it as an integral part of their school health programs.

Closely allied with the health institute for teachers and immediately following it was the introduction of a uniform course of health study in the parochial schools, which has resulted in health attaining the same emphasis in the curriculum as reading and arithmetic, according to the report. The course not only provides classroom instruction but teaches health habits to be practiced in the home.

Weight Is Barometer.

In connection with the health program in the school, the Volunteer Committee of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae last year weighed and measured approximately 3500 children in 11 parochial schools. This phase of child health activities is essential, according to the report, for the weight of a child is more or less a barometer to his physical condition. If the child is underweight, he should be examined for physical disorders.

The healthiest school contest, which has been an annual feature for a number of years, and which is a contest to determine which schools have the best health program and the greatest number of children in normal physical condition, was again held last spring and served as an excellent check on the health work in the various schools, according to the report. This year's contest was participated in by more than 40 schools, all of which showed a large number of effective health activities.

An innovation in last year's program was a series of health talks by prominent St. Louis physicians for the Catholic boys and Catholic girls' high schools. A class in nutrition and general health was also conducted for mothers and other interested members of Catholic women's organizations, which brought about greater co-operation in health work between the school and home, the report pointed out.

To Form New Committee.

An exhibit on child health work carried on by the Missouri Chapter of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae and the Tuberculosis Society was displayed at the Women's National Exposition in St. Louis last spring, and the same exhibit formed part of a window display in Chicago at the time of the Eucharistic Congress, thus widely advertising the progress of health work in parochial schools of St. Louis, declared the report.

One of the outstanding individual features of the year's work, which is an outgrowth of the Health Institute, is the plan for the establishment of a sight conservation class for the children of the parochial schools, which will be undertaken by the City Circle of the Federation of Catholic Alumnae. The salary of the teacher has been guaranteed, and visits are now being made by members of the federation to homes of prospective pupils to arrange for admittance to the class.

The formation of a new Parochial School Health Committee, composed of representatives of various agencies interested in health work in parochial schools, including the St. Louis University Medical School and the Tuberculosis Society, to coordinate the various health activities, to program health work and to work out plans for the execution of the general health program is the most recent project, exclusive of the pending health institute. Its first official duty has been the sponsoring of this year's institute.

The program of the institute will include topics of interest both for teachers and mothers, and special arrangements are being made this year for mothers to attend.

FRENCH JUDGE WHO FREED HUNGRY BREAD THIEF DIES

Paul Magna of Chateau Thierry Won Fame 30 Years Ago by Decision.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28. — France's "good Judge" is dead. Thirty years ago nobody would have had to ask his name. Everybody would have known it was Paul Magna of Chateau Thierry, who acquired a world-wide reputation by acquitting a poor woman who had stolen a loaf from a baker's window.

The judgment in this case was long and started with many clauses beginning with "Whereas" until it reached the conclusion that it was far more reasonable to acquit a thief who had acted under the irresistible impulse of hunger than one who pleaded a pathological condition as excuse for a perfectly unnecessary theft.

Officially his judgment could not be accepted without protest. The public prosecutor appealed but so great an outcry followed both from the public and the Parliament that the Appellate Court preferred to confirm the judgment. It has been generally said, however, that the judgment prevented Magna's being promoted from his country judgeship. He was 78 when he died.

OBSCURE AFRICAN CHIEF WON FAME AIDING WHITES

Prime Minister of Uganda, Just Retiring, First of Race Decorated by England.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—There is a romantic story, of an obscure African chief's rise to fame and his recognition by the Imperial Government, behind the announcement of the resignation of Sir Apolo Kagwa, the Kati Kiro, or Prime Minister of Uganda.

Sir Apolo Kagwa was the first African native to be given the K. C. M. G. (Knight Commander of St. Michael and St. George.) Sir Apolo is nearly 80 years old and has been head of the native cabinet for 35 years. He came first into prominence about 1886 when King Mwanga of Uganda decided to destroy the Christian faith there and to begin a massacre of Christians.

Kagwa and another denounced the King. Kagwa's companion was killed, but Kagwa escaped. He later took a leading part in the building of the present day Uganda, was native statesman, administrator and general, leading an army in many of the religious struggles which troubled the land. More than once he was a great power in the maintenance of the Christian faith and many times helped the laborers to transport clay for building the cathedral.

He came to England in 1902 as an official representative of Uganda at the coronation of King Edward.

POINCARE KEEPS WINDOW OPEN

Friends Think Premier Unduly Indifferent to Danger.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—"Bah," is the only reply Premier Poincare has vouchsafed his friends who, objecting to his working, unafraid, at a wide open window.

The spectacle of France's new Premier and Minister of Finances, working away at his desk in the study of his home near the Arch of Triumph, has not a little surprised the passersby in that quarter of Paris—and has not a little alarmed the police. For the Premier leaves his window wide open. M. Poincare has never been treated tenderly in speech or print by the Communists and anarchists and his friends are stressing without success the extreme imprudence of showing himself so nonchalantly as a possible target. They urge upon him either to close the blinds, or if he will insist on fresh air while he works, to have at least a pair of plain clothes men outside his house.

MALE BRUNETTES WINNERS

Boy Flapper Type Fails in London Beauty Show.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—"Ladies Prefer Brunettes." This was recently demonstrated at Victoria pier pavilion at Folkestone, where a male beauty show was held and women were the judges. Fat men, thin men, young men, old men and middle-aged men competed—50 of them in all.

Jack Dwyer, a tall, well-groomed, slender brunette, with Grecian features, won first prize. His hair is slightly curly and was cut short. None of the boy flappers with plastered-down hair got near the prize money. Jimmy Adams, 25, also brunette, was second. Henry George Dodd, who has such light-colored brown hair that it comes dangerously near being reddish gold, won the third prize. Only one of the competitors had a mustache. He was a tall Sergeant-Major of fine proportions, also a brunette. Though he ran the third man a close race, his mustache defeated him.

IT is so ancient a tradition of the American stage that virtue flourishes only in small communities and better still, in the open country, that Mr. Cohan's disposition to take just the opposite view steals on the audience unaware.

For four score years now the term "that city chap" has been one of opprobium in the American drama and when, in "The Home Towners," an old grouch from South Bend, Ind., comes on to New York bristling with suspicion that the New York family into which his old pal is going to marry must inevitably be a bunch of harpies after his money, the play-ridden audience assumes docilely that the suspicions are only too well founded. They were the more pleasurably surprised on Monday night when the young Wall Street broker turns and snarls as follows:

"You're a dangerous man, Bancroft. So are all your kind when they're unchained and turned loose. You've been sitting back all your life in a one-cylinder burg with a baby brain, taking an imaginary bird's-eye view of a big city. From your popular magazine standpoint, there's no honesty or decency or fair dealing going on here at all, except amongst derelicts and human dumb bells. New York's rotten. Everybody in it. Six million people—all crooks. That's the average opinion of all you disappointed old small-town pills that never had gumption enough to drag yourselves out of the village drug store. Well, when you get back to your God-fearing, pure and proper pin-headed pals around the post office, you can have the satisfaction of telling them how you frightened the life out of four of the big city sharpshooters, and made them run to cover the minute you whipped out your weapon—the meanest, sharpest and most treacherous weapon in the world—A Main Street mind. That's what you shoot with—A Main Street mind, without any sense of discrimination. You're a dangerous man, Bancroft—outside of your own community where you understand and you're understood. You're a bay boy to have around. . . I'm glad I got a chance to tell you this. I hope it sinks in. . . Good night."

As a conscientious war correspondent, I feel obliged to report that these unamiable sentiments were applauded with vehemence on Monday night.

IT would be interesting to know the psychological history of Mr. Cohan's selection of South Bend as the villain in his new play. George Cohan Again Gives His Regards To Old Broadway

Playwright Sasses America Back in His New Offering "The Home Towners"—Earl Carroll Charges, and Maybe Gets, $100 for Opening Night Seats to His 1926 "Vanities."

By ALEXANDER WOOLLCOTT.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.

THE deepening animosity between this large, sinful city and the rest of America, which may possibly lead some day to its expulsion from the Union, is the source of an increasing tide of literature and to this New York's favorite son now adds his contribution in the form of a wrathful comedy called "The Home Towners." This new play, written, staged and presented by (but not with) George Cohan, had its first hearing in these parts on Monday night of this week. In it Master Cohan sasses America back. In it he once more give his regards, his fond and loyal regards, to Broadway.

IT is so ancient a tradition of the American stage that virtue flourishes only in small communities and better still, in the open country, that Mr. Cohan's disposition to take just the opposite view steals on the audience unaware.

Tottering greybeards in the audience Tuesday night reminiscent of the time, way back in the spring of 1926, when the quaint New Yorkers of that era were shocked and outraged because a mere $25 was fixed as the first-night price for the lovely Raquel Meller.

Of course the chief revenue derived from such a price scale should be measured in terms of the publicity the sheer extravagance

BEHIND THE SCREENS

BOOKWORMS among the movie patrons will be delighted to learn that "The Scarlet Letter," the photoplay in which the elder Miss Gish is appearing, can now be obtained in fiction form. It has been novelized for Cinema Art. In poring over my copy of that enterprising magazine, these old eyes were especially taken by the moment when Dimmesdale, speaking in the quaint language of old New England, says to Hester Prynne: "No, Hester, I am going to fade out of the picture."

With the titling on "Syncopating Sue" completed by Ralph Spence, Corinne Griffith began shooting (Aug. 23) on "The Lady in Ermine." The supporting cast includes Einar Hanson, Francis X. Bushman and Ward Crane. Einar Hanson is the Swedish actor who played opposite Miss Griffith in "Into Her Kingdom," her last release.

"The White Black Sheep" will be the working title for the next picture starring Richard Barthelmess, instead of "The Four Feathers." "The White Black Sheep" is the title of an original screen story written for Barthelmess by Violet E. Powell. Production has commenced on the West Coast.

Warner Oland, Lucien Littlefield and Harold Lockwood Jr.—the latter, 16 years of age, being the son of the lamented screen star—have been added to the cast of "Twinkletoes," with Colleen Moore in the stellar role. In this cast, Kenneth Harlan plays the lead opposite the star; Gladys Brockwell and Tully Marshall have character parts. Others in the cast are John Kolb, Polly Moran, Donald Stuart, Florence Lawrence, Carl Stockdale, Frankie Bailey, Aggie Herring and William McDonald.

Dorothy Mackaill is at First National's New York studios, where she is playing one of the featured roles with Jack Mulhall in "The Charleston Kid."

Ben Lyon is preparing to start work shortly on his next feature vehicle, "Not Herbert," which Ray Rockett will produce in New York.

Following the completion of "For Alimony Only," in which she played the starring role, Leatrice Joy is enjoying a brief vacation prior to the start of her next picture, "Nobody's Widow." Clara Beranger is preparing the screen version of this stage play by Avery Hopwood.

William Boyd and Elinor Fair, the leads of "The Volga Boatman," once more are playing together in "The Yankee Clipper," which Rupert Julian is directing for DeMille.

Russia's tragedy in the war and the days of revolution that followed have been emphasized anew during the filming of Pola Negri's newest starring vehicle, "Hotel Imperial." This picture, which Erich Pommer, the German producer, is making as his first film under the Famous Players-Lasky banner in America, is laid on the Austro-Russian frontier during 1915.

Raymond Hitchcock has been signed by Marshall Neilan to play an important role in the latter's production, "Everybody's Acting." This marks Hitchcock's re-entrance into pictures after an absence of five years. He will be seen in a cast headed by the star, Betty Bronson. Other important parts are taken by Louise Dresser, who will have the role of the hero's mother, and Lawrence Gray, the juvenile lead.

Patsy Ruth Miller, Louise Fazenda and Nat Carr have been added to the cast of "What Happened to Father," at the Warner Bros.' Hollywood studio. Walter Merrill, who recently signed a contract with the Warners, will have the leading juvenile role. The other members of the cast are Vera Gordon and George Sidney.

"The Missing Link" will be Syd Chaplin's next picture. The story is by Charles Reisner and Darryl Francis Zanuck. The authors have not divulged what it is all about but the story is near completion and work will start in the next week.

At the Movie Houses

LOEW'S STATE — Rex Ingram's "Mare Nostrum," with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno. On the stage: Jan Garber and his orchestra.

AMBASSADOR — Continuation for the week of "Pals First," with Lloyd Hughes and Dolores Del Rio. On the stage a presentation in three acts.

MISSOURI — Marshall Neilan's "Diplomacy," with Blanche Sweet and Neil Hamilton. On the stage, eight phonograph artists, featuring Billy Murray and Henry Burr.

GRAND CENTRAL AND LYRIC SKYDOME — "The Marriage Clause," with Billie Dove. Grand Central stage: "Hot Stuff in Alaska," with Wolf, the motion picture dog.

CAPITOL—Rudolph Valentino, in "Monsier Beaucaire."

KINGS AND RIVOLI — Rudolph Valentino in "The Eagle" and Claire Windsor and Owen Moore in "Money Talks."

NEW ST. LOUIS—"The Honeymoon Express," with Irene Rich and Helene Costello, and five acts of vaudeville, featuring Frank Silver, composer of "Yes, We Have No Bananas," and his orchestra, and Stan Stanley, comedian.

Clever—These Heathen Chinee

THE shade of the Emperor Ming Huang, the Beneficent and Most Worthy of the T'ang dynasty, has gazed down upon China for many centuries without noting any changes in Chinese drama. Since his demise, which occurred about 700 B. C., Ming Huang has been venerated by Chinese actors. Countless millions of joss sticks and numberless firecrackers have been consumed in honor of his memory.

Once every year the lao-shengs, the hu-shengs, hsiao-shengs and even the lowly hua-liens burned reams of red prayer papers as a gesture of honest supplication to their patron saint. For Ming Huang, the Beneficent, is credited with being the founder of the Chinese theater.

Now the shade of Ming Huang is disturbed. Devil machines with a single eye and mounted on long wooden legs have been brought to China. Eye-disturbing lamps that spew eerie floods of light have been in operation. Sport caps and leather puttees have been imported. A motion picture studio has come to ancient Cathay.

Soon, it is said, the first motion picture made in China by Chinese will be presented in America. It is doubtful whether American audiences will relish the production aside from its aspect of novelty. Probably the idea of the producers is to supply the laundry trade exclusively.

If this first picture is anything like the Chinese stage plays the hearts of transplanted Celestials in the Chinatowns of New York, San Francisco and Seattle should be made happy.

Not for Just a Day.

A Chinese play takes days, sometimes weeks, before the climax is reached. When a Chinese goes to the theater it is with a serious purpose to be amused and to meet his friends. During the course of the play boys go through the audience selling watermelon seeds, li-chi nuts, fried peanuts, rice soup and tea. The cries of the vendors mingle with the screeching of the actors, and soon there is competition. Usually the actors win. They have been trained to screech for prolonged periods.

It is not known what the length of the Chinese motion picture is. However, it is safe to assume that it must be at least 25 reels long, otherwise it will fail to attract patrons. The Chinese theater-goer does not look for quality. He desires quantity above all things.

Owners of Chinese theaters in America will not have to bother with the presentation method, which includes a symphony orchestra, organist and a revue. They can retain their native orchestras, consisting of four musicians, who perform on the weirdest instruments ever heard by Occidental ears.

To bring the spirit of all this to Western audiences, if Chinese motion pictures gain popularity, it will be necessary for theaters to be remodeled so that no ventilation is possible. The fire laws will have to be amended so that the audience can smoke the single pipe the management keeps for its comfort.

If the Chinese custom is followed by the audience it will be quite permissible for Mrs. Smith to stand up in her seat and shout a greeting to Mrs. Jones who is sitting seventeen rows away.

During the nineteenth reel, when Yo Ho and Ming Toy are struggling in the yellow current of the

Eva Le Gallienne And Her Aesthetic Civic Play House

The Old Fourteenth Street Theater in New York, Long the Home of Blood and Thunder Drama, Being Put in Shape for a Repertoire Season for "High Brows"

LAST season when Eva de Gallienne was playing here in St. Louis to the rather sparce audiences which enjoyed her performances in "John Gabriel Borkman" and "The Master Builder," she announced that she was going to do a little uplifting of the drama on her own hook this year and, as a result a bewildered old theater in New York is now being cuffed and banged about by a horde of workmen in the middle of the block that leads from Sixth avenue to Seventh on Fourteenth street. This is in the interests of the higher art and of the long list of illustrious names — Ibsen and Tchekov, Shakspeare and Maeterlinck—that are to take possession of the house when the resolute Miss Le Gallienne has turned the old Fourteenth street theater into the Civic Playhouse with a most aesthetic repertory season at no more than $1.50 an aesthete. It is a worthy gesture which can be met by nothing but encouragement from all earnest advocates of dramatic uplift. But the fact remains that it has even now removed one gorgeous splotch of color on Fourteenth street.

Vanishing Billboards.

THIS was the delirious patchwork of posters that used to hang in front of the grimy old lobby when the house was given up to a particularly lurid form of Italian melodrama. Crude, poisonous patchwork it was, in orange and scarlet and arsenic green—leaping out from the gray rows of hardware shops and second-hand clothing stores that stretch to the elevated. They screamed at you the most incredible stories of battle, murder and sudden death, but their favorite theme was the defense of outraged virtue. The bright, pink heroine, bound and gagged on the floor, the deep orange villain twirling his black mustaches with an air that indicated he was up to no good, the vermilion hero, pop-eyed and vengeful—it was a scene painted with the sort of gory delight that could be duplicated only by the same posters in front of the same type of theater in the twisted, clamorous streets of Naples. Undoubtedly the chaste, laconic billboards of Tchekov and Maeterlinck will add a classic touch to this medley on Fourteenth street. But the seven buckets of blood spilled over the old Italian posters were certainly cheerier.

Exit Gallery Gods, Laughing.

INSIDE the old building, other changes are going on; it would be interesting to know just what alterations make a theater that once housed "Il Bacco della Morta" fit for "John Gabriel Borkman." But you can't see much through the cloud of mortar dust and the workmen aren't telling. The old theater has a puzzled, helpless look as if wondering what will happen to it next; its shock at the appearance of the austere "Borkman" after "The Kiss of Death" might very well prove fatal. Meanwhile you can only speculate on what an old theater thinks about when it is transformed from a paradise for Italian gallery gods to a temple of art.

Vieux Colombier.

WITH all this renaissance on Fourteenth street, it is depressing to report that a little theater in Paris is now on the debit side of the good, the true and the beautiful. When Jacques Copeau comes over to direct the Theater Guild's production of "The Brothers Karamazoff," in New York, he will leave the movies romping over the classic interior of his Theatre du Vieux Colombier. This is the tiny experimental playhouse on the Boulevard des Batignolles which was duplicated almost exactly by M. Copeau when he gave its name and aspect to the old Garrick on Thirty-fourth street, through his gallant season of French repertoire in New York in 1917. It was an undisputed success d'estime, but this had little effect on the box office, so little in fact, that the company was disbanded before its season closed and Mr. Otto Kahn, finding himself with an unexpired lease on his hands, offered the house on speculation to an earnest if impoverished theatrical flock rising from the ashes of the Washington Square Players. This at least would keep the theater from utter darkness though the new group was not expected to do much more, and the failure of their first venture, "Bonds of Interest," justified these amiable prophecies. With a certain delirious obstinacy, however, they insisted on following this with "John Ferguson," which after a few weeks led to a faint

BRITISH SCIENTISTS FOX-TROT AND CAN DO THE CHARLESTON

Sir Oliver Lodge and Other Eminent Savants Strut Their Stuff at Oxford.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Oxford has discovered that scientists can fox-trot on occasion. The British Association wound up its recent conference with a ball, and Sir Oliver Lodge and many of the other savants danced the Charleston and the fox-trot with an enthusiasm which showed they are not a step behind the youngsters.

Many of the papers read at the annual conference were popular in nature. Classicists are inclined to resent the predominance which science is gaining in British schools are somewhat amazed at the publicity given to the conference whenever it wandered into a discussion of popular subjects.

He will appear as soloist in a pair of symphony concerts here during the coming season.

suspicion that after all there might be something in this new organization called the Theater Guild.

So long ago was this, as our rapid theatrical history goes, that M. Copeau will return this season to find the children and grandchildren of that first Guild venture cavorting over the stage he remodeled in the genial contortions of the Garrick Gaieties.

"The Oceana Roll."

At about the time when "Alexander's Ragtime Band" was blaring away on every newfangled gramophone in the country, another American folk-song was a runner-up in close competition for popularity. It was called "The Oceana Roll" and was written by Lucien Denni, who came from Kansas City and was, like his rival, unknown to fame. But, while the creator of "Alexander" may be said to have emerged slightly from total obscurity, the "Oceana" composer has been lost in a shuffle of mildly successful ditties with names like "Skylark Love." Now we learn that he has written the music for "Happy Go Lucky," which will be produced in New York in September. If it is half as good as the rapturous reports from rehearsals seem to indicate, it will justify the first furore over "Oceana" and give history a chance to repeat itself after all these years.

Yiang Tse Kiang, nothing can prevent the musicians from climbing out of the pit and getting on the stage where they will have more elbow room. It matters not that the audience's view of the picture is blocked.

Wanted: An Abacus.

If the Chinese producers start making super-jeweled spectacle films a person can go to the movies on a Monday afternoon and leave two weeks later without having stayed for the finish.

Of course the Chinese motion picture field offers an ideal pasture for scenario writers. They can take an idea and incorporate the history of China from earliest times, throw in a few Marco Polo travelogues, a bit of recent revolutions and any number of Boy Emperor incidents without fear of their piece being cut by the directors. The directors will aid the scenario writers by adding a dozen reels the writers never thought of.

GEORGE COHAN AGAIN GIVES HIS REGARDS TO OLD BROADWAY

provokes. In the sermons alone it inspires on the Roman waste of New York before the fall, such publicity must run into money. Whether, after the producer's guests and the press seats have been taken from the ticket rack, there are many actually available for sale is more than your correspondent knows and how many of that scant remainder are finally sold at the advertised price is more than anyone knows. One toys happily with the thought of a block of unsold seats being dumped suddenly on the market at curtain time and of its being possible to pick up some fairly good ones in the cut-rate marts at a beggarly $78.50. I can only report, however, that the S. R. O. sign stood in the lobby at noon on the day of the premiere.

On Wednesday, "The Ghost Train"—this is one of those gooseflesh melodramas about a legend that on a lonely stretch of railroad track, on the anniversary of a hideous wreck, a special train of cars makes it eerie (railroad joke) way. A gang of crooks take advantage of this legend to run an actual train of contraband across a frontier. They are foiled by the genial idiot who clutters up the stage with his harmless antics for three acts and then, it need hardly be added, turns out to be a secret service sleuth in disguise. The piece has been running interminably in London where the role of the idiot is played by Richard Bird, the extraordinary young actor who created a hubdub in this country last year by his superb performance of Marchbanks in "Candida." The night I saw "The Ghost Train" at the Prince of Wales' Theater in June, I was torn between my regret at seeing Mr. Bird involved in such rubbish and my interest in the fact that the proceedings on the stage were being breathlessly followed by a delightful and uncritical couple in the row behind me—E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe.

Robert Benchley has returned limping from Hollywood to resume his post as critic for "Life." A monstrous rumor that he had sustained an injury to his kneecap by the no mean feat of falling down a flight of stairs in a bungalow was straightened out by one of those explanations which seem so simple after you have heard it. They were steps leading down to the cellar.

Then George S. Kaufman, author of "The Butter and Egg Man" and "The Cocoanuts," has returned to his post as dramatic editor of the Times. He has been spending the heated term at Lake Placid at his simple thatched cottage Placidosis, writing the while a new sequel to the Dinsmore series. This interesting literary project seemed to have no finer inspiration than his feeling that there really ought to be a book entitled "Elsie in the Pants Business."

VEILED PROPHET TO DESCEND INTO CITY FROM AIR

1925 Queen Will Help Receive Him at Lambert Field Oct. 5—New Brilliancy for Parade This Year.

Oct. 5 and 6 are the dates for the Veiled Prophet's appearances in St. Louis this year. As regularly as Labor Day comes on its statutory Monday, and Thanksgiving on its prescribed Thursday, so the first Tuesday of October is the day for the Prophet's arrival here, and the night of that day is given to his parade. By the arrangement instituted four years ago, the following Wednesday night is that of the Prophet's ball.

Lambert-St. Louis Field will be the Veiled Prophet's port of entry to the city. The tradition is that the Prophet arrives there by airplane. A reception committee will go to the field to see the descent from the clouds, or however it is that His Mysterious, etc., actually gets there. The Prophet's Queen of 1925, Miss Maud Miller Streett, will accompany them.

Announcement will be made later of the character of the parade to be given this year. New electric street lamps, recently installed along the western part of the accustomed route, will add to the brilliancy of the spectacle.

New plans of decoration and entertainment are planned for the Prophet's Ball. The crowning of the 1926 Queen will be the central event of this annual opening event of the social season.

SAYS LUDENDORFF THINKS HOHENZOLLERNS ARE UNFIT

German Paper Turns Against General and Prints Bit of Postwar History.

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—Gen. Erich Ludendorff, former first quartermaster general considers the Hohenzollerns unfit to become monarchs in Germany in the event of a change of government, according to the Bayrische Umschau, a paper which formerly supported Ludendorff, but is now bitterly opposed to him.

Apparently talking "out of school," the paper reveals a bit of interesting postwar history. It charges: "In well informed Bavarian circles it is known that it was none other than Ludendorff who offered to crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria to launch his candidacy as Emperor of Germany in place of the 'incapable' Hohenzollerns. And it was Crown Prince Rupprecht who declined and reminded the Prussian general of his obligations toward the House of Hohenzollern."

The paper charges that Ludendorff's "political swell-head" has made a tragic figure of a once famous man. To understand the paper's anger it must be recalled that Ludendorff recently published a broadside against his former comrade-in-arms, in which he stated that "Crown Prince Rupprecht will never become King of Bavaria nor Emperor of Germany despite the efforts of his Jewish friends."

FRENCH SENATORS JUST MUST HAVE THEIR HARD-BOILED EGGS

Chamber Tries to Limit Menu as Economy Gestures and It Almost Causes Row.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Ham and hard boiled eggs, for a moment, put a strain on relations between the Senate and the Chamber, just before the opening of the recent National Assembly at Versailles that threatened to wreck their cordial co-operation.

In a spirit of economy, the Chamber officers decided to limit food supplies to beer, lemonade, citronade and syrups. The Senate officers argued that the meeting might be prolonged, and put in a request for ham and hard boiled eggs. Slowly and reluctantly the Chamber gave way on each point, only making a real stand on the egg question. Eventually, eggs were added to the menu and coal veal as well as ham, gryuere cheese, yaouirt, or curdled milk, leaves of the lime tree and camomile to make these "infusions" beloved by the French whom age or infirmities bar from tea or coffee.

RAZING FAMOUS MUSIC HALL

Oxford Theater in London to Give Way to the Movies.

LONDON, Aug. 28. — London's most famous old-time music hall, the Oxford, on Oxford street, is falling before the blows of wrecking crews and theater-goers of the '90s are lamenting the passing of the house where Marie Lloyd, Dan Leno, Vesta Tilley, Bessie Bellwood, Harry Lauder, Harry Randall and other variety stars won their greatest triumphs.

The Oxford recently had been the home of stock productions, and the last play given in it was "A Royal Divorce." Celluloid actors will soon be appearing in a new theater on this site. Mary Pickford will replace Vesta Victoria of "Waiting at the Church" fame, who is one of the few music hall celebrities of 30 years ago who are still holding their own on the variety stage in competition with jazz bands, Charleston dancers and coon shouters. Like Harry Lauder, Vesta Victoria seems to go on forever.

PARDON WON BY NOVEL SWIM

Holland Queen Honors Petition Presented From Water.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28.—During the heavy floods in Holland last January, when, despite chilling winds, Queen Wilhelmina made long journeys through the flood-swept regions in a naval rowboat to comfort the afflicted people, she saw one day an elderly man jump into the water and approach the vessel. Having reached it, the man, an innkeeper of Venlo, handed to her majesty a petition asking pardon from a recent judgment which had committed him to prison.

The Queen was somewhat frightened by this unusual way of submitting petitions, but she recovered herself immediately and promised the dripping man to consider his request. Now the bold swimmer has been informed that the Queen has complied with his demand and granted him a pardon.

AIRPLANE GIVES FIRE ALARM

BERLIN, Aug. 28.—An airplane as fire detector was the role recently played by the double decker which daily takes the Berlin papers to the watering places of the Baltic.

As the pilot, Herr Heft, flew over the island of Usedom, he observed how a stroke of lightning set fire to a large barn. Nobody in the nearby farm house nor in the other adjacent buildings seemed to have noticed the flames. So the pilot descended as low as possible and kept circling about the farm house in the hope of rousing the owners by the noise of his propeller. His efforts finally were successful, for soon he saw the peasants emerging. They rescued the burning barn just in time to liberate a large herd of sheep.

Simple Remedy For Bad Stomach Gives Quick Relief

No Need of Strong Medicines or Diet—Famous but Simple Old English Recipe Keeps Stomach in Fine Condition, Banishes After-Eating Distress.

If you are a victim of Stomach Trouble—Gas, Sourness, Pain or Bloating—you may have quick and certain relief by following this simple advice.

Don't take strong medicines, artificial digestants or pull down your system by following unnecessary starvation diets.

Never hurry your meals or overeat of anything, but within reason most folks may eat what they like—if they will keep their stomach sweet, clean and active and free from the souring acids that hinder or paralyze the work of digestion.

And the best and easiest way to do this is to follow every meal with a small amount of pure Bisurated Magnesia—a pleasant, harmless and inexpensive form of Magnesia that promptly neutralizes acidity and keeps your stomach sweet and clean.

A week's trial of Bisurated Magnesia, which may be obtained from any druggist for only a few cents will easily convince you of the great value of this old English recipe.

Be sure and get BISURATED Magnesia—not a laxative.

COLONIAL HOMES DOT JAMES RIVER BANKS

Probably More in That One Section of Virginia Than in Any Other Spot.

NORFOLK, Va., Aug. 28.—Dotting the banks of the historical James River are to be found as many or probably more, colonial homes than are to be seen in any other one section. Just as the early history of Virginia and America sprang from the Jamestown colony at the mouth of the James River, so along its banks stand the palatial estates of many old families.

One of the oldest homes is Bacon's Castle almost at the river's end. This residence of the friend of Gov. Berkley was seized as a "fort" during Bacon's Rebellion and has since borne the name, "Bacon's Castle."

Built by Arthur Allen, who came over from England in 1649, Bacon's Castle's steep roof shelters a spacious home in which are to be found the low ceilings, oaken crossbeams, massive walls and huge chimneys of colonial days.

Above Bacon's Castle on the lower James River in Virginia and looking down upon the river from a high bluff is Carter's Grove. Within its spacious halls are still to be found the gashes placed there by the sabres of Tarleton's raiders in Revolutionary days.

The structure was erected in 1751 by Carter Burwell, and although its colonial beauty is marred by modern porches, Carter's Grove in its brick walls, old-fashioned glass-panneled windows and beautiful finished interior, remains as one of the finest relics of colonial residences to be found in Virginia. The mansion walls are paneled to the ceiling. Its central hall is spanned by a wide arch.

Salute Fired From Historic Guns.
By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The 21 guns used to salute King George on his arrival at Cowes Castle, where he went to attend the recent regatta, are relics of one of the most remarkable royal toys ever known. They once provided the armament of a large and perfect model of a battleship, named the Royal Adelaide, which was constructed for William IV and sailed for his amusement on Virginia water. The guns were presented to the royal yacht squadron headquarters by King Edward.

SEVEN-STORY BUILDIN AT TENTH AND SPRUC LEASED TO BAG C

Structure Has 120,000 Square Fe Space—Negotiations On for Co On Morgan Street.

By Berry Moore.

The Chase Bag Co. has acquired a long-time lease of the massive seven-story building at the southwest corner of Tenth and Spruce streets owned by Washington University. Isaac A. Hedges, manager of the Cupples Station and custodian of the real estate holdings of the university, negotiated the lease.

The building has a floor area of 120,000 square feet, exclusive of shipping platforms, and is served with a Terminal switch with a daily capacity of 10 cars. It constitutes virtually an addition to the Cupples Station group of buildings and warehouses, owned by Washington University, and is one of the comparatively few buildings with comprehensive shipping facilities that was available in the industrial area.

The bag company was established in 1847, and is the oldest textile bag company in America. It has its main offices in the Fisk Building, New York, with factories in Buffalo, Kansas City, Chagrin Falls, O.; Goshen, Ind.; Memphis, Minneapolis, New Orleans, Toledo, Milwaukee and St. Louis. E. K. Ludington is president of the company, and William Murdock is manager of the St. Louis plant.

The bag company has been located on Main street between Chestnut and Market streets for more than 50 years.

Cupples Station Facilities.

The Cupples Station group was conceived 30 years ago by Robert S. Brookings. With the resources of the late Samuel Cupples available, the first buildings were constructed. The buildings have shipping platforms in the rear, with tracks entering the basement stories. A feature of the plant is a narrow-gauge railroad. This is at the disposal of all business concerns in the block.

Efforts have been made several times to acquire this group of buildings in connection with plans for further development, suggested by its proximity to the railroad yards of Mill Creek Valley. The system embodied in the Cupples Station group has served as the model for similar development in other cities.

Cupples Station, acquired by gift from the late Samuel Cupples, is one of the largest sources of revenue to Washington University.

New Morgan Street Building.

Negotiations were practically concluded during the week for other large quarters. Large building plans are involved. Announcements in these instances are withheld. The most important of these contemplates construction of a building on a Morgan street corner for a nationally known automobile concern, according to Harold Wilson, sales manager of the Wagner-Grant-Bell Co., which is handling the negotiations.

Proetz & Schnell also are handling negotiations of importance.

With the report that Henry R. Weisels, president of Henry R. Weisels, Inc., is in New York endeavoring to interest Lee Shubert in a new theater building enterprise, the block bounded by Twelfth boulevard, Olive, Pine and Thirteenth streets has assumed new importance. Negotiations, it is understood, contemplate construction on the Olive street side of this block, at the southwest corner, of a theater for the Shuberts, who now occupy the Rialto, on Grand boulevard. As proposed, the theater would form an attractive adjunct to the 37-story hotel projected for the Twelfth boulevard frontage of this block. The impression is not given that the Shuberts have made any overtures i but they are re lessees of the ater.

While it is sti stage, the hotel to take concret of the Thirteent block is assured of land by the Railroad Co. fo ing to which added.

While it is still in the promotion stage, the hotel project promises to take concrete form. The future of the Thirteenth street side of the block is assured, with the purchase of land by the Missouri Pacific Railroad Co. for a 17-story building to which 10 stories can be added.

Downtown values connected with night life and with theatrical facilities have been stimulated by the opening of the new Ambassador Theater at Seventh and Locust streets. This continues the movement which earlier was forwarded by the opening of Loew's State Theater at Eighth street and Washington avenue.

The new theater, and the 17-story office building of which it is a part, stand just east of the Mercantile Trust Co., whose president, Festus J. Wade, was one of the first to appreciate the great possibilities of this block.

A number of offices in this building have been leased to real estate firms during the last week. The building is tenanted chiefly by lawyers, corporations and real estate agents. It recently was remodeled extensively.

E. M. WORTHINGTON'S SIXTH APARTMENT NEARLY READY

Ellsworth, $650,000 Building at West Pine and Lindell, Already Houses About 20 Tenants—Eight Stories Tall.

Finishing touches are being put to the sixth fine apartment building erected in St. Louis in five years by E. M. Worthington. This is the $650,000 Ellsworth Apartments, construction of which began only five months ago at the northwest corner of West Pine boulevard and Newstead avenue, a block south of the St. Louis Cathedral.

Worthington's first major structure of this sort in St. Louis was the 450-room Gatesworth Hotel, on Union boulevard north of Lindell boulevard, which he completed in December, 1921, and sold in 1922. The following year he built the Worthington, which he still owns. It has 32 apartments of six rooms and two baths each, and is at the southwest corner of Belt and Waterman avenues.

Next came the Lindworth, with 60 three-room efficiency apartments, at 4368-74 Lindell boulevard. It was completed in October, 1924, and sold last October. The twin nine-story structures of the Marworth Apartments, Maryland and Taylor avenues, were completed a year ago and sold recently to Dr. Rolla Little of East St. Louis. That record was beaten in the 10-story, 32-family Leonardo Apartments, 4160 Lindell boulevard, which Worthington sold in November, 1925, three months before he completed the building.

Worthington financed the Ellsworth himself. It is eight stories tall, in terra cotta and buff-colored brick. Ell type of construction gives everyone of the apartments an outside exposure. They range from one room to five, with spaciousness and efficiency features in attractive combination.

About 20 tenants already are occupying their suites, and Worthington said yesterday that he expected to have half of the building occupied Sept. 1. These tenants all were among those who made reservations while the building was under construction. No advance deposits were accepted, but the names of applicants and the apartments they chose were listed to give them priority.

A large entrance lobby is done in a Spanish style with decorative mottled plaster and furniture carrying out the architectural idea. At the electric elevator shafts on each floor, also, there is a lobby restfully furnished with chairs, a davenette and mirrors.

BRINKOP TO BUILD FLATS IN ST. ANTHONY'S PARISH

The Christian Brinkop Real Estate Co. will improve the tract of ground on Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues formerly owned and operated as Schray's Florist. Modern single flats of four and four and five and five rooms will be erected.

There is a demand for flats in the subdivision by Catholics of St. Anthony's parish, because of its convenience to the church and school, it being located only half a block away. The flats are to be constructed to meet individual requirements by purchasers.

HENRY R. WEISELS CO. SELLS 20-FOOT LOT ON PINE STREET

Henry R. Weisels Co., Inc., reports the sale fo property at 1215 Pine street for Charles Kratz to A. M. Frumberg and Berjamin G. Brinkman. The lot has a frontage of 20 feet on Pine street and a depth of 109 feet and is improved with a two-story building. Frumberg and Brinkman recently purchased the property at 1216-18 Olive street and it is understood that the Pine street purchase was made in connection with the erection of a new building to cover the entire site.

NEW POLICE HEADQUARTERS BUILDING CONTRACTS LET

The general contract for the excavation and foundation for the new police headquarters to be erected at Twelfth boulevard and Clark avenue has been let to Cornet & Casey, builders. A sub-contract for 1000 piles, 30 feet long, has been let to Smith & Brennan.

Exchange to Consider Action Rescinding Opposition to Olive Street Strip.

A general meeting of the active members of the Real Estate Exchange has been called by the board of directors for Wednesday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in the Exchange headquarters, for an open discussion as to whether the Exchange should recede from its original position in opposing the plan approved by the Board of Public Service of the City of St. Louis for making Olive street 100 feet wide from building line to building line, in order to create a neutral strip between Twelfth boulevard and Channing avenue for the exclusive use of street car tracks.

Director of Streets and Sewers Brooks last Thursday advised a regular meeting of the board of directors on the subject. Director Brooks again has been invited to discuss the subject before the entire membership of the Exchange. Judge Henry S. Caulfield, counselor for the Exchange, also will be present.

Something Different
Something Better!
At 5015 Chippewa (in new Northampton, 1 block west of 4000 S. Kingshighway); I have a number of very exceptional 4-family flats.
These flats are 4 and 5 rooms and breakfast room, and have separate stone entrances, sleeping porches and craftex walls, of course, the floors are of hardwood and there is furnace heat and tile bath, also brick garages are available.
The appearance of every building is different—and will appeal to those tired of the usual row of duplicate 4-family flats and yet these flats with their new and attractive features rent as low as the ordinary 4 and 5-room flats.
See representative on premises today.

They've all better off than they were when paying rent. There are still some chances like this; in many cases the monthly payments are less than the average rent. Why don't you make your start today; you'll never be any younger; start now. We can give you a 4-room and bath bungalow with furnace, water electric, garage in basement, etc., on these terms. (Half way between 4900 Kingshighway and 5900 Gravois)

OPEN FOR INSPECTION SUNDAY

These pretty new Bungalows must be seen to be appreciated, as picture shows only two houses. Each one has an entirely different design of front, large porch, roof and matt-brick, giving each and every one a distinctive appearance. They are overlooking lake and trees of Parkway, just far enough away from noise of traffic, but within a block of Cherokee Car, Peoples and U. R. Busses, and stores. There are four good-sized rooms; brick mantel, select hardwood floors, tile bath, built-in tub, cooling closet, china cabinet, 4 closets, including one in living room with French doors in which an in-a-door bed can be placed; nice wall space in all rooms; first-class electric fixtures; Holland shades; curtain rods; 7-foot basement with coal bin and fruit cellar conveniently arranged; National furnaces; large rear porch arranged so can easily be screened in; plenty of ventilated air space between ceiling and roof; 13-inch brick walls on good 18-inch rock foundation. Lots are 31½ feet wide. Cement walks from street to alley; also concrete ash pit. Rear yard has wire fence.

Our Construction Department erected these buildings and endeavored to use first-class materials and labor of every kind.

BEFORE SCHOOL BEGINS
There are a lot of things you have been thinking you must attend to before school begins. But is there anything so important as providing a home for those children. And we mean all that the word suggests. Good sized lot with trees and flowers in an attractive and upcoming neighborhood. A house properly designed by an architect and built by master workmen, of the best materials. Public improvements completed.

NOW
This is so important that we must stop to tell you about it. What happens when children have to wade through mud and slush to get to school? Shoes ruined, temper ruined, poor lessons, wet feet, sickness, doctor's bills, and worse. You don't want YOUR children to have these experiences. Yes, we have ample school facilities and concrete streets and concrete sidewalks to the schools. When you look at a house, find out where the nearest school is, and try walking to it yourself. We invite you to do this in

A REPRESENTATIVE

Wanted by Henry Card & Co., of Fredonia, N. Y., the largest manufacturers of food products in their line, now in their thirtieth year, will open a St. Louis office and will place some honest conservative man who desires to remain permanently in St. Louis in charge; experience in our line is not essential, but what we desire is a man to reflect the particular individuality of a high-class organization such as ours; you will be taught to take charge of a small unit of salesmen to start who will operate from your office, which will control entire Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois territory. You will be convinced that we are the direct source of supply of the largest best known and oldest firms in America. Your commission should average over $10,000 yearly; frankly, advertising in the want ad columns is an experiment with us, and in view of the fact that this is the first time we have ever used a newspaper as a medium to get in communication with some progressive American, and as this want ad might fail to reflect the great opportunity it offers, due to the requirement that you must have about $1000 in cash as a deposit on initial shipments (which is credited back to you), as they roll to your territory; no interviews will be granted unless you have first gone to your bank or any bank in St. Louis and checked up our reliability and Dun or Bradstreet commercial rating (R. G. Dun rates us $200,000 to $300,000 highest credit), which has been first credit for the past 30 years; be sure and give your telephone number and state full particulars in your first letter. Address Box K-295, Post-Dispatch.

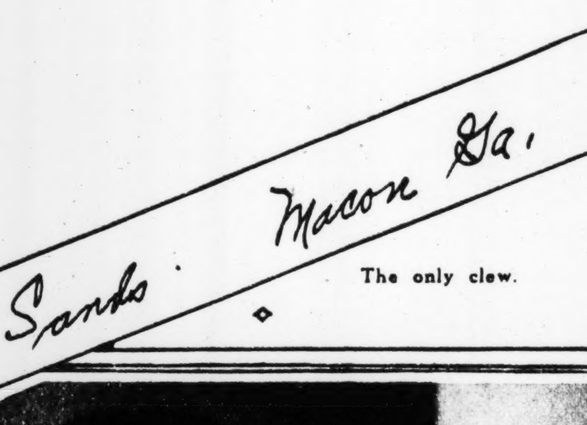
He Went Straight, Became a Reformer—
And They Killed Him

Bert Donaldson Was the Peer of Safe-Crackers. He Was Captured and Sent to Prison. He Reformed. He Was Ordained a Minister He Set Out to Clear the Country of Bunco Men, and He Ruined Their Game Time and Again. Then They Shot Him to Death.

Bert Donaldson, the detective.



W. B. Sands Macon Ga.

The only clew.

Georgian Terrace Hotel, where Donaldson was killed.

Bert Donaldson, the convict.

ATLANTA, Georgia.

AN ASSASSIN fired the loads of a shotgun into Bert Donaldson's head and back the other day. The career of the man who had turned from criminal to pursuer of criminals was over. Bert Donaldson, who until he was forty had been one of the best safe-crackers in the business, who had then seen "the light" and devoted the succeeding 12 years to running down his erstwhile cronies in the belief that such was the way to pay his debt to society, had fallen the victim of criminals' fears.

Bert Donaldson was one of the king burglars of his day. He cracked his safes with ease, neatness and speed. He was a first-class workman. A squad of detectives, called to look over a night's safe robbery consummated with deftness, immediately put it down as a "Donaldson job." Donaldson worked with the best burglars in the country. He did not alone confine himself to cracking strong boxes. He once got hold of a postoffice money order stamp and the United States was flooded with bad money orders.

All in all he served six prison terms. But, concluding his last, at the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, he decided to give up the game, married a woman who had been a social worker at the prison, and took to religion. Afterward he was ordained a Presbyterian clergyman. But he felt he'd had a "call." It was, as he saw it, to reform as many released convicts as he could, to run bunco men out of any city they chose to set their traps in, and to bring criminals in general back to justice.

DONALDSON was born in England, but went to Canada when a small boy. From there, still a child, he was taken to the midwestern section of the United States. There he first ran afoul of the law. His first offense was some minor infraction, but it landed him in a boys' reformatory. He was then only 9 years old. At the reformatory, for some reason or other, he was given a beating. Angered, he made his escape. Then followed other misdemeanors; before long his misdoings had taken on the nature of felonies.

He was captured several times. Several times he was convicted. Throughout his prison sentences he showed the same attitude that he had when, as a boy of nine, he got a beating at the hands of a reformatory official: punishment by prison officials only disgusted him; it in no way broke the man's spirit.

It was about 25 years ago that he chose Toledo for his headquarters, and safes in that city and the adjacent district began to be blown with an unusual handiness and precision. But the police could get no evidence against him and he went right along blowing strong boxes.

Then came the night when, trying to crack a safe in a Cleveland bank, the burglars were discovered by a policeman, and in the fight that followed the officer was killed. Detectives looked at the safe, noted the clean way in which it had been opened and marked it as a job of Bert Donaldson's. Donaldson was arrested. He was tried, convicted and sentenced to death for the patrolman's murder.

But it was Donaldson's partner who had done the killing. And this man had not been arrested. Donaldson never said a word. One day, after his conviction, he was taken before the police to be questioned about many things. While the examination was going on, a door opened and in walked an officer with Donaldson's partner. But Donaldson showed no sign of recognition and continued to answer the questions of his captors. He knew that if his association with the other man became known, it meant death for both of them. This pal later confessed and exonerated Donaldson in his confession. Donaldson was given another trial and was acquitted.

IT WASN'T long after this that Donaldson, in some way or other, became the possessor of the stamp that enabled him to counterfeit all the postoffice money orders that he cared to, and it seems that he cared to counterfeit a goodly number of them. Postoffice inspectors all over the country were put on the trail of Bert Donaldson and his stamp, but they met with no success in finding either. He kept on cashing his money orders right and left. The Government, growing anxious, put more inspectors on his wake, and put so many on him they did that it became too dangerous for him to use his stamp.

He turned back to his old business of cracking safes. Looking around for a partner, he picked the late George "Dutch" Anderson, one of the best crooks in the business. They cast about for a good "job" and decided on a Rochester, New York, jewelry store. This store was downtown, in the heart of the theatrical district, and they planned to do their work as the theaters were letting out their crowds.

The first thing to do was to dispose of the night watchman. He was slugged, bound and gagged. Anderson became the watchman and Donaldson entered the store. While Donaldson was busy blowing the safe, a policeman, walking his beat, walked up to this strange night watchman and asked, "Where's old Bill tonight?"

"Bill's sick. He got me to work for him tonight," Anderson replied.

Just then a garbage elevator came up from the store's basement. On it were two large galvanized iron cans. And while the policeman watched, "Dutch" Anderson rolled the two cans down the alley and into the darkness.

Out of one of them came Donaldson, and with him he brought a treasure in jewels.

The robbery was discovered the next morning. A detective, searching around for a clew, found a locket on the floor, not far from the cracked safe. He opened it and saw inside the picture of a beautiful woman. "Bert Donaldson's wife," he said.

A search was on for Donaldson and they found him. But he was never convicted of this crime. For, while the State's attorneys were planning their case against him, Donaldson called in Government operatives.

"You fellows know I have a money order stamp," he told the Federal men. "And I know you want it. Now, listen. I'll tell you where you can get that stamp if—if you can fix it so I can take a plea of guilty in a little postoffice job you've got against me, let me do a short stretch at Atlanta, and have this Rochester business dropped."

The Government operatives agreed to try to put the deal over for him. They succeeded, Donaldson took a plea of guilty in the postoffice case, and to Atlanta he was sent.

He afterwards said that when he came to Atlanta he "then and there decided to go straight."

The warden of the Federal prison at that time was Fred Zerbst. From Zerbst Donaldson got the square deal he had always wanted from a penitentiary official. This treatment strengthened his determination to go on the square when he had finished his term. Among the women social workers at the Government institution was a woman who was particularly kind to Donaldson. And she exerted a great and good influence upon this first-class cracksman.

BEFORE his term was over he had embraced Christianity. He decided that when he was released he would devote himself to prison reform work, to try to make the conditions in penitentiaries easier for the prisoners, and, more than that, to give them a lift when they got outside the prison gates.

He came out of prison a social service worker. He decided to settle here in Atlanta. He married again, this time the woman who had helped him so much when he was a prisoner and she a social worker. Before long he was admitted to the Presbyterian ministry. His theological work brought him little money. He and his wife opened a small boarding house.

At that time Floyd Woodward and his bunco gang were playing this city and playing it, for all that was in it. Atlanta was full of confidence men. Crooks from the four corners of the globe were gathered here. The Woodward crowd operated a fake stock exchange. They had a fake leased wire. One of their schemes was to pretend they had cut in on a wire and were getting race reports ahead of the public. The gang ran crooked gambling halls. Many were the victims who went to the police and told of having lost from $20,000 to $30,000.

Atlanta had all it could stand of the bunco boys. The blow-off came when County Solicitor-General Boykin raided the "con" men's headquarters. The gang scattered far and wide.

THEN Donaldson, the former cracksman, the recently ordained Presbyterian minister, went to Boykin and offered his services. He knew most of the gang and from long experience believed he knew where they most likely would be hiding. Boykin gladly welcomed Donaldson as an aide and Donaldson went on the hunt. Donaldson was especially bent on breaking up this gang because he believed its leader was grabbing hold of men freshly released from prison and enlisting them in the gang's ranks.

Donaldson pursued the various members of the Woodward crowd all over the country and in parts of Canada. One by one he brought them in. Dan McCabe, one of the gang whom Donaldson captured, told how the new clergyman caught him, and McCabe's capture was typical of the way Donaldson worked.

"We were doing nicely in Toledo," said McCabe. "A friend had staked me to a $100 bill after the blow-off in Atlanta. I had got hold of a sucker in the Toledo railroad station and we were all set to get his roll from him.

"He was stopping in a swell hotel. I was sitting outside waiting for him. All of a sudden I see Donaldson. He's making for the main entrance of the joint. I hotfoots it around to the restaurant and comes out another door, picking my teeth.

"I tips off all the boys and we were on a limited for Detroit before you could say 'scat.' I never knew what became of that fellow we were working on—and he had plenty, too. I'd already got $8000 from him and we were making a play for the rest of his roll.

"Well, I'm sitting 'n Detroit in a park reading a newspaper. All of a sudden I feel that a guy is standing behind me. I look up and it's Bert.

"'Ready to go, Dan?' he asks me. 'Absolutely,' says I. And the next thing I know I'm in the 'pen' making pants."

One by one Donaldson brought the boys in. One of them, fearing he couldn't make a getaway, came in of his own accord. Another, tired of Donaldson's pursuit, came back all the way from Mexico.

But Donaldson was not a hard prosecutor. In the case of each one of his captives he used all his influence so that the confidence man might pay a large fine and escape imprisonment.

Only a short time ago he said: "Any time I'm able to get one of these fellows in to take a plea of guilty and a fine, I do it. In most of these cases our witnesses have disappeared. It's always doubtful if we could get a conviction. If they show a disposition to square up and start straight again I try to help them."

Last winter the detective-minister trailed a gang of confidence men to Florida and ran them away. He warned travelers on railroad trains, on Atlantic liners and on ships skirting North Africa and Asia Minor against this brand of crooks. Most of them he knew and others he could detect by his knowledge of their methods and their personalities. In Florida he had handbills printed, at his own expense, crying the warning, and these handbills he put on trains and in hotels. He went to Key West and warned a crowd of bunco men that if they went to Havana he would follow them, distribute his handbills and have them arrested.

Recently Donaldson had decided to give up his criminal work after one more search through the Middle West and Canada for fugitive bunco men. His wife was always in fear of his life; furthermore, she was an invalid and needed his care and attention. And a recent business deal of his had prospered. He had the means to take a rest.

DONALDSON was sitting in his home one evening a short time ago when the telephone rang. He answered it.

"He's still in the same room, is he?" he was heard to ask.

And then, "All right, I'll be right out."

He said goodby to his wife and hurried out of the house. It was not unusual for him to do something like that. He was always getting calls, at all times of the night and day, to join the police in a raid, to start off for some distant point in pursuit of a man whose whereabouts he had just been "tipped" to, or to go to some hotel to make arrangements with a bunco man for his surrender.

On this night he got into his automobile and drove to within one block of the Georgian Terrace Hotel. There he met someone and went into the hotel with him. It was then a little after 8:30 o'clock. He and his companion got into an elevator. Some time after, he and this man came down to the lobby and talked. Then they again got into the elevator and went to a room on the third floor.

Donaldson did not return home that night and his wife became alarmed. When he failed to return the next morning she informed Solicitor-General Boykin. Boykin was concerned. He knew that Donaldson was in constant danger. A search was started at once.

That morning a maid at the Georgian Terrace had knocked on the door of a third-floor room. There was no response. She thought the room's occupant wished to sleep and she went about her work. She returned to the room that afternoon. She knocked. There was no answer. She entered the room. On the floor she saw the body of a man. He had been shot to death. The hotel officials at once notified the police. They identified the man on the floor of that room as Bert Donaldson.

It is believed Bert Donaldson was killed in this manner:

THE murderer was seated in the closet of the room. He held a double-barreled sawed-off shotgun. The door of the closet was open just enough for him to see into the room, but so slightly that Donaldson could not have seen him. Donaldson was lured into this room. As Donaldson walked past the closet door the murderer thrust his shotgun through the door and discharged one of the barrels into Donaldson's back. Donaldson dropped to the floor. As he writhed from his mortal wound, the killer, fearing his first shot had not been fatal, jumped from his chair and fired the other barrel at the back of his victim's head.

What clews have the police to work on? The name "W. B. Sands, Macon, Ga.," appearing on the hotel register as the name of the man who had taken the room in which Bert Donaldson was killed, the information that the man Donaldson walked through the hotel lobby with had a scar on his face, the information that this man was at the hotel in company with three other men.

County Solicitor-General Boykin had this to say of the murder of his aide:

"It is my opinion that Bert Donaldson was lured from his home by a promise of information that would lead to the arrest of Floyd Woodward or some other fugitive. Bert was the sort of fellow that never would let up if he once started out after a man.

"These bunco men have grown to fear and hate the name of Bert Donaldson. I know that any one of a number of them would give thousands to get him out of the way. It is my opinion that a gang decided that if they intended to operate in the United States they would have to get rid of Donaldson.

"I intend to leave no stone unturned in my search for the men who killed him. It may take weeks, months, even years, but sooner or later we will get the men who committed this murder and those who were behind it."

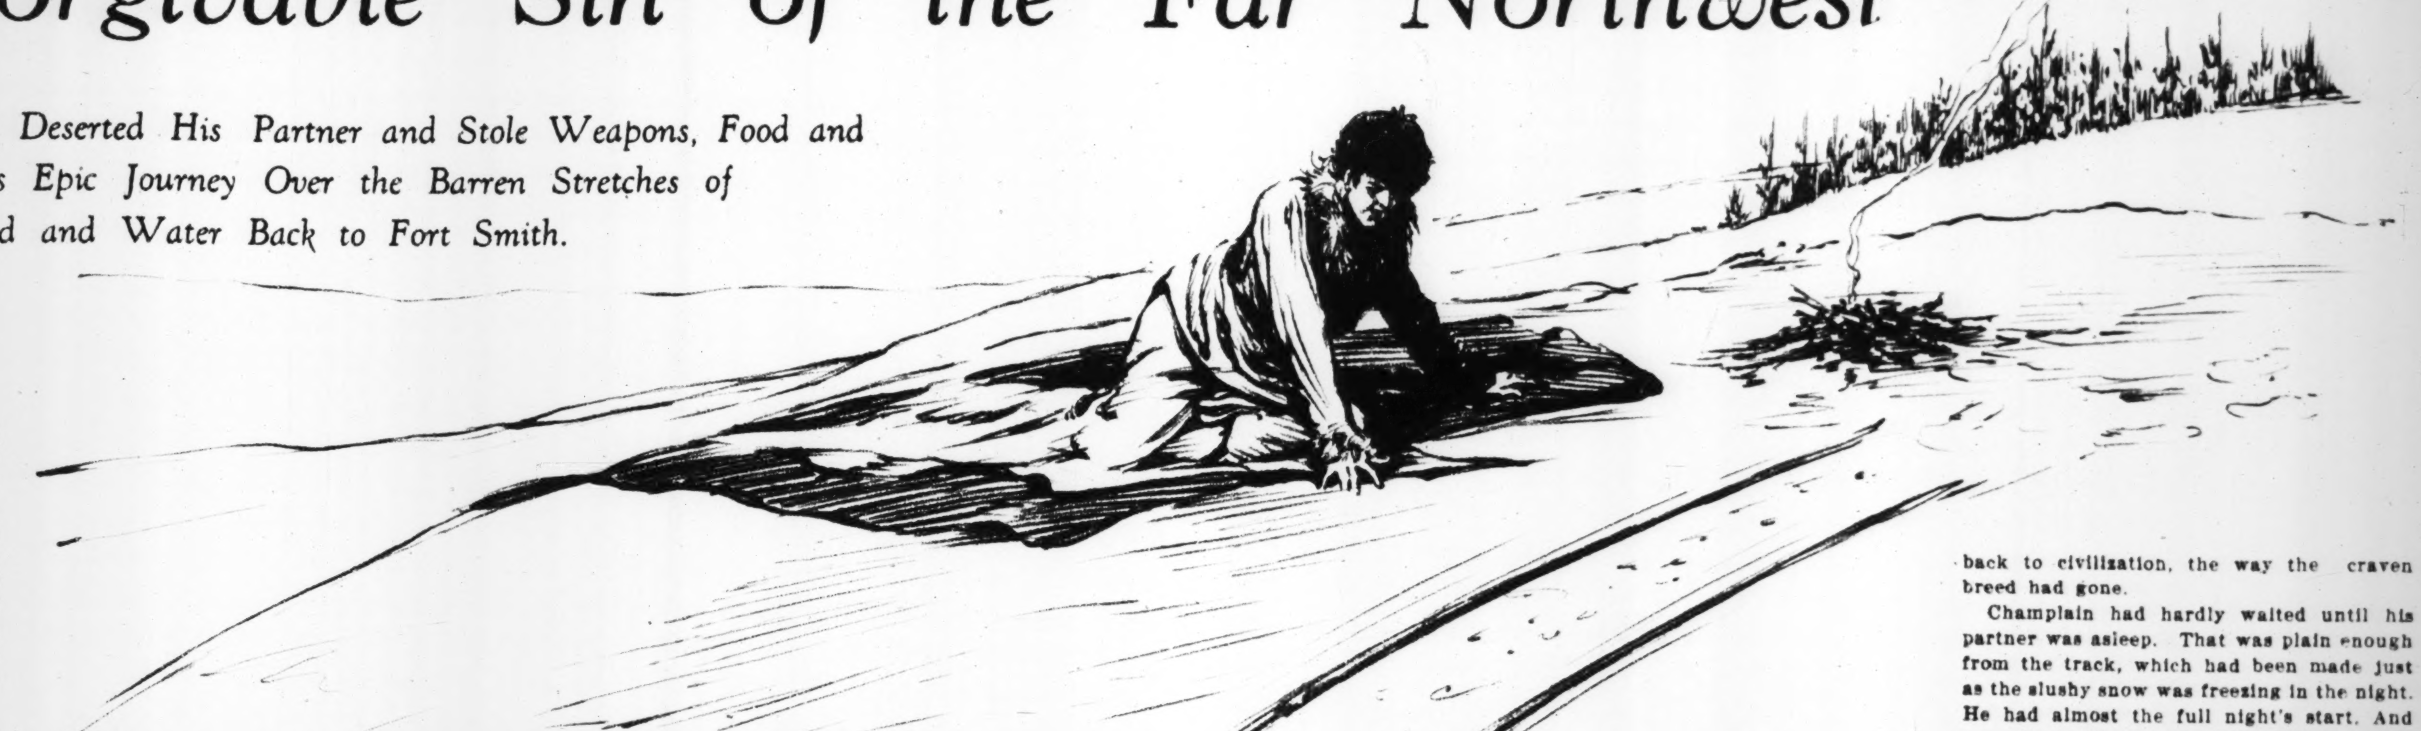
The Unforgivable Sin of the Far Northwest

A Half-Breed Trapper Deserted His Partner and Stole Weapons, Food and Furs—Boblette's Epic Journey Over the Barren Stretches of Land and Water Back to Fort Smith.



By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine

FORT SMITH, N. W. T.

JOE BOBLETTE is back to civilization, a brown ghost of a man who for three months fought starvation in the silent places of the North and won to safety. He who had been abandoned to death simply would not die.

Boblette came back to claim justice of the law, to point his brown and accusing finger at the man who had left him helpless. And across the table in the little courtroom here in Fort Smith they met—the white trapper burned to a brown that was deeper than his half-breed partner's skin, and that partner who, cowering and craven, looked into the face of the white man he had left to die and trembled as though he saw a ghost.

They had seen each other last, up in the Big Bend of the Mackenzie River, as they rolled themselves in their blankets and laid by their campfire amid a silence of sullen hate. Champlain, the half-breed trapper, crept away that night, taking with him dogs and sled, and food and guns. Taking also the packs of skins that were the harvest of their winter's toil of trapping, in the great, white, barren region of the sub-arctic North.

The half-breed's crime was a crime for which the North knows no forgiveness. Downright murder in its code is not so bad as to leave even an enemy helplessly to starve. To take a man's dogs is as bad as stealing a man's horse and leaving him dismounted was on the frontier of the Western United States; to take his rifle is to take his chance of food, a greater crime than to take his life.

Champlain had made his way in safety back to Fort Smith. Probably he smiled as he toiled behind his dogs—smiled to think how his partner's life would pay the price of the bitter hatred that had arisen as they trapped and camped together; smiled to think of how his secret—how the shame of Cain—was hidden in the silent places of the North.

Champlain had lacked the courage to kill the man he hated. He would let starvation and the elements do that; if Boblette should survive the animals. But death, he knew, was certain. So he had returned to Fort Smith with the story he'd invented, and he told the "mounties" when they questioned him, as he told the factor of the Hudson's Bay Company, that Boblette had become snow blind and wandered off in the snows.

He did not look them in the eyes when he told the story. And Champlain's reputation was not good. But he sold his furs and he spent his money in roystering.

THEN word came down from the North, by the mysterious "Indian telegraph," by that strange, whispering rumor that seems to flash, like an electric spark, the news of the silent North.

Joe Boblette's headless body, it was reported, had been seen floating northward, down the majestic sweep of the Mackenzie River, with the ice floes, to the Arctic Sea. Champlain's carousal was halted then. Patrols of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police invited him to confidences. They took him into the little courtroom. Before him were spread their maps of the Mackenzie.

"Show us where you camped with Boblette," was the curt command.

"I do not know by ze map," countered the shifty half-breed. "All I say ees eet was near zee beeg bend, far north of Fort Seempson."

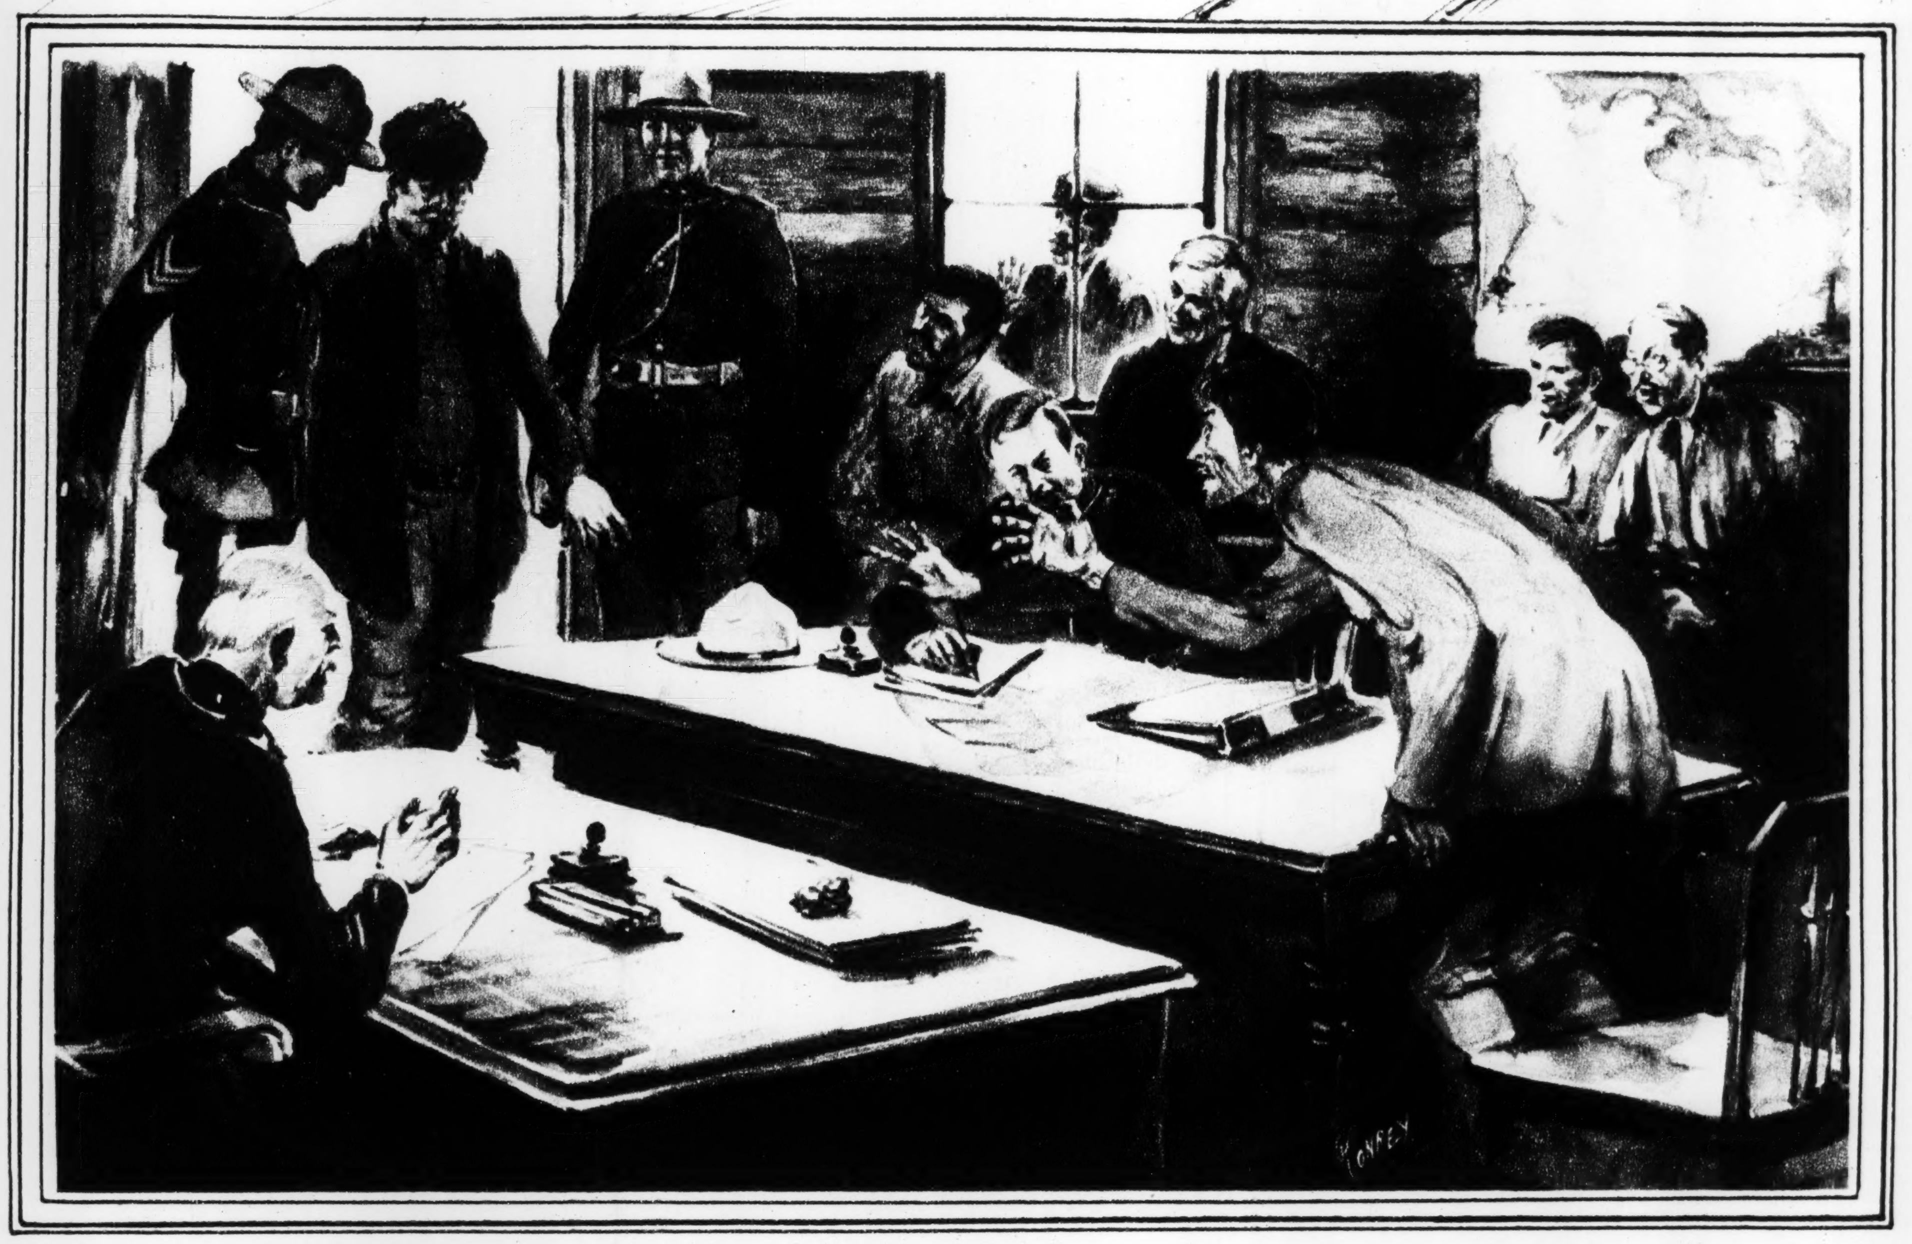
"And Boblette wandered away when he was snow blind? You are sure?"

"Ah, Messieurs. My frien' Boblette, 'ee 'ave zee snow-blind veree bad. 'Ee steal off when I'm sleeping me. Two-t'ree days I look. No find 'eem. So I come alone."

His eyes smiled with his craft as he told that story. No admission. No evidence. But the mounties held him until they knew. And out into the Big Bend country to the North and out, north and east, into the "Barren Grounds" patrols were sent, carrying relief if they should find the man alive, but seeking of the secret North the answer: Was Boblette dead?

On July's last day the missing trapper entered Fort Smith, plodding across from the source of the Little Buffalo River, a wraith, a ghost, a cinder of the powerful white man who had left the settlement with Champlain 10 months before.

Now they faced each other in the courtroom—the half-breed puffy with dissipation, the white trapper emaciated, his bony frame jutting, almost, through his clothes. And Champlain trembled as he looked on that hated face, its skin drawn over the big bones like a mummy's parchment, its eyes deep sunken in their sockets, its lips drawn in thin, straight lines across the mouth. Yet even that drum-tight, parchment skin was scarred by the bites of a myriad insects, and the man's neck was puffed and swollen and corrugated until it seemed like the neck of a bull walrus, blotched, bloated and bloody, from the ravages of the bulldog flies.



The meeting in the courtroom.

But, weak as he was, Boblette jumped to his feet as the two mounted policemen brought the half-breed into the room. He sprang toward his enemy.

"You damned dirty dog, I'll tear the heart out of you!" he cried.

"Steady, Joe! Steady!" a mountie warned. Others sprang in between the men.

When they left that courtroom Champlain was bound for Edmonton, in charge of a mounted police escort, to serve a year's imprisonment. That was all the law could exact of him. But another penalty he yet must pay. The penalty of exile.

"And if you ever come back," his partner had warned him, "I'll kill you as sure as my name's Boblette."

"SILENCE in the court!" an orderly had commanded, biting his chin-strap to keep from grinning. It was a perfunctory warning. Even the mounties, perhaps, regretted that under the law no greater punishment could be meted to the half-breed.

But the North, itself, exacts a penalty. Champlain can never come back to the land where he is known. His was the unforgivable sin. He was lucky that the mounties were there to protect him from other trappers as well as from the man whom he had injured.

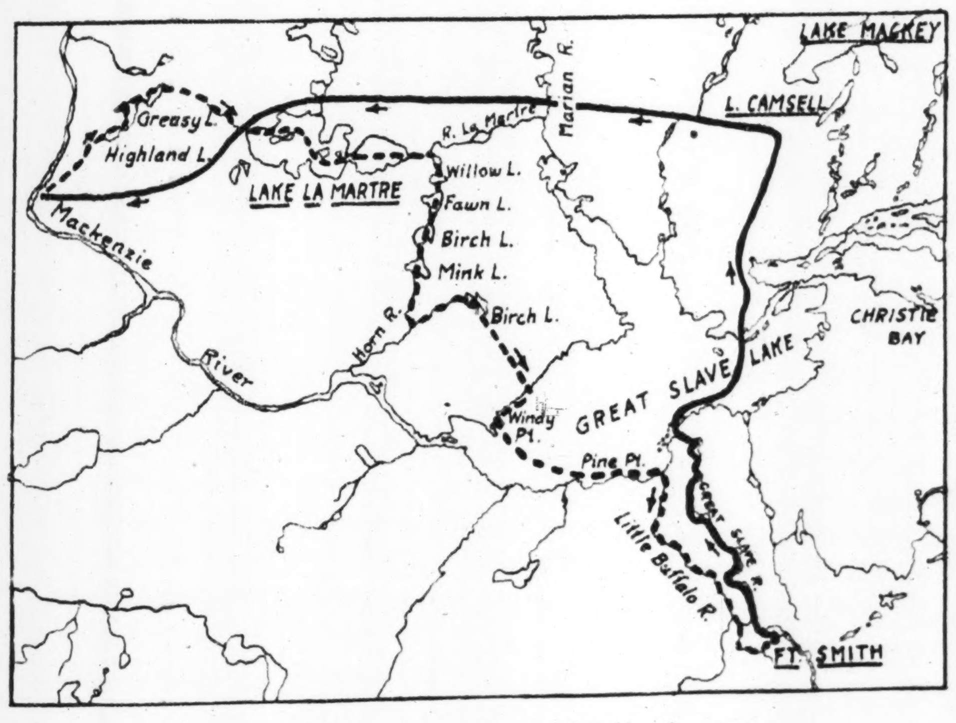
Bit by bit, as Boblette had told his story in that courtroom, there was revealed a determination, a will-to-live, a resource of woodcraft which even the Northwest's mounties gasped to hear.

In the fall of 1925 Boblette and his partner had set forth from Fort Smith for the Barren Lands—the open tundra, north of Great Slave Lake—to trap for white fox, wolf, mink and marten. They went well-equipped, and yet expecting to live, for a large part, on the country, for the "barrens" are full of herds of caribou, and on caribou meat, as the Indians say, one grows strong. They paddled down the Great Slave River, through its delta and into Great Slave Lake. They skirted the edge, northeasterly, to Stony Island and then struck across the narrows to the north shore. Thence they journeyed northward, for snow had come, with dogs and sledges. They passed from the forest region into a land of stunted spruce, where the trees were like the dwarfs of a Japanese garden, and then on again to the last woods—the very edge of the forest, and out upon the arctic tundra. Here was the home of caribou, and of musk-ox, so there was meat a-plenty. And here, too, the white fox, white wolf and marten were. They were alone in a wilderness of uncounted miles. Not even Indians were seen. From time to time they moved camp in the Arctic night of the winter, working slowly in a westerly direction and, as they worked, setting out their traps, running their lines, going about that daily routine of baiting, catching, killing, skinning, which makes up a trapper's life.

Early enough in their journeyings Boblette discovered that his partner was inclined to shirk. The white man didn't hesitate to tell the half-breed what he thought. Frankly, he was contemptuous. A partner in the woods must be all partner, willing, tireless, to be worth his salt. There was Cree shiftlessness in the Indian strain of Champlain's blood. Indian carelessness, too.

And the breed grew more sulky, silent and resentful. It rankled in the half-breed's spirit that the white man's woodcraft was the better. Boblette's care, his pains, his skill, brought to their common store of furs almost double what Champlain secured from his own line of traps. The profit would be divided equally, but the breed resented this superiority. From their lines of traps Boblette would return successful, Champlain with but little of a catch and then they would sit, in silence, by their fire, while perhaps the aurora borealis whirled its red and violet and golden-green, a brilliant radiance of phantom dancers, across the northern sky and while the skies themselves seemed to rustle and crackle as though silken scarves were being whipped by boreal winds.

The Arctic night was ending. They had worked north to a point west of Lake Camsell, then westerly, across the Yellowknife and Marian rivers and then on west, to the north of Lake La Martre, hoping to strike the Mackenzie at a point near old Fort Wrigley. But their course, and the fortune of game, now turned more southerly. The bale of furs grew larger and larger. The food stock on the sled grew less and less.



The outward journey, and route of Boblette's return.

Spring sunshine began to thaw the lowland reaches of the broad Mackenzie. By 4:30 the sun was above the horizon. At night it went to rest in a bed of clouds—carmine, magenta, burgundy, crimson, cardinal and golden-red—and left behind it a purple glow across which wild geese were trumpeting their northward way. Already the snow was going. But the sledge would be of use yet for many days, because the great Mackenzie would not soon burst its bonds of ice.

"But we'd better be headin' for the river, Champlain," Boblette said. "The snow's going. We've got to build a canoe and have it ready when the ice goes out." So, since wait they must for the sun to release the river from its bondage, they turned southward to the Big Bend of the Mackenzie, trapping as they went.

THEY reached the river under smiling April suns. They built their canoe from birchbark, as the Indians build, sewed together with wattap (split pine roots), shaped to a frame of spruce and with spruce gummed. They re-packed their furs. They made ready for the journey southward.

There was silence that night when the two rolled into their blankets in the snow beside the fire. Boblette, tired by his round of the traps, was angry that the other man had not had supper waiting. But he said nothing. He rolled into his blankets with nothing to eat.

His was a confused and troubled sleep and he dreamed of the black eyes of the half-breed peering into his own, with hate.

He awoke and lay in his blankets, listening. The sun was up and yet not even the whimper of a dog broke the silence. No stir of man or beast. He moved. No answering chorus from the hungry dogs. So he sat straight up in his bed and looked around.

There were no dogs. There was no sledge. Nor were there furs, or grub, or rifles. Champlain, in that troubled night, had packed up everything within his reach. Out across the gleaming, glistening snow led sled-tracks. They pointed southward, back to civilization, the way the craven breed had gone.

Champlain had hardly waited until his partner was asleep. That was plain enough from the track, which had been made just as the slushy snow was freezing in the night. He had almost the full night's start. And now the April sun would turn the snow to slush again. Hard mushing. The white man could never overtake his fleeing partner.

What Joe Boblette said is not of record. Probably it wasn't much. The men who live in the silence are silent men. The men who live stories find it difficult to tell them.

But Boblette, sitting in the courtroom, face to face with the man who had betrayed him, did manage to sketch the story of horror through which he lived.

THE moment he realized that he had been abandoned, he jumped from his blankets and sought the canoe. There it was, by the ice-bound riverside. Nearby he found a nail which they had used as a needle to sew the bark together. That, at least, would help him to some food. He made a line from wattap, bent the nail into a hook, chopped a hole in the ice. And got his breakfast. Then he sat down to think.

Here, where the rivers all run north, he must go northward if he waited for the ice to go out of the Mackenzie, for no man could pull his canoe against its mighty tide, and there must be days and weeks, perhaps, of waiting until that ice, melted by the sun and overwhelmed by the flood-tide of the river's tributaries, would rot, crack and break, moving out with a mighty rush of waters, trees and mud. On the other hand, the smaller streams were even now thawed or thawing. He could paddle against the current of these, make portages where needful, and find his way, sooner or later but with certainty, back to Great Slave Lake and home. And there would be fish for food. Again he fished, and with good luck. Enough food now to last today and tomorrow. And he raised the canoe above his head and started, facing north and easterly, striking for a stream which empties into Highland Lake, a 40-mile portage to the first water on his journey.

Slow was the plodding through the slushy snow. His arms ached above his head, but he kept on. He noted carefully the signs of animals. Snow-shoe rabbits were plentiful. The northern trapper scorns the rabbit. "No nourishment," he says. But where there is no other food men are not choosers. Boblette made snares when he stopped in the heavy spruce timber for the night's camp. He suspended an uprooted sapling from the fork of a stout young tree. At its end he made a loop of wattap hanging down for the rabbit to run across, and running, catch in the noose and release the balanced sapling. One of the snares he set was effective that first night. It encouraged him. At the next camp he set springles for birds and succeeded in snaring a whisky-jack, with a sappy twig bent to half an oval and fastened in bow fashion with a taut bit of wattap, which released itself when the camp-robber investigated the bit of meat left for bait, and which caught the bird fast between stick and string. He was on Highland Lake now, the beginning of his first water journey and before he started he wove a net of willow bark for further fishing.

From Highland into Greasy Lake he paddled and from the eastern end of Greasy again he made a portage, carrying his canoe over his head. Then into a tributary of the Lake La Martre, and easterly across that deep, blue lake, where he rejoiced in white fish in his net—the white fish, which, like caribou, will keep men strong.

SOMETIMES he was lucky with his snares, his line, his net. Looking on the map, one sees the logic of his route, and it looks easy. But the portages were heart-breaking. Sometimes through rough and rocky country, often through woodland jammed with deadfall timber and almost impenetrable, sometimes across miles of muskeg swamps as the ice melted in the lowlands.

Time. That was the thing. To remain meant to die. He must get forward—and soon. For before the summer came there would descend upon the country its plagues of mosquitoes and flies. And heat. Intolerable heat. And endless sun.

April passed ere he had reached the Lake La Martre. Now came May, with open rivers and brown earth and reddening willow-wands, and with the song of birds. As he paddled along the margin of the lake he speared, occasionally, a jack fish with a sharpened pole, as the Indians spear them.

The House Where the Gin Rickey Was Born Is Torn Down—by a Prohibitionist

Colonel Joe Rickey, Gentleman, Lobbyist Par Excellence, and Gambler Extraordinary, Was Sitting in His Old Mansion in Fulton, Missouri, One Warm Summer's Morning. He Wanted a Cool Drink. So He Created the Famous "Rickey," Now Favorably Known From the Windward Islands to the Foot Hills of the Himalayas.

By JULIUS KLEIMANN

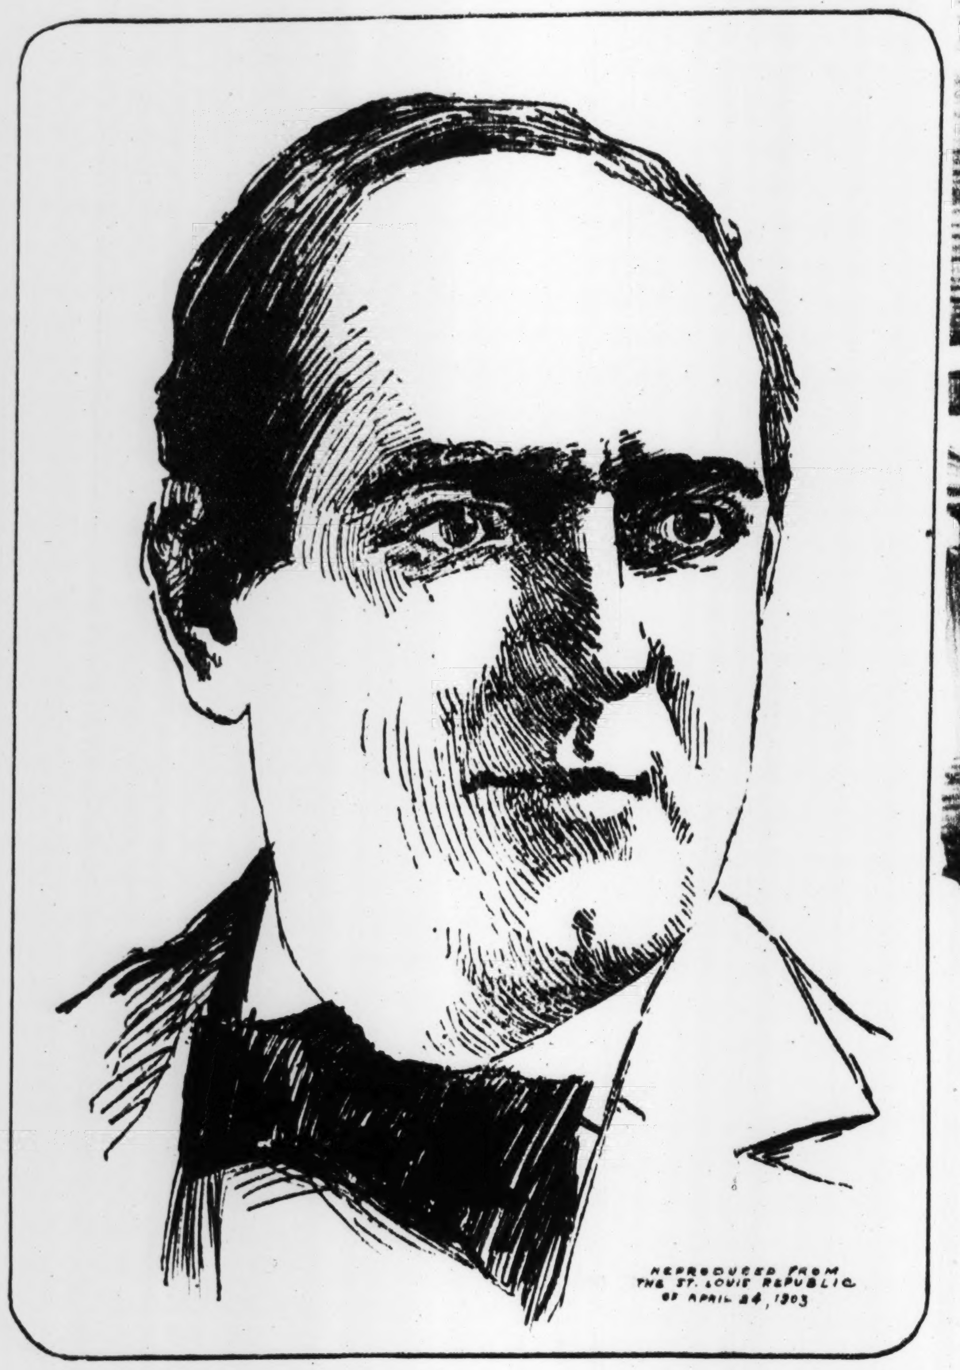
FULTON, Missouri.

OUT on the edge of the residence district of this town, on a fine sweep of ground, stands a jagged corner of a house, a gaunt splinter, all that is left of an old Missouri mansion. Progress has come along and wiped that old home out; before long, no doubt, the spacious grounds will be cracked up and parceled out in little lots for little houses; already part of this estate is a chicken ranch.

A jagged corner, all that remains of the home of Colonel Joe Rickey, the sweetest lobbyist that ever journeyed from Missouri to Washington to twist Senators and Congressmen around his able fingers; Joe Rickey, one of the greatest gamblers who ever graced the national capital; Joe Rickey, whose name is mentioned a million times a day and night, every time the words gin rickey or whisky rickey cross a thirsty fancier's lips. For Colonel Joseph Kyle Rickey it was who first conceived that a potent alcoholic fluid, in collaboration with ice, charged water and half a lime, would create a draught guaranteed to cool and assuage the most particular palate.

But now we are come upon dry and different days. Dead is the Colonel of the fabulous life; legally dead is his concoction and as truly dead it is in its pristine loveliness; dead is the grand frame house with its towering ceilings and great mantels; the very estate that house reared itself upon is now in the hands of a Prohibitionist. That Prohibitionist is one David W. Whanger. He tore down the house, in which the rickey was born, not in his character of Prohibitionist but as a venturer in real estate.

Times have most undeniably changed. Time was when the Rickey mansion, its two white stories topped by a third of dark slate, its green shutters thrown open, lights streaming from its long windows, played host to the gayest of gatherings. On its spacious porches reclined gentlemen from Washington, come to drink with the Colonel fine bourbon whisky and rattle the poker chips over a broad table. For a week at a time these visitors would indulge themselves, for that is the way Joe Rickey liked his card games. And undoubtedly many were the prospective deals the Colonel instituted with legislators during one of those festive weeks, deals with legislators who were soon to return to their constituents to tell them how they had fought with might for right at Washington.



REPRODUCED FROM THE ST. LOUIS REPUBLIC OF APRIL 24, 1903

Joseph K. Rickey, whose name has gone to the ends of the earth with a mixed drink.

JOE RICKEY was born at Keokuk, Iowa, January 11, 1842. His family is said to have been in pleasant circumstances. In Keokuk he spent his boyhood. But as a young man the lure of the cards fell upon him. Poker he loved, and most any other game that could be played with 52 cards. He played his games as well as he loved them. It was not long before young Joe Rickey could master most anyone in Eastern Iowa at a gaming table.

Keokuk is on the Mississippi River, and in those days of the early sixties many was the steamboat that plied up and down. From Keokuk to New Orleans was a journey of no short duration; as the days dragged on the passengers were eager to find some way to pass the halting time. What easier way to pass it, then, than over a table, a cold bottle on the side and a sheaf of pasteboards in the traveler's hands? Those river days were made for gambling.

Young Joe Rickey, with his aptitude for the cards, soon found himself drifting to the steamboats, and subsequently drifting down New Orleans way on their sunny decks. He played his cards and he played them well; undoubtedly now and then he lost, but if he did no such score is on record and nobody remembers it. For the cards favored Rickey and Rickey raked in the chips.

Born though he was in the North, his traffic with Southerners, his sojourns at the river ports of Tennessee, Mississippi and Louisiana, perhaps his way of living life easily and his fancy for a good drink of whisky, brought him to think as they did below the Mason and Dixon line and to feel a comradeship with the South's people.

When the Civil War caught the country, when men were too busy trying to march into the South or drive the Yanks out of Washington to loll about on steamboat decks and figure the possibilities of a "straight," Rickey one day got off a sidewheeler tied up alongside a Missouri wharf and joined the Army of the Confederacy. Duly enlisted, they put a gray uniform on him, stuck a rifle in his hands and sent him off to a troop billeted not far from Fulton.

Fulton was just as rebel in those days as it is Democratic today. It was not unnatural that the gentlemen and ladies of Fulton should visit the Confederate camp now and then to look at the troops in gray and to cheer them on. It so happened that on an occasion one of the young ladies of Fulton, who went to visit this troop of soldiers of the South, was Miss Sallie Howard, the daughter of one of Fulton's most prominent families. She met young Joseph Rickey and Rickey did not forget. His troop marched away, they tussled with the Yanks, Rickey was captured and, after a time, exchanged. During those weary days of marching and fighting he hadn't forgotten Sallie Howard. And when he was a free man he still hadn't forgotten her, and back to Fulton he went.

The young gentleman paid the lady a strenuous courting. He left Fulton, only to return. He persevered and he won, and Sallie Howard became his bride. The war was over, and the Rickeys left for Mississippi. There for a time they lived on a plantation. But Fulton was in the young bride's heart, and to Fulton they returned. Joseph Rickey was about to enter politics as a silent member.

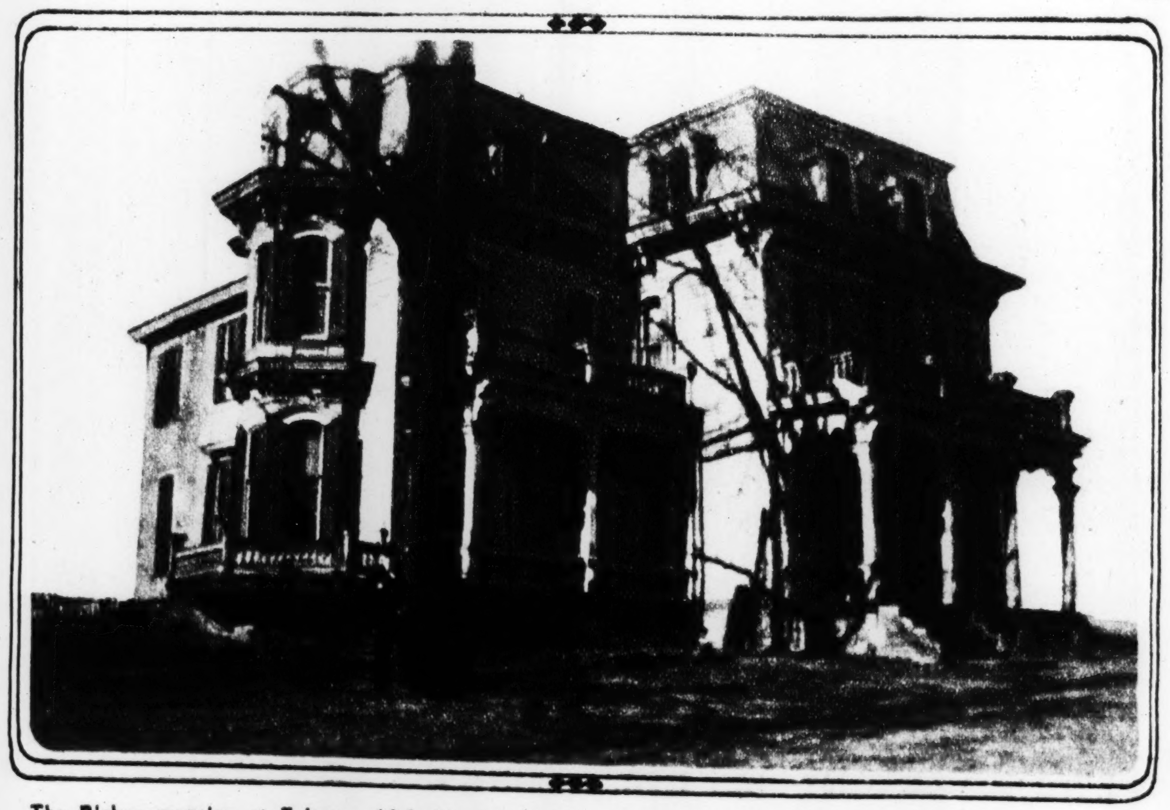
IT IS just a few hours' ride from Fulton to Jefferson City, and when the State Legislature convened Rickey made his way to the capital to see if certain proposed measures he was particularly interested in could not be brought to pass. He was a jovial young man, and already something of a connoisseur of good whisky. He had a smiling, beaming face, a courtly manner, affability; he was known as a man who kept his word. A group of State legislators always knew that this young Rickey from Fulton would help to round out a table of poker. He was liked of the Missouri politicians. It came about that all those things which young Joe Rickey wished to see come to pass, at that meeting of the Missouri lawmakers, came to happen just as he desired. He went back to Fulton, pleased and thoughtful.

And so, during the time before the law-making body of Missouri would meet again, when a particular friend of Rickey's talked with Rickey about something or other he thought the Legislature ought to do, whether it was some scheme which Rickey's friend believed would further the pursuit of happiness in this State, or whether it was the passage of some measure desired to aid the particular gentleman's strong box, Rickey would lend an attentive ear and say he would see what could be done about it.

To his second Jefferson City convening he went, and when he returned to Fulton he had accomplished most of what his friends most longed for. Joseph Rickey was by now convinced that an unofficial personage could do much in directing the genius of lawfully constituted legislators.

When he repaired to the next State conclave he was no stranger within the capital's gates. Upon all sides was he greeted. Older men came to him and asked his advice on this or that. Fervent proposers of new laws sought him out and begged he back them with their measures. High officials of railroads and corporations knocked at his hotel room door and in low tones asked that he help them further that which they very much wanted. His appearance in a barroom called for another round of drinks. If a conscientious State Senator looked warily at the sky and prophesied it would rain tomorrow, Rickey offered to give him good odds, no matter how much the elements seemed against him, that it wouldn't. At that Legislature, too, Joe Rickey was victorious.

Back at Fulton he sat himself down and analyzed the situation. Silently guiding the destinies of Legislatures, he argued, was not an unpleasant business and one pleasantly lucrative. The main business was to know your men, the men who controlled the votes. Knowing them constituted eating and drinking with them, laughing and gambling with them. Eating, drinking, laughing, gambling, all things which suited his fancy and in which he excelled. Politicians, like most other people, liked a good story. And a good story teller he was, and already he had a reputation as a raconteur. Why, thought he, shouldn't he become a professional guider of the fortunes of legislatures? It called for everything he loved. But there was this to be considered. Playing at silent legislating was all very well at Jefferson City. But it had its limits. The place to go for that game was the capital of these United States, Washington, District of Columbia. He had made good at Jefferson City; he saw no reason why his star wouldn't shine as brightly eastward.



The Rickey mansion at Fulton—old-fashioned, spacious, embodying the spirit of hospitality—before the house-wreckers touched it.

HE WAS not disappointed. Before long he was quite as popular at Washington as he ever had been at that capital near Fulton. He asked for things, and he usually got what he wanted. He was reputed the greatest gambler that ever entered the limits of the city. He'd bet on anything; going down the street with a friend, he'd wager on the number of a still far off but approaching street car.

It was about this time he got the title of "Colonel." Those were the days of titles, and "Colonel" was an especially pleasant one. No military rank was necessary to earn this dignity; a man was either a Colonel or he wasn't. Rickey, however, really had some right to the title. He had served as a Colonel on a Governor's staff.

As the days went on and one body after another of Senators and Congressmen convened and adjourned, Colonel Rickey's fame spread throughout the land and even lapped on foreign shores. This man of the rotund, ruddy, smooth-shaven face, rather heavy set and of slightly less than medium height, became truly powerful.

It is told how a great corporation was trying to get its patents renewed, but was entirely unsuccessful. Finally, in despair, one of this corporation's officials approached Colonel Rickey.

"We can't get our patents renewed," the official plaintively informed the Colonel.

"It seems to be important that you get them renewed," said Rickey.

"Important! If we don't, we're ruined."

Rickey stroked his smooth chin. "How much," he asked, "is it worth to you?"

"It's worth $50,000 to us. But even you can't get them renewed," replied the disconsolate corporation man.

"Well, just wait and see," Rickey told him, and he was off.

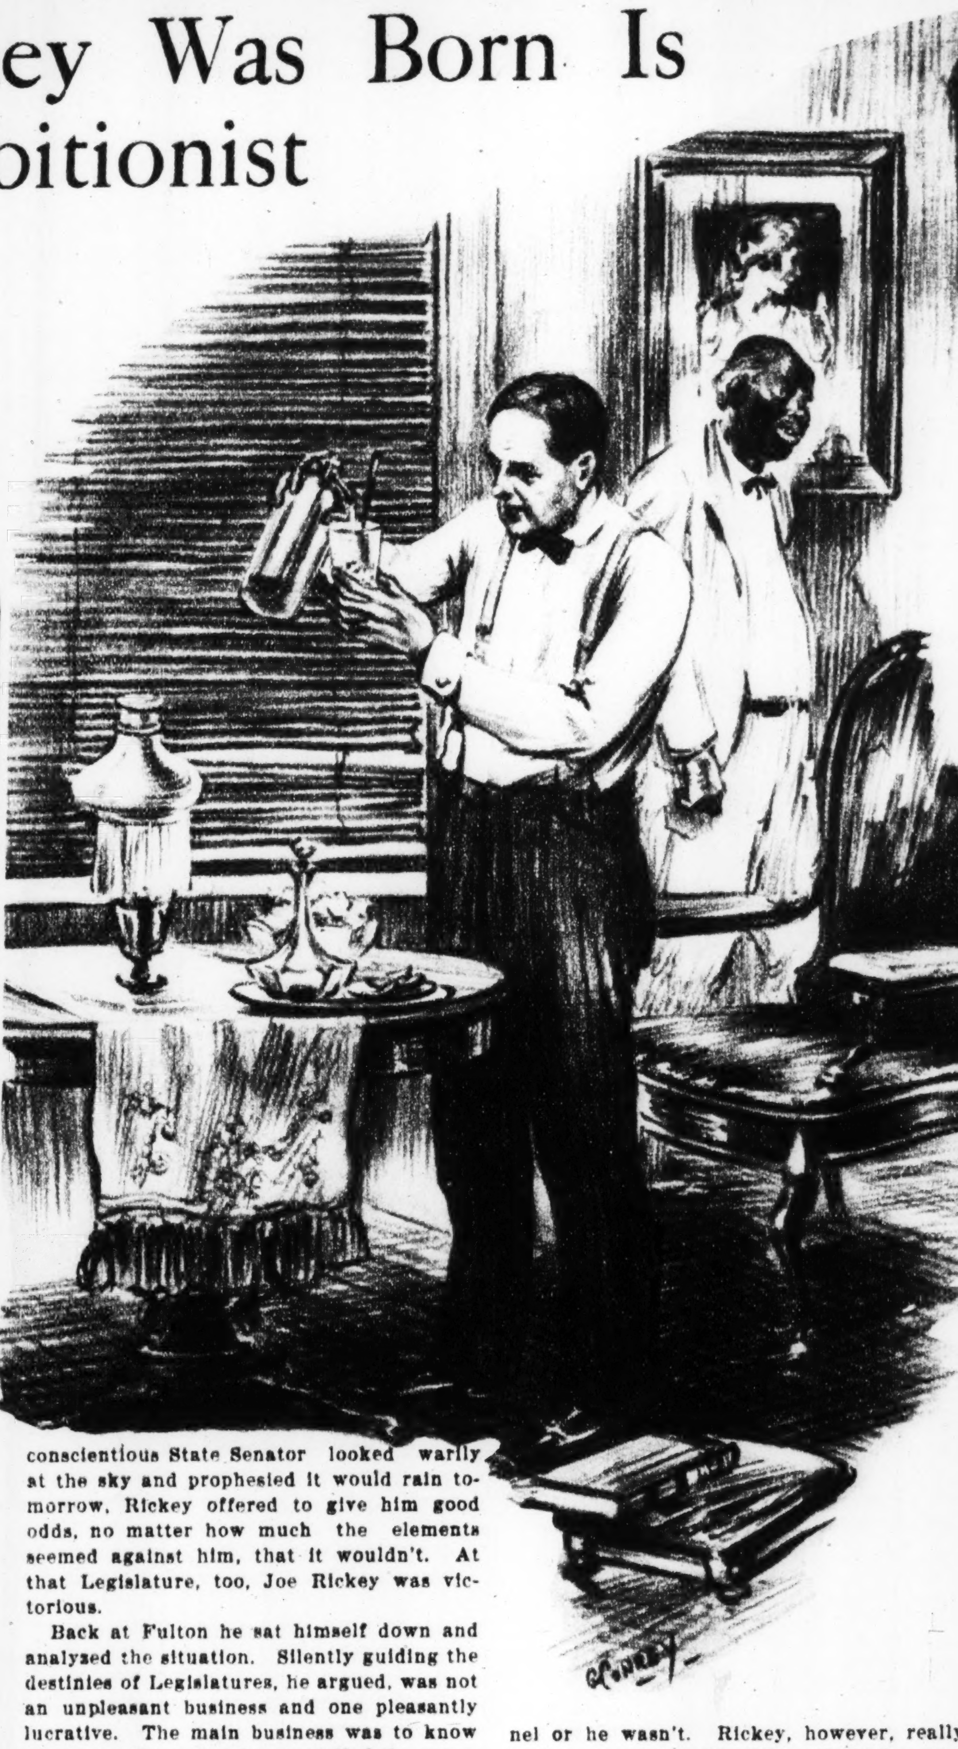
It is said in just 30 minutes the Colonel returned and with him he carried the patent renewals.

So he went his gay way. He bet on the first Cleveland election, getting long odds, and won $80,000. He lost more than that when Cleveland was defeated four years later, but he made it all back in a few weeks on sugar stocks. It is said he got his tips on sugar while in a poker game with several Senators who knew what the sugar schedule was to be. He lost heavily again when his friend, "Silver Dick" Bland, was defeated by Bryan for the Democratic presidential nomination.

CAME the auspicious day when the rickey drink was first given to an appreciative world. Colonel Rickey, on one of those occasions when he and his family returned to Fulton from Washington, was lounging on a warm morning in that particular room of the old mansion that constituted his study. Before him stood a cutglass carafe of bourbon and a pony glass. The Colonel filled the pony and tossed it off.

But it was a warm morning, and the good bourbon whisky did nothing to alleviate the heat. The expert liquor connoisseur grew meditative. And then he had one of those inspirations that caress great poets and men of consummate genius.

He called a negro servant and bade the boy bring him a bowl of cracked ice, a siphon of seltzer, a few limes sliced in twain, a long glass and a long spoon. The Colonel cast an eye upon the outfit put before him. He paused a moment. With one hand he reached for the glass, with the other he picked up a half of yellow lime. He let the tart fruit drop gently into the bottom of the long glass. He picked up the spoon and pressed its lip down upon the juicy lime, pressing that lime until it gave up its juice. Then the Colonel placed within the glass two chunks of ice. He grasped the cutglass carafe and, tilting it over the glass, allowed the bourbon to pour upon the lime and ice until the elixir filled a fifth of the remaining space. Then, as he stirred the precious contents with the long spoon, he siphoned in the seltzer, continually stirring as the charged water buzzed and chortled over the ice cliffs. When the seltzer had nigh reached the glass's top, the Colonel set away the siphon and lay aside the spoon.



Colonel Rickey sat back and surveyed his deed. Slowly he raised the tall glass to his lips. He puckered his brows and drank. Then a gay smile suffused his face; he drank and drank again. Parnassus on that day stood at Fulton, Missouri.

A few days later Colonel Rickey returned to Washington. Late one hot afternoon he entered the famous and now departed Shoomaker's bar. The Colonel had been indulging rather gayly that afternoon. He called to his favorite bartender.

"BRING me," he directed, "ice, limes, bourbon, seltzer." The sleek bartender did as he was bid. Rickey instructed him in the making of that same drink that had first been brought to this world that warm morning out in Fulton. The Colonel drank six of them; their cooling fragrance made life seem much better. He walked out of the bar. A friend of his, who had been watching from not far off as the Colonel downed his strange drinks, called the same bartender who had ministered to the gentleman from Missouri, and asked the man behind the bar to make for him one of those concoctions. The bartender did so. The gentleman smacked his lips. "Another," he instructed the sleek man in the immaculate white apron, "and have one yourself." They drank. "Have one on the house," said the jovial drink mixer, smiling as only a bartender, who has fashioned a new and exotic drink that pleases his palate, can smile. They drank again. They both gave thanks to Joe Rickey.

Two days later the gentleman who was the second ever to drink bourbon the way Joe Rickey had prepared it went to New York. Walking into the old Hoffman House bar of a morning, he said: "Give me a—a 'Rickey' "! He then, of course, had to elucidate. By nightfall the "whisky rickey" had spread ten squares up and down Broadway and was gaining momentum steadily.

And as it took Broadway, so it took the nation, and as it took the nation, so it took the civilized world, and parts of it that aren't so civilized. There became all sorts of rickeys: rickeys of gin and soda, rye whisky used in rickeys, whisky rickeys of soda as well as whisky rickeys of seltzer, even Scotch whisky rickeys. But the artist who first created the rickey insisted that bourbon whisky, and bourbon whisky alone, was the only liquor with which the drink which bore his name should be made.

Discussing drinking, he once learnedly said:

"Gin is a liquor no gentleman would ever bring himself to drink. Whisky is the only thing to make a rickey of, and it makes the only one that's fit to drink."

COLONEL JOE RICKEY died in 1903 in New York, where he was then spending much of his time. A policeman saw him staggering along the street near his house and took him home. There he collapsed. A small medicine vial fell out of his pocket. It smelled of carbolic acid. An inquest was held and death was said to have been caused by poison. But the Colonel's family would never admit suicide; they declared Colonel Rickey had always used a dilute solution of carbolic for a mouthwash, and that he had taken a stronger dose by mistake.

That the Colonel was a man of considerable talent none can gainsay. He wheedled and traded with Senators and Congressmen with an amazing deftness. He played his poker with a keen eye and a steady face. He told his stories with a pretty and poignant lucidness. But other congressional twisters, other neat card players, other fluent raconteurs have succeeded him; his fame for these gifts grows dim within the Capitol's halls. Still he need not ache for immortality. For despite the thin wooden spur marking all that's left of his Missouri mansion, despite the ravages of the antis and the sourness of synthetic draughts, the Colonel's rickey does not falter. It goes marching on.

DIVORCES BRIDE HE FOUND DISGUISED IN HIS CAMEL TRAIN

PARIS, France.

A FRENCH court has just dissolved a marriage union made in the Mongolian desert. The man and woman of that marriage won their way across Mongolia and through Tibet. They fought against heat and cold, famine and disease, perils of the land and perils of the natives. Still their marriage prospered; distress only bound them more closely together. They proved themselves brave and stalwart adventurers through unknown waste lands. Then they returned to civilization and its luxuries. And this marriage, which had prospered so well despite the ravages of tortuous Tibet, crumbled beneath the ease and pamperings of Europe.

* * * * * *

One evening, in the spring of 1904, there was a gay dance at the French Consulate at Shanghai. During the evening it was told by one dancer to the other that a young attache of the consulate, Comte Jacques de Lesdain, was soon to start from Pekin on a tour of exploration that would take him through Mongolia and across a region of Tibet so hazardous that no European had ever traversed it. Everyone applauded the young Comte for his bravery.

Among the guests at the consulate on this occasion was an American girl of 20, Carmen Mabel Bailey of New York. When she danced with the Comte de Lesdain she congratulated him for attempting his proposed exploration, and told him if she were a man she would do quite the same thing. The young Frenchman laughed and thanked her for her good wishes.

DE LESDAIN started out on his magnificent adventure, June 20, 1904. From Pekin he set out. His escort was a company of coolies. This was the retinue that was to aid a lone white man to traverse a territory so bleak, bitter and dangerous that no other explorer had ever won through it. He was saying good-by to civilization for a year and a half, he was to travel 5000 miles, his only guides were a few maps which he knew to be incorrect; he was going through a country of half savages. And to accomplish this journey he laid his hopes on a few European rifles and his Chinese coolies, already half scared to death at the journey's prospect. The amazing thing is that this man accomplished just what he set out to do.

The first five days' journey was without incident for the Comte. It was five days' travel in a burning heat, nights spent in Chinese inns, the rooms he occupied first having to be cleared of beggars, clad in foul rags, whose opium pipes left behind their pungent odors even after the holders of the pipes had been dispersed, but the explorer merely accepted these as minor irritations right in line with his business.

Then the Comte gave orders for his caravan to leave the beaten track and make for Or-tan-ho, the nearest Mongolian city. There he found his first adventure. This city, though within the borders of Mongolia, was mostly inhabited by Chinese, and part of these were Chinese Boxers. It had been but a few years since the Boxer uprisings, and these gentlemen still nourished grudges toward all whites.

De Lesdain soon had good proof of this. Wherever he went—and wherever he met men with the insignia of the Boxers on their backs or chests—curses were heaped upon him, the favorite phrase being "foreign devil." The Comte went his way and said nothing, practicing the theory that, after all, it takes sticks and stones to break bones.

But the Boxers became a little more vigorous when it came time for De Lesdain to pay his bill at the inn. The innkeeper, feeling safe in his demands, asked an exorbitant sum for the board and lodging of the caravan. De Lesdain told him he wouldn't hear of it, and offered to pay the usual price. His host said not a word, but, walking to the door, threw it open, and the Comte saw a courtyard crowded with Boxers. Wishing to get out of the place with all possible haste, De Lesdain ordered his men to run for the gate, which they did. It was securely fastened. And the Boxers, cheered on by the innkeeper, crushed about the little caravan and pushed it against the wall. It was no time for argument. De Lesdain drew his revolver and the move had immediate and enlightening results. The whole Boxer contingent broke, some running into the inn, others clambering over the walls of the yard. De Lesdain's men crashed through the gate and the caravan hurried away. They had gone over their first hazard.

IT WAS a few days later, when the caravan was making its way across a particularly hot stretch, that one of the coolies, loaded down with heavy baggage, collapsed. De Lesdain hurried to him. Upon lifting him up he discovered that this coolie was not a coolie at all, but a woman. And, dressed though she was in a Chinese outfit, and tied though her hair was in a Chinese knot, the Comte found that her face was not yellow, but merely stained that color.

She revived and, looking at the young Frenchman, murmured in English: "I'm so sorry. I tried to keep going, but I could stand the heat no longer."

THE Comte and Comtesse de Lesdain and the map of their great journey. Other pictures show scenes along the way; the fort and bridge of Namling Djong, the caravan in the desert, the temple of Aque Miao, a camp in the Alashan desert, a Chinese giant, and the Comtesse on the march.

The Comte, amazed, began to question her. Who was she, where had she come from, why had she come?

And then the girl asked him if he didn't remember her, Carmen Bailey, the American girl he had met that spring evening of the consulate's dance in far-off Shanghai? The Comte, his memory refreshed, now saw through the yellow tint of her skin the girl who had told him she would do just what he was about to do if she were a man.

"Please," she begged him, "let me go with you. My father has left Shanghai for America, and I'm perfectly free to do as I please. Do let me go with you. When I heard you were about to leave Pekin I hurried there from Shanghai and, dressing myself up the way I am now, I managed to get taken along with your caravan."

THE Comte told her she might come. He gave her one of his outfits to wear. He was impressed by her nerve and determination. Soon he had fallen in love with her. A few days later the caravan arrived at a Mongolian town and the Comte and Carmen Bailey were married by a Belgian missionary.

They kept on for a month now, crossing that part of Mongolia known as the Ordos. They wished to visit several of the Mongol Kings, but what they most desired to see was the tomb of Jenghis Khan, one of the greatest conquerors the world has ever known. To reach the tomb of Jenghis Khan was going to be no easy task. The Mongols wanted no whites around the tomb of their greatest Emperor. A white man's presence, alone, they argued, was a profanation. So strong was their distaste for a European's visit, and so well had they kept the site secret, that no Caucasian even knew where the great Khan's ashes rested.

Now, De Lesdain and his troop were in that territory that had been the birthplace of Jenghis. When the explorer reached the palace of Chongar he asked the Prince for the location of the great Khan's tomb. The Prince replied that it was a long way off, it was quite inaccessible and that no one had the key to it. The Comte's caravan put out for the next little kingdom, but the ruler, Prince Wangste, coldly turned the conversation away from every mention of Jenghis Khan, and the few times he deigned to answer such questions as he couldn't avoid, he did so untruthfully.

De Lesdain was not to be robbed of his game so easily. After an advance of two days, rumors led the Comte to believe he was near his goal. Meeting a group of Chinamen, he asked them where the great Mongol's tomb might be found. "You are not a day's march from it," they told him. De Lesdain ordered the caravan off at once. And before the sun had sunk, suddenly taking a turn in the road, which had been running through hilly country, they saw a simple, unadorned white mass, surmounted by two gilded balls.

They made for it. Soon they had persuaded the keeper to give them entrance; for the first time Jenghis Khan's tomb was visited by whites. And what a tomb it was. On a raised terrace some three feet high, surrounded by a palisade of crumbly posts, entered by a worm-eaten gate, the monument consisted of two worn-out felt tents. In the second of these tents—the first was an anteroom connected with the second by a shabby door—was a cubic chest. In the chest reposed the urn holding the ashes of the Conqueror. That was the tomb of the man who overran Persia, plundered part of Russia, scaled the Chinese wall and captured Pekin.

THEIR first mission accomplished, the Comte and Comtesse set out for new glories. They bought them at a high price. For four months they journeyed, beset by the severe winter of that region. They scaled mountains 12,000 feet high; often they were compelled to dismount and allow their mules and horses to slide down the ice paths as best they could. They had to guide the camels, which they had added to the expedition, through freezing torrents. Where they were not hampered by rushing streams of bitter cold water, huge ice blocks made their way all but impassable. The temperature dropped to 25 degrees below zero.

Now the men became disgruntled. They knelt down in the snow at the feet of these two white persons who they thought had lost their senses, and with grotesque gestures and tearful lamentations, begged them to retrace their steps.

But De Lesdain talked them down. The caravan proceeded.

It was late January, 1905. They were nearing Repalaraitse, far up in the country of Alashan, a mournful and deserted land. The ground was a foot deep in snow, when one of those unexpected misfortunes occurred, on which they had not reckoned. The Comtesse was taken with typhoid fever.

A few days before they had stopped at a well and filled their water casks, because in that district water was not easily found. But this water hole had been poisoned by the bones and flesh of dead animals. It was this water that had carried the typhoid germs to De Lesdain's wife.

When the nature of the Comtesse's illness was discovered, her husband called a halt. The little party stayed in this brooding spot, blotted out from all signs of life but occasional caravans of thin camels, for 22 days. The cold reached 37 degrees below zero. But the plucky woman fought through. When she was slightly better a litter was constructed for her, and the caravan started on forced marches to Liang-chou, where the Comtesse was nursed to health.

Undaunted, they started off again. Now their route took them over country never before crossed by whites.

The territory they found themselves in was most inhospitable and depressing. No signs did they find of human habitation. Water was meager. On all sides stretched great areas of sand, broken now and then by mud patches waiting to catch man or animal and suck him under.

This was the country of terrific sand hurricanes. Almost without warning, one of these storms would break upon them. Sand columns rose to great heights beside them, pebbles flew at them and beat against their faces; the horizon was blotted out as by the densest fog. It was impossible to see two or three yards ahead. And then the travelers would sprawl flat on the ground, their cloaks drawn up over their heads, and wait until the velocity of the wind had died.

THEY pushed on through a country not visited by rain in three years. They reached the Edsin Gol River. Its bed is of shifting sand, constantly moving, making it extremely difficult to determine where a safe fording place might be found. The animals, trying to cross, stuck in the sand; they had to be brought out by ropes and wooden levers used to pry them free. They went on.

Again they were in a hilly country. They climbed, sometimes, as high as 3000 feet a day. It was summer, but the weather grew perceptibly colder. They were in Zaidam, a principality of Mongolia. The explorers were getting on toward Tibet.

The country became the most desolate they had visited. All traces of vegetation had entirely disappeared. Not even shrubs could be coaxed to grow in this barren land. Down a slope they went, a naked slope that looked as though it must continue forever. They had been on their way for a year.

They left Mongolia behind and reached Tibet. For two and a half centuries this land had been the goal of European explorers. Some had been turned back at its borders; others had penetrated a distance and then had retreat forced upon them; a few had journeyed through some parts of it. This country, the roof of the world, is surrounded by a wall of mountains, a natural fortification more powerful than ever was the Wall of China. Once the traveler has entered the country he must traverse the highest land in the world. He is exposed to burning heat by day and to temperatures below zero at night. The oxygen content of the air is low. And besides his physical hardships, he finds himself unwelcomed by the natives.

De Lesdain and his caravan entered this forbidding territory. They climbed mountains 15,000 feet high. They came to a wide plain. On every side of them were bogs and pools of water. They would walk along for two or three hundred yards, then suddenly they'd sink in mud, from which it was most difficult to extricate themselves.

The men began to whimper. They told their masters tales of the savagery and barbarity of the Tibetan bandits. They moaned over the chances of death at the hands of the country's soldiers, who, they said, were as much to be feared as the outlaws. But De Lesdain would have none of this and drove them on. The brave example of the Comtesse, who stood on watch at night with her husband, did not cheer them. They blubbered that they would never again see their homes.

KEEPING on, they reached the River Ulan-muren. Swollen by the rains, it speeded down its course at tremendous velocity, occasionally sweeping off portions of the banks. De Lesdain, searching for a fording place, mounted a mule and drove it into the water. The animal lost its footing, struck out bravely and was carried down the stream some 200 yards before it reached a sandbar. Then it began to sink. Quicksand. The Comte threw himself off the animal, rolled onto the sand bank and spread open his coat, thus getting enough area to keep himself from being sucked under. The mule gradually sank into the treacherous sand. In less than three minutes the quicksand had closed over the tips of its long ears. De Lesdain cautiously rolled sideways, and, reaching the water, threw off his coat and swam to the shore. After much searching they found a safe passageway and went on. But not before they had lost several mules and a camel carrying 400 pounds of very necessary rice.

Over the mountains of Tibet they proceeded. They reached a rock promontory that could not be traversed. A short distance away they discovered a valley, and they were forced to turn off into it.

De Lesdain, in a book he has written about his exploration, tells of this leg of the journey.

"THIS valley and its continuation," he writes, "nearly proved to be the termination of our journey, and the grave of the caravan. During the three days that we spent in it we suffered more and worked harder than in all the rest of our crossing of Tibet. Here we fell in with the worst enemy—the irresistible, clinging, ubiquitous, invidious enemy—mud!

"What we had to do was to reach the Dangla Mountains as soon as possible. Their rocky and frozen sides afforded a haven of refuge. Of the 50 mules that we had with us when we began crossing this sea of mud, only six remained when we reached a wide and long valley with a gentle slope, which led on to one of the snowy passes lying to the southeast of the great semicircle, formed by the Dangla Mountains to the north.

"For two days hail had been falling incessantly; but a few minutes after our weary feet rested once more on solid ground the sky cleared suddenly, and there was even a gleam of sunshine.

"We were more like a shipwrecked crew than an exploring caravan. Nearly all our provisions had vanished, and the caravan had about four days' nourishment, consisting of flour, rice and millet. We had not a scrap of meat, and the few peas intended for the surviving mules had perished with the animal that carried them. Many of our cases containing Mongol and Tibetan curiosities were buried deep in the mud, and at

A Tale of Gladstone and the Ladies Goes to Court

A British Author Wrote a Book in Which He Said the Great Statesman Favored Nations as He Favored Their Ladies. Gladstone's Son and the Author Were Members of the Same London Club. The Author Was Expelled. He Sued the Club and Won.

Captain Peter Wright, whose book started the trouble.

LONDON, England.

THE city for days has had a topic of unusual and absorbing interest to gossip over and aid it in forgetting the ravages of the hot summer season. It has been no less a subject of eager discussion along the docks than in Mayfair. The aristocratic clubs of the West End have considered it a delicate affair, but this delicacy has not prevented their members from analyzing the situation. A court case has brought out comments on the moral character of the late Mr. William Ewart Gladstone, the eminent Victorian statesman, celebrated no less as a model Christian than as a great diplomat.

Captain Peter Wright, soldier, author and free lance journalist member of the Bath Club, a club which has many of the most aristocratic names of the empire upon its rolls, recently brought out a book called "Portraits and Criticisms." A paragraph in one of its chapters reads:

"Lord Salisbury's fastidious spirit was still further repelled by Liberalism, either in its members, who worshiped God and mammon with equal zest, assigning to mammon the inward service and leaving God to content Himself with the outward professions; or in its leader, Gladstone, who founded the great tradition since observed by many of his followers and successors with such pious fidelity, in public to speak the language of the highest and strictest principle and in private to pursue and possess every sort of woman."

There followed an assertion that Gladstone had changed his policy from favoring Turkey to favoring Russia, because, said the book, he met a woman named Olga Novikoff.

Captain Wright's book was read by Gladstone's son, Viscount Gladstone, a fellow member of the Bath Club. He immediately sat himself down and wrote the following letter to the author of "Portraits and Criticisms:"

"4, Cleveland-square, St. James's, S. W.

"Mr. Peter Wright—Your garbage about Mr. Gladstone in 'Portraits and Criticisms' has come to our knowledge. You are a liar. Because you slander a dead man you are a coward. And because you think that the public will accept inventions from such as you, you are a fool. GLADSTONE.

"I associate myself with this letter.

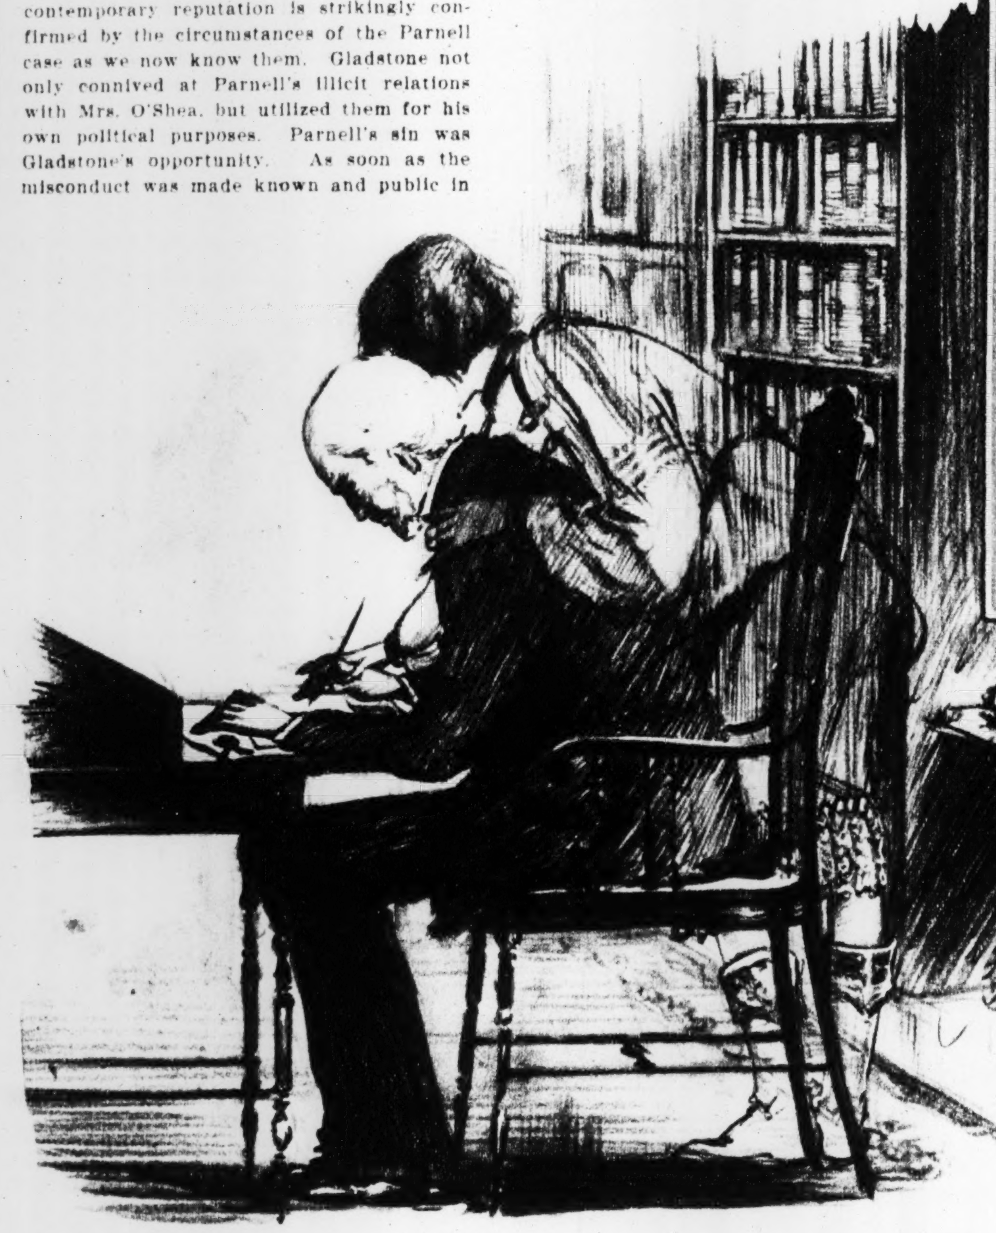
"Hawarden Castle, North Wales."

ON RECEIPT of Lord Gladstone's correspondence, Captain Wright wrote and sent the following note to the disturbed Viscount:

"My lord—I am in receipt of your lordship's outburst. I attributed to Mr. Gladstone the character of a hypocrite in matters of sex. I have evidence of his conduct as good as any that exists about events in the past. I wrote what I did write on the authority of the late Lord Milner; to use Milner's own phrase, Mr. Gladstone was 'governed by his seraglio.' This foible had considerable political effects. One affair turned Mr. Gladstone from being a friend of Turkey and an enemy of Russia, as he was in the fifties, into being a friend of Russia and an enemy of Turkey, as he was in the eighties.

"Mr. Gladstone's hypocritical character (which in no way detracts from his merits as a public financier) is the common, though it may not be official, reputation of him that has descended to us. It was crystallized in Labouchere's famous epigram 'That Gladstone might be caught playing cards with a fifth ace up his sleeves, but he would only explain that God had put it there.' This contemporary reputation is strikingly confirmed by the circumstances of the Parnell case as we now know them. Gladstone not only connived at Parnell's illicit relations with Mrs. O'Shea, but utilized them for his own political purposes. Parnell's sin was Gladstone's opportunity. As soon as the misconduct was made known and public in divorce proceedings, Gladstone was foremost in denouncing its immorality.



"This hypocrisy in the case of another is more heinous than any hypocrisy in the case of himself. Strong temptation might cause his own departure from his own avowed principles; no such excuse can be found in the case of another. Knowing he could commit the greater offense, I do not find it difficult to believe he could commit the smaller.

"These various considerations prompted the remarks about Mr. Gladstone at which you take offense. Thus based, my views are unshaken even by the impact of your lordship's controversial language, which, if I may say so without impoliteness, must rather have been acquired by practice in your lordship's pantry than by the exercise of your lordship's talents for debate in the House of Lords—I am your lordship's obedient servant, PETER E. WRIGHT.

"The Bath Club, Dover-street, W."

BEFORE long Captain Wright was notified that he had been expelled from the Bath Club and his entrance fee was returned to him. Among those on the committee, which had voted Captain Wright's expulsion, were Lord Desborough, president of the club; Commander Louis Greig, aide-de-camp to the Duke of York; Mr. H. P. Hansell, once tutor of the Prince of Wales; Sir Alfred Fripp and Sir Frank Swettenham.

Captain Wright, indignant that he should have been ousted without having been given the opportunity to appear before the committee and defend himself, entered suit against the club for damages. The case was heard the other day before Mr. Justice Horridge and a special jury. The courtroom was crowded with persons more often seen at the balls of Mayfair than in London's halls of justice.

Mr. H. St. John Field, attorney for Captain Wright, opened the proceedings by reading the minutes of the Bath Club Committee the day Captain Wright was discussed. "No minutes could have told less of what was said," observed Mr. Field. "No charge appears to have been formulated at all." Mr. Field referred to the advantages to be gained from membership in this "West End social club." To a bachelor it offered a refuge from loneliness and boredom, and the cost was incomparable to the advantages received. "So long as this stigma is upon him," continued counsel, "Captain Wright cannot go and ask to join another West End club, nor, I should think, could they accept him. Nothing could be more damaging to him than the action of the club. He was condemned unheard and expelled with every element of publicity and shame."

Captain Wright, the plaintiff, was then called, and said he was born in Paris and was the descendant of old Yorkshire yeoman stock. He was educated at Harrow and Balliol, read for the bar and became author and free-lance journalist. The book containing the passage about Lord Gladstone was a collection of articles previously written. The allusion to the late Mr. Gladstone appeared in a passage dealing with the late Lord Salisbury, which was inserted in the book when it was in proof form.

Mr. St. John Field: When you wrote that reference to Mr. Gladstone, did you believe it?

The witness: It was my opinion, and it is now my absolute conviction.

His lordship observed that he proposed to keep the case to the single issue of whether the plaintiff was properly expelled. "He might have put most excellent reasons before a fair committee, and might have convinced a fair committee that they had nothing to do with the matter," he added.

Captain Wright said that when he received the letter calling upon him to resign his membership in the club he immediately returned to London, took advice, and prepared himself with a sufficient answer to the charge set out in the letter in case the committee called him before them. "I had a very complete answer," he added.

Counsel: Were you ever called before the committee?—Never.

SIR JOHN SIMON, attorney for the club, began his cross-examination by asking: "The Bath Club is, is it not, a club for ladies and gentlemen?"

The witness agreed.

His Lordship: Then it does not come within the definition of the bishop when he said, "A place where women cease from troubling, And the weary are at rest." (Laughter.)

Sir John: No, my Lord. (To the witness): There are also ladies who are members of the families of the gentlemen?—I don't know. I imagine so.

So far as the men members are concerned it is a club for gentlemen, is it not?—That is so.

His Lordship: But everybody now is that.

Sir John (to witness): Do you take the view that every man on two legs is a gentleman for the purposes of the Bath Club?—I don't understand your question.

"Don't you?" was counsel's comment, and he went on to ask: "I dare say you have noticed that Rule 43 gives the committee the responsibility, providing the conditions of the rule are satisfied, for dealing with cases of the men whose conduct they think is injurious to the character and interest of the club?"

Witness: Yes.

Viscount Gladstone, son of the statesman.

Sir John: Just suppose that somebody who has become a member of the club has behaved notoriously—not like a gentleman but like a cad—would you think it injurious to the character and interest of the club that he should remain a member?—I should have to inquire into it before I came to the decision that he had acted like a cad.

Sir John said he was asking Captain Wright to assume the position, and repeated his question.

Captain Wright: If I knew he was a cad, certainly he ought not to remain a member.

Sir John: Do you observe that twenty-two gentlemen voted for your expulsion?—Yes, but they did it on the false minutes sent to them.

Sir John: They may have complied with the rules, or they may not—that is for my Lord to decide—but do you suggest that in what they did they were not acting honestly in what they conceived to be the interests of the Bath Club?—No, I do not, but I do suggest that the minutes of the meeting, which were read to them, were false. I should say they acted perfectly honestly.

SIR JOHN: Whom do you accuse of making false minutes?—Why, Wilson Taylor, secretary of the club, of course. He swore a false affidavit. What are false minutes to him? Mere child's play.

Proceeding with his cross-examination, Sir John referred the witness to his book, and read the passage relating to the late Mr. Gladstone, remarking that it appeared in an article on Lord Robert Cecil (now Viscount Cecil), and asked: "Are you surprised that Mr. Gladstone's sons should call that a foul charge?"

Witness: Yes, if they knew the truth.

Sir John: I do not want to discuss other people's fathers. I want to know your view. I am going to ask you a question: Are you surprised that any son should regard that sort of statement, made about a father who stood high in the world, as a foul charge?—Yes, if he knew it was true. If it is true it is a matter of public interest.

Sir John: You also say that many of Mr. Gladstone's followers and successors followed the same course with pious fidelity, to "pursue and possess every sort of woman." Do you really think you ought to have damages from the jury because the Bath Club committee says you are not the sort of person who ought to be a member of the club?—But it is true, Sir John. It is a matter of public interest. I am justified in saying what I like, even if it is indecent and atrocious, if it is true.

Sir John: Is it your view, that if that is said about a man's father, it is as awful and horrible a charge as could well be made?—Of course, but I would not put it as strongly as that. It has been made against many great men without any disparagement of their reputations.

You don't regard it as disparaging to say a man pursues and possesses every sort of woman?—Yes, it is disparaging, certainly, but it is not so atrocious as you make out.

YOUR view is that it does not matter?—Oh, no. But the greatest people have had the same sort of thing said against them. Take the Duke of Wellington and Julius Caesar, and people of that sort. They remain great people, all the same.

Sir John: In your letter in reply to Lord Gladstone's you say: "I wrote what I did write on the authority of the late Lord Milner, who said he (Mr. Gladstone) was governed by his seraglio," and you go on: "Your lordship's controversial language . . . must rather have been acquired by practice in your lordship's pantry than by the exercise of your lordship's talents for debate in the House of Lords." Lord Gladstone denies that there is a word of truth in what you said.—Where does he deny it?

He has called you a liar. Do you tell the jury that this stuff about the pantry is language any gentleman should use?—Just as gentlemanly as Lord Gladstone's. If the Bath Club want to expel people for ungentlemanly language why not expel his lordship? He might have protested in a different and far better and more effective and dignified way. I think he used the language of the pantry. I adhere to that.

Then you do not think your conduct was ungentlemanly?—Not under the provocation.

There is not a word in that letter you are sorry for?—Sorry for! I wish I had used much stronger language to him.

In further cross-examination plaintiff admitted that in a letter written to the "Nation" he said he had referred to Mr. Gladstone's "pursuit of women in his own level of life." When he wrote that he meant it, and he meant it now.

Re-examined, Captain Wright explained that when he referred to the change in Mr. Gladstone's Eastern policy towards Russia, and against Turkey, he was alluding to Mr. Gladstone's connection with Olga Novikoff.

Mr. St. John Field: Mr. T. P. O'Connor appears to say that his reference in The Daily Telegraph to Mr. Gladstone's seraglio referred to Mrs. Gladstone and his daughter. Was that the sense in which you understood the phrase?—Certainly not.

Addressing the jury, Sir John Simon said that in the circumstances he was speaking to them only on the question of damages. "What damages do you think the plaintiff should receive?" he asked. "I suggest the smallest coin of the realm will give him just about a farthing more than he is worth." . . . "This monstrous piece of garbage," was counsel's description of Captain Wright's reference to Mr. Gladstone. As one piece of evidence in support of his statement, he mentioned that he had been reading Lady Gwendoleyn Cecil's life of her father, in which that lady had described the view applied to her father as being "absurdly untrue." Further support he said he got from the obituary notice in The Daily Telegraph of the late Lord Milner, by Mr. T. P. O'Connor, who wrote:

"If Gladstone were mentioned—Gladstone was then in the zenith of the blind worship which he received from so many millions of his fellow citizens—the tall, young scholar (Lord Milner), straight apparently from the college hall, would answer with a laugh that you could not tell what Gladstone was going to do till you knew what his seraglio had decided; it was by this disrespectful word, said with a laugh, that the daring and skeptical youngster spoke of the devoted wife and daughter who looked after the domestic comforts of the great Liberal leader."

Mr. Justice Horridge, in his summing up, said:

"CAPTAIN WRIGHT entered into a contract with a limited company that he should on payment of his subscription be entitled to use that club unless he were properly expelled.

"The Bath Club Company do not deny that this man was improperly expelled. It is a fundamental principle of English justice, in which Sir John Simon concurred, that a man should never be condemned unless he were heard, and when a committee is acting in a judicial character it should approach the subject under consideration free from bias.

"The jury must remember that in this case they are dealing with a great public character. It is all very well to be told, 'What would you think if any of you were to hear something said about your father?'

"It may well be that your father did not go in for publicity or public life, but where a man takes up a public position and accepts the emoluments he is open to criticism in the way it could properly be leveled, but which would not be fair in the case of a private individual.

"This is a case where a man has occupied a great public position, and his family must put up with all that is said about him in his public capacity and on his private character in so far as it affects its public aspect.

"The jury will probably think that if a man were expelled from a West End Club, if damages are recoverable, it would be a serious matter. If he afterwards attempted to join another club, and it came out that he was expelled from one club, no other club would be likely to admit him, and the jury may take it that that expulsion was wrong.

"The jury cannot say, 'On the whole, we think the committee was right,' because the committee in this case had violated every instinct of justice by choosing to turn out Captain Wright without giving him a chance of being heard."

The jury retired, and on returning into court, after a short absence, the foreman said they had found for Captain Wright, and assessed the damages for loss of amenities at £100 and the damages for loss of reputation at £25.

Mr. Jowitt, K. C., who appeared with Sir John Simon for the club, said that although the question of damage to reputation raised an important principle in law, the amount awarded was so small that the club would not trouble the Judge with legal arguments on the question.

Judgment was accordingly entered in Captain Wright's favor for £125, with costs.

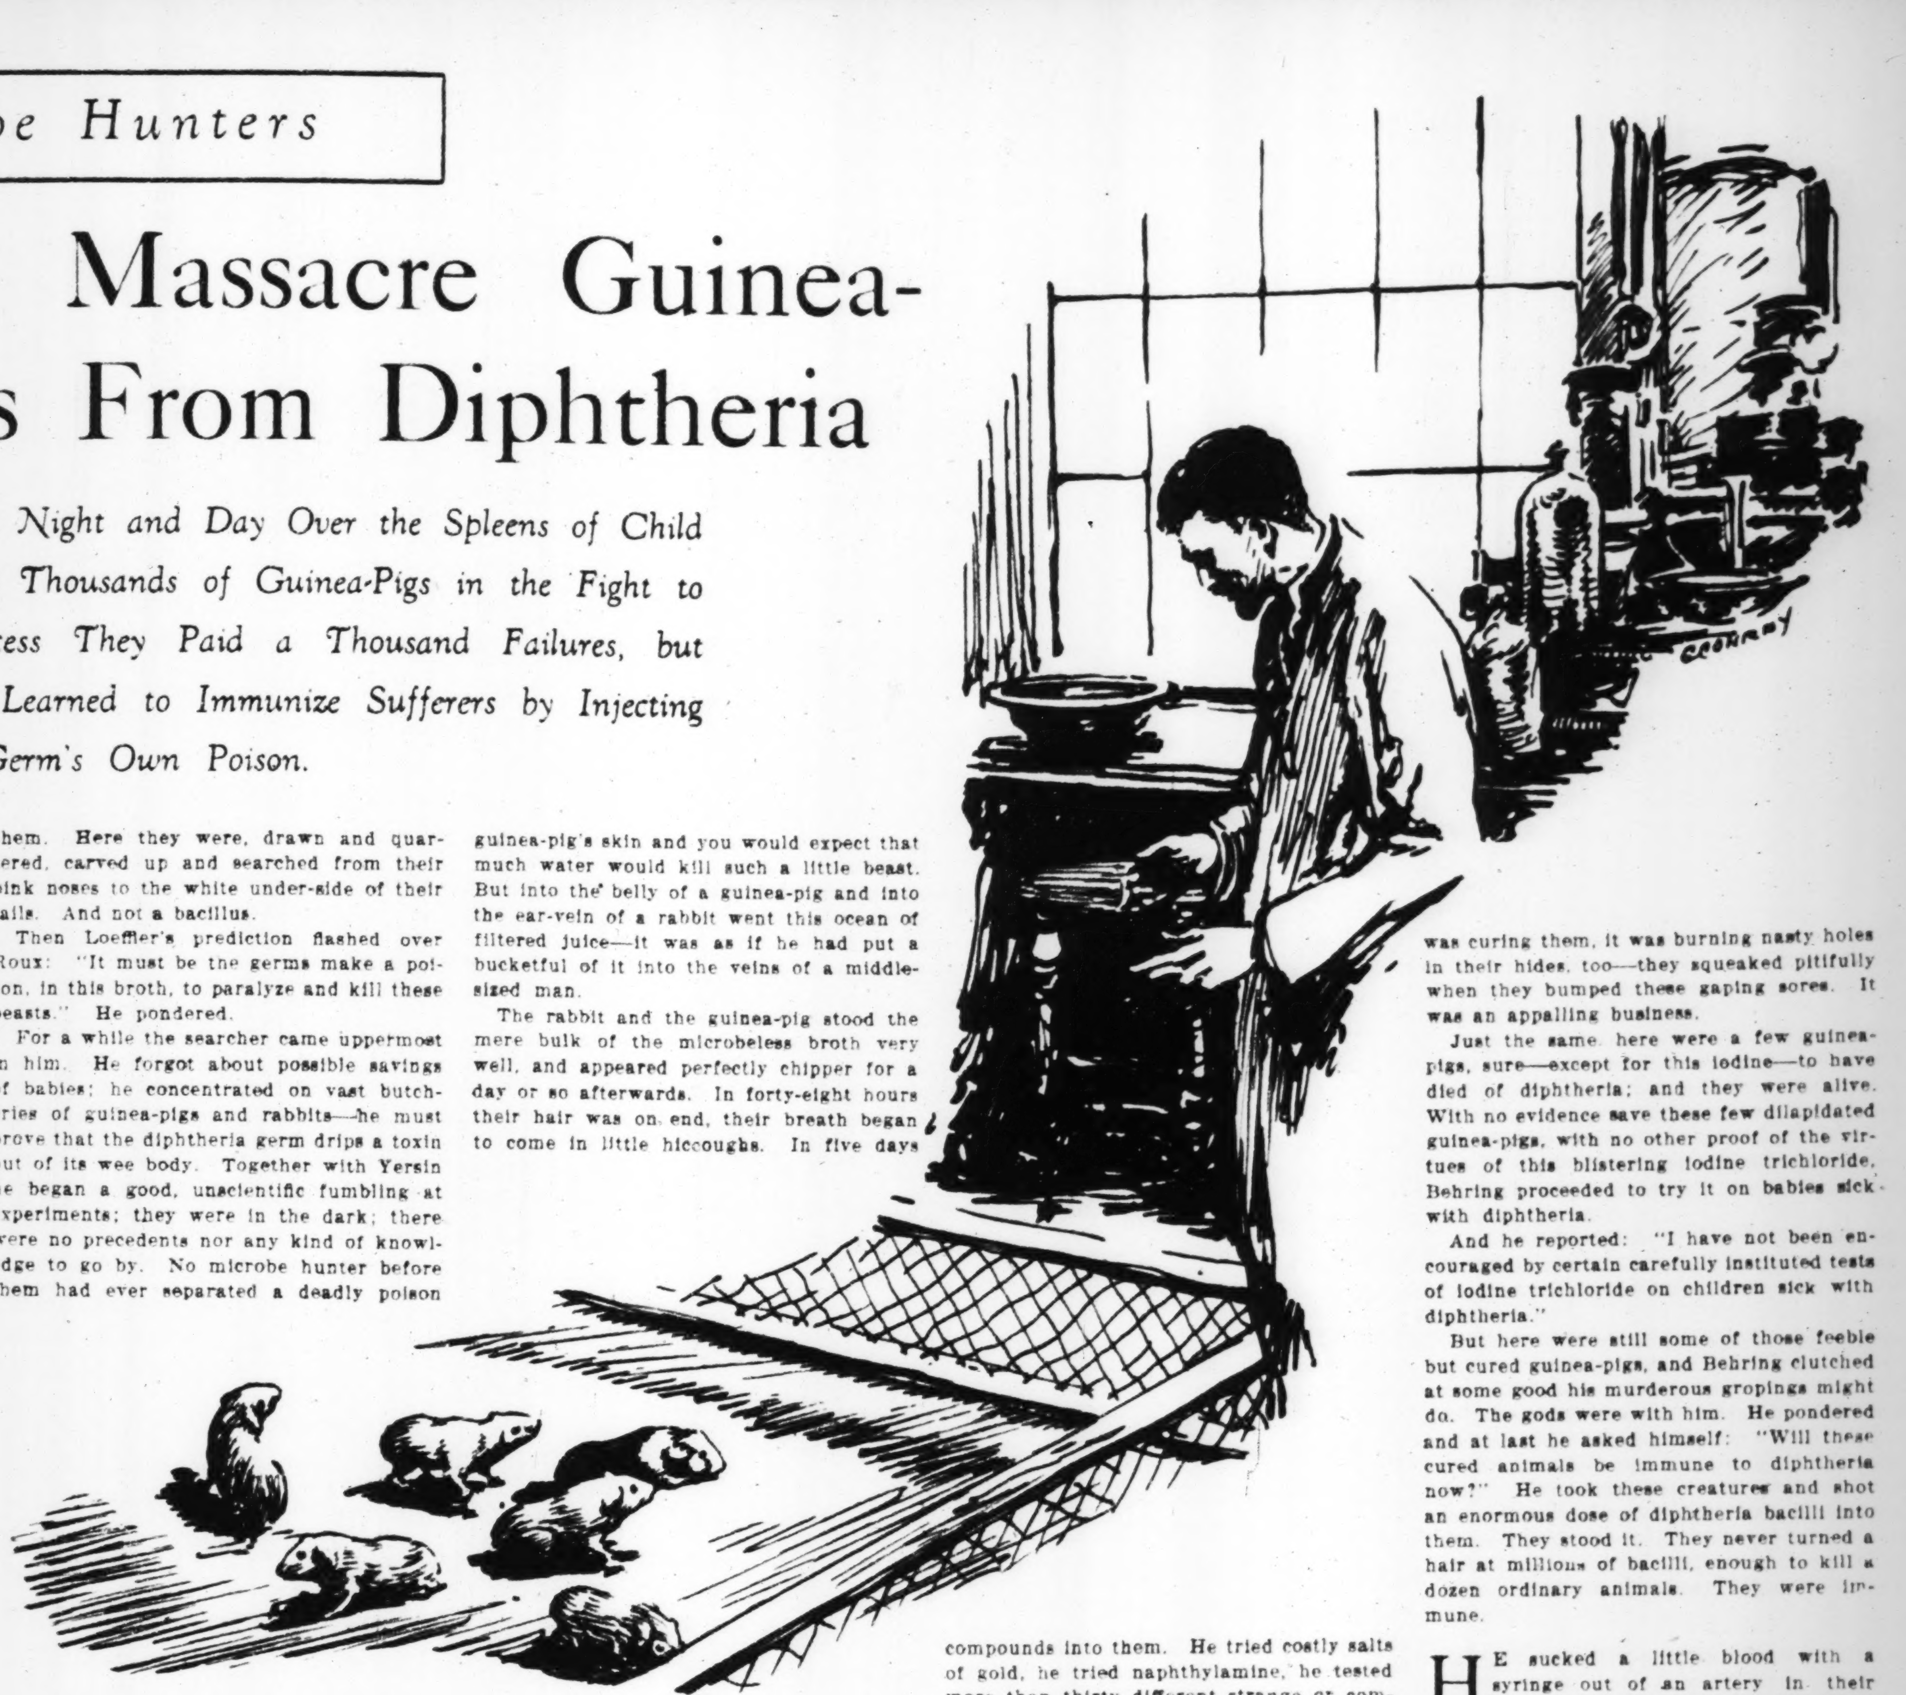
The Microbe Hunters

Roux and Behring Massacre Guinea-Pigs to Save Babies From Diphtheria

In the Deadhouses of Hospitals They Toiled Night and Day Over the Spleens of Child Victims of the Disease and They Butchered Thousands of Guinea-Pigs in the Fight to Stem the Malady's Ravages. For Each Success They Paid a Thousand Failures, but They Discovered the Murderous Bacillus and Learned to Immunize Sufferers by Injecting Small Doses of the Germ's Own Poison.



By PAUL DE KRUIF

CHAPTER 6.

IT was to save the babies that they killed so many guinea pigs. Emile Roux, the fanatical helper of Pasteur in 1888, took the tools his master had laid down and started on searches of his own. In a little while he discovered a strange poison seeping from the bacillus of diphtheria—one ounce of the pure essence of this stuff was enough to kill 75,000 big dogs. A few years later, while Robert Koch was bending under the abuse and curses of sad ones who had been disappointed by his supposed cure for consumption, Emil Behring, the poetical pupil of Koch, spied out a strange virtue, an unknown something, in the blood of guinea pigs. It could make that powerful diphtheria poison completely harmless. These two Emils revived men's hopes after Koch's disaster, and once more people believed for a time that microbes were going to be turned from assassins into harmless little pets.

What experiments these two young men made to discover this diphtheria antitoxin. They went at it frantic to save lives; they groped at it among bizarre butcherings of countless guinea pigs. Roux dug ghoulishly into the spleens of dead children—Behring bumped his nose in the darkness of his ignorance against facts the gods themselves could not have predicted. For each brilliant experiment these two had to pay with a thousand failures.

But they discovered the diphtheria antitoxin.

They never could have done it without the modest discovery of Frederick Loeffler. It was in the early eighteen eighties, and diphtheria, which several times each hundred years seems to have violent ups and downs of viciousness—diphtheria was particularly numerous then. The wards of the hospitals for sick children were melancholy with a forlorn wailing.

Five out of ten of the cots sent their tenants to the morgue.

Below in the deadhouse toiled Frederick Loeffler, boiling knives, heating platinum wires red hot and with them lifting grayish stuff from the still throats of those bodies the doctors had failed to keep alive; and this stuff he put into slim tubes capped with white fluffs of cotton, or he painted it with dyes, which showed him, through the microscope, that there were queer bacilli shaped like Indian clubs in those throats—microbes which the dye painted with pretty blue dots and stripes and bars. In nearly every throat he discovered these strange bacilli; he hurried to show them to his master, Koch.

ONE dead child after another Loeffler examined; he poked into every part of each pitiful body; he stained a hundred different slices of every organ—he tried—and quickly succeeded—in growing those queer barred bacilli pure. But everywhere he searched, in every part of each body, he found no microbes—except in the membrane-cluttered throat. And always here, in every child but one or two, he came on those Indian-club-shaped rods. "How can these few microbes, growing nowhere in the body but the throat—how can these few germs, staying in that one place, kill a child so quickly?" pondered Loeffler. He proceeded to shoot the germs of his pure cultivations into the windpipes of rabbits and beneath the skins of guinea pigs. Quickly these animals died—in two or three days, like a child, or even more quickly—but the microbes, which Loeffler had shot into them in millions, could only be found at the spot where he had injected them. And sometimes there were none to be found, even here, or at best a few feeble ones hardly strong enough, you would think, to hurt a flea.

Never was there a more conscientious searcher than this Loeffler, nor one with less of a wild imagination to liven—or to spoil—his almost automatic exactness. He sat himself down; he wrote a careful, scientific paper; it was modest, it was cold, it was not hopeful, it was a most unlawyerlike report reciting all the fors and againsts on the question of whether or no this new bacillus was the cause of diphtheria. He leaned over backward to be honest—he put last the facts that were against it! "This microbe may be the cause," you can hear him mumbling as he wrote, "but in a few children dead of diphtheria I could not find these germs . . . none of my inoculated animals get paralysis as children do . . what is most against me is that I've discovered this same microbe—it was vicious against guinea-pigs and rabbits, too—in the throat of a child with never a sign of diphtheria."

He even went so far as to underestimate the importance of his exact, fine searching, but at the end of his treatise he gave a clew to the more imaginative Roux and Behring who came after him.

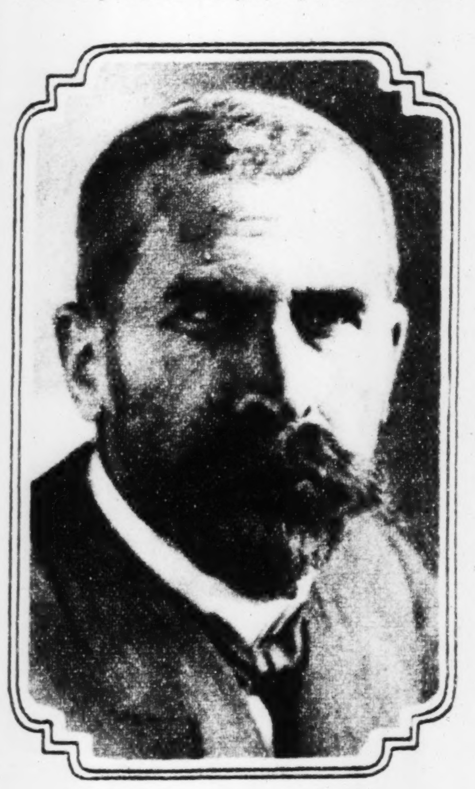
"This bacillus stays on a little patch of dead tissue in the throat of a baby; it lurks on a little point under a guinea-pig's skin; it never swarms in millions—yet it kills! How?

"IT must make a poison—a toxin that leaks out of it, sneaking from it to some vital spot in the body. Such a toxin must be found, in the organs of a dead child, in the carcass of a guinea-pig dead of the disease and in the broth where the bacillus grows so well. The man finding this poison will prove what I have failed to demonstrate." Such was the dream Loeffler put into Roux's head.

Four years later Loeffler's words came true—by what seemed an utterly silly but what was surely a most fantastical experiment you would have thought could only result in drowning a guinea-pig.

Roux—and he was helped by the intrepid Yersin, who afterward brilliantly discovered the germ of the black death—set out to try to find a way to wipe diphtheria from the earth.

They went to the Hospital for Sick Children—diphtheria was playing hell with Paris



ROUX

—and here they ran on the same bacillus Loeffler had found. They grew this microbe in flasks of broth, and did the regular accepted thing first, shooting great quantities of this soup into an assorted menagerie of unfortunate birds and quadrupeds who had to die without the satisfaction of knowing they were martyrs. It wasn't particularly enlightened searching, but almost from the tap of the gong they stumbled on one of the proofs Loeffler had failed to find. Their diphtheria soup paralyzed rabbits. The stuff went into their veins; in a few days the delighted experimenters watched these beasts drag their hind legs limply after them; the palsy crept up their bodies to their front legs and shoulders—they died in a clammy, dreadful paralysis.

"It hits rabbits just the way it does children," muttered Roux. "This bacillus must be the true cause of diphtheria. I shall find the germ in these rabbits' bodies now!" And he clawed tissues out of a dozen corners of their carcasses; he made cultivations of their spleens and hearts—but never a bacillus. Only a few days before he had pumped a billion or so into them, each of them. Here they were, drawn and quartered, carved up and searched from their pink noses to the white under-side of their tails. And not a bacillus.

Then Loeffler's prediction flashed over Roux: "It must be the germs make a poison, in this broth, to paralyze and kill these beasts." He pondered.

For a while the searcher came uppermost in him. He forgot about possible savings of babies; he concentrated on vast butcheries of guinea-pigs and rabbits—he must prove that the diphtheria germ drips a toxin out of its wee body. Together with Yersin he began a good, unscientific fumbling at experiments; they were in the dark; there were no precedents nor any kind of knowledge to go by. No microbe hunter before them had ever separated a deadly poison (though Pasteur had once made something of a try at it) from the bodies of microbes. They were alone in the dark, Roux and Yersin—but they lighted matches. "The bacilli must pour out a poison into the broth we grow them in—just as they pour it from their membrane in a child's throat into his blood." Of course, that last was not proved.

THEN Roux stopped arguing in a circle. He searched. He worked with his hands. He took big glass bottles and put pure, microbeless soup into them, and sowed pure cultivations of the diphtheria bacillus in this broth; into the incubating oven went the large-bellied bottles. "Now we will try separating the germs from the soup in which they grow," said Roux, after the bottle had ripened for four days. They rigged up a strange apparatus—it was a filter, shaped like a candle, only it was hollow and made of fine porcelain that would let the soup through, but so tight-meshed that it would hold the tiniest bacilli back. With tongue-protruding care to keep themselves from being splashed with this deadly stuff, they poured the microbe-teeming broth around the candles they held rigid in shiny glass cylinders. They fussed, but the broth wouldn't run through the porcelain. But at last they pushed it through with high air pressure—and finally they breathed easy, arranging little flasks full of a clear, amber-colored filtered fluid (it had never a germ in it) on their laboratory bench.

"This stuff should have the poison in it . . . the filter has held back all the microbes—but this stuff should kill our animals," muttered Roux. The laboratory buzzed with eager animal-boys getting ready the rabbits and guinea-pigs. Into the bellies of these beasts went the golden juice propelled from the syringe by Roux's deft hands.

He became a murderer in his heart, this Emile Roux, and in his head as he came down to the laboratory each morning were half-mad wishes for the death of his beasts. "The stuff should be hitting them by now," you can hear him growling to Yersin, but they looked in vain for the ruffled hair, the dragging hind legs, the cold, shivering bodies to tell them their wish was coming true.

Roux tried again. He shot bigger doses of his filtered soup into the animals, other animals, still more animals. It was no go, there was no poison.

THAT is, for a merely sensible man there would have been no poison in the filtered soup that had stood in the incubator for four days. "There is a poison there!" you can hear that hawk-faced, consumptive Roux shout to himself. "There must be a poison in this soup where the diphtheria germs have grown—else why should those rabbits have died?"

Then Roux nearly drowned a guinea-pig. For weeks he had been injecting more and more of his filtered soup, but now he injected thirty times as much—thirty-five cubic centimeters Roux shot under the guinea-pig's skin and you would expect that much water would kill such a little beast. But into the belly of a guinea-pig and into the ear-vein of a rabbit went this ocean of filtered juice—it was as if he had put a bucketful of it into the veins of a middle-sized man.

The rabbit and the guinea-pig stood the mere bulk of the microbeless broth very well, and appeared perfectly chipper for a day or so afterwards. In forty-eight hours their hair was on end, their breath began to come in little hiccoughs. In five days they were dead, with exactly the same symptoms their brothers had, after injections of the living diphtheria bacilli.

Roux had got his start. With this silly experiment as an uncertain flashlight, he went tripping and stumbling through the thickets, he bent his sallow, bearded face over a precise, long series of tests. Then suddenly he was out in the open. Presently, it was not more than two months later, he hit on the reason his poison had been so weak before—he simply hadn't left his germ-filled bottles in the incubator for long enough; there hadn't been time enough for them really to get down to work to make their deadly stuff. So, instead of four days, he left the microbes stewing at body temperature in their soup for forty-two days, and when he ran that brew through the filter—presto! With bright eyes he watched unbelievably tiny amounts of it do dreadful things to his animals—he couldn't seem to cut down the dose to an amount small enough to keep it from doing sad damage to his guinea-pigs. Exultant, he watched feeble drops of it do away with rabbits, murder sheep, lay large dogs low. He played with this fatal fluid; he dried it; he tried to get at the chemistry of it (but failed); he got out a very concentrated essence of it, though, and weighed it, and made long calculations.

An Outline of "Microbe Hunters"

IT was to save the babies that Roux and Behring launched into the most relentless massacre of guinea-pigs that the scientific world had heard of. The story of this massacre done in the fight against diphtheria is told in today's installment of Paul de Kruif's book, "Microbe Hunters," published by Harcourt, Brace & Co.

Foregoing installments have described the work of Leeuwenhoek, Spallanzani, Pasteur and Koch, heroes all in the cause of science. Following chapters will be devoted to Metchnikoff, the discoverer of the nice phagocytes, or wandering cells which kill microbes; Theobald Smith, who proved that insects carry disease; David Bruce, who trailed sleeping sickness to the tsetse fly; Ross and Grassi and their exposure of the malaria mosquito; Walter Reed, who cleared the earth of yellow fever, and Paul Ehrlich, discoverer of the magic bullet, "606."

ONE ounce of that purified stuff was enough to kill 600,000 guinea-pigs—or 75,000 large dogs! And the bodies of those guinea-pigs who had got a six-hundred-thousandth of an ounce of this pure toxin—the tissues of those bodies looked like the sad tissues of a baby dead with diphtheria.

So it was Roux made Loeffler's prophecy come true; it was that way he discovered the fluid messenger of death which trickles from the insignificant bodies of diphtheria bacilli. But he stuck here; he had explained how a diphtheria germ murdered babies, but he had found no way to stop its maraudings.

But away in Berlin there toiled another Emile—Emil August Behring.

"I will find a chemical to cure diphtheria!" he cried, and inoculated herds of guinea-pigs with cultivations of virulent diphtheria bacilli. They got sick, and as they got sicker he shot various chemical compounds into them. He tried costly salts of gold, he tried naphthylamine, he tested more than thirty different strange or common substances. He believed innocently because these things could kill microbes in a glass tube without damaging the tube, they would also hit the diphtheria bacilli under a guinea-pig's hide without ruining the guinea-pig. But alas, from the slaughter house of dead and dying guinea-pigs his laboratory was, you would suppose he would have seen there was little to choose between the deadly microbes and his equally murderous cures. Then, in his enthusiastic—but random—search he came upon the trichloride of iodine.

UNDER the skins of several guinea-pigs he shot a dose of diphtheria bacilli sure to kill them. In a few hours these microbes began their work; the spot of the injection became swollen, got ominously hot, the beasts began to droop—then, six hours after the fatal dose of the bacilli, Behring shot in his iodine trichloride. "It is no good, once more," he muttered. The day passed with no improvement and the next morning the beasts began to go into collapses. Solemnly he put the guinea-pigs on their backs, then poked them with his finger to see if they could still scramble back on their feet. . . . "If the guinea-pig can still get up when you poke him, there may be yet a chance for him," explained Behring to his amazed assistants. What a test that was—think of a doctor having a test like this to see whether or no his patient would live. And what an abominably crude test. Less and less the iodine-treated guinea-pigs moved when he poked them—there was now no longer any hope.

Then one morning Behring came into his laboratory to see those guinea-pigs on their feet. Staggering about, and dreadfully scraggly looking beasts they were, but they were getting better from diphtheria, these creatures whose untreated companions had died days before.

In a fever he went at trying to cure more guinea-pigs with this iodine stuff; sometimes the diphtheria bacilli killed these poor beasts; sometimes the cure killed them; once in a while one or two of them survived and crawled painfully back to their feet. There was little certainty of this horrible cure and no rhyme or reason. The guinea-pigs who survived probably wished they were dead, for, while the trichloride was curing them, it was burning nasty holes in their hides, too—they squeaked pitifully when they bumped these gaping sores. It was an appalling business.

Just the same here were a few guinea-pigs, sure—except for this iodine—to have died of diphtheria; and they were alive. With no evidence save these few dilapidated guinea-pigs, with no other proof of the virtues of this blistering iodine trichloride, Behring proceeded to try it on babies sick with diphtheria.

And he reported: "I have not been encouraged by certain carefully instituted tests of iodine trichloride on children sick with diphtheria."

But here were still some of those feeble but cured guinea-pigs, and Behring clutched at some good his murderous gropings might do. The gods were with him. He pondered and at last he asked himself: "Will these cured animals be immune to diphtheria now?" He took these creatures and shot an enormous dose of diphtheria bacilli into them. They stood it. They never turned a hair at millions of bacilli, enough to kill a dozen ordinary animals. They were immune.

HE sucked a little blood with a syringe out of an artery in their necks; he let the tubes holding this blood stand until clear straw-colored serum rose over the red part of the blood. With care he drew this serum off with a tiny pipe—he mixed the serum with a quantity of virulent diphtheria bacilli: "Surely there is something in the blood of these creatures to make them so immune to diphtheria," pondered Behring; "undoubtedly there is something in this serum to kill the diphtheria microbes."

He expected to see the germs shrivel up, to watch them die, but when he looked, through his microscope, he saw dancing masses of them—they were multiplying, "exuberantly multiplying," he wrote in his notes with regret. But blood is wonderful stuff. Some way it must be at the bottom of his guinea-pigs' immunity. "After all," muttered Behring, "this Frenchman, Roux, has proved it isn't the diphtheria germ but the poison it makes—it is the poison kills animals, and children. Maybe these iodine-cured guinea-pigs are immune to the poison, too."

He tried it. Behring got ready a soup which held poison but had been freed of microbes. Huge doses of this stuff he pumped from a syringe under the hides of his decreasing number of desolate cured guinea-pigs. Again, they were immune. Their sores went on healing, they grew fat. The poison bothered them no more than had the bacilli which made it. Here was something entirely new in microbe hunting, something Roux maybe dreamed of but couldn't make come true. Pasteur had guarded sheep against anthrax, and children from the bites of mad dogs, but here was something incredible — Behring, giving guinea-pigs diphtheria and then nearly killing them with his frightful cure, had made them proof against the microbe's murderous toxin. He had made them immune to the stuff of which one ounce was enough to kill 75,000 big dogs.

"Surely it is in the blood I will find this antidote which protects the creatures," cried Behring.

HE must get some of their blood. He took one of the veterans and got a driblet of blood. He had a few drops of serum now, from a cured guinea-pig. He mixed this in a glass tube with a large amount of the poisonous soup in which the diphtheria microbes had grown.

Into new, non-immune guinea-pigs went this mixture—and they did not die!

Then Behring made his famous critical experiment. He mixed diphtheria poison with the serum of a healthy guinea-pig that was not immune, that had never had diphtheria or been cured from it, either, and this serum did not hinder one bit the murderous action of the poison. He shot this mixture into new guinea-pigs; in three days they grew cold; when he laid them on their backs and poked them with his finger they did not budge. In a few hours they had coughed their last sad hiccough and passed beyond.

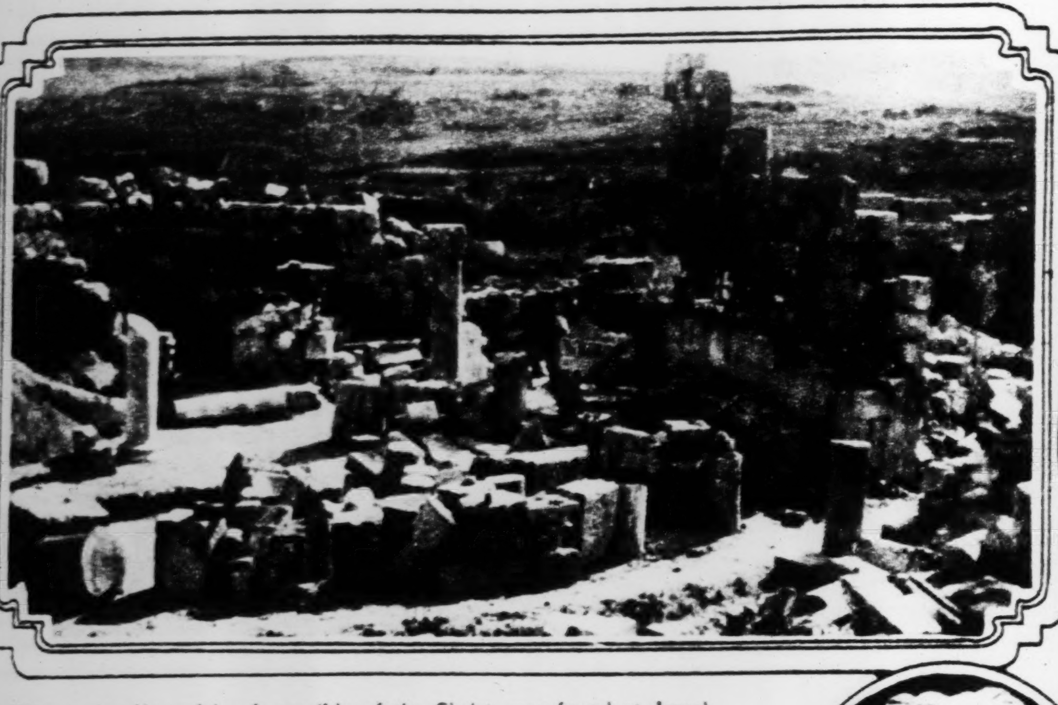
The Earliest Sculptured Head of The Christ Found in Palestine



Where a sculptured head, possibly of the Christ, was found at Jerash.

WHAT is supposed to be the earliest known representation of Christ, a piece of sculpture found recently in the cloister of a Christian church of the fifth century A. D. among the ruins of Jerash, 55 miles northeast of Jerusalem, is now being studied by archeologists as one of the most important discoveries bearing upon the sources of Christian art.

Examination by other experts will be required before any definite pronouncement can be made, but the discoverers of the head believe that it may be found to be a work executed some time in the second century and the earliest known sculptured representation of Christ.

The head has many manifestations of what later became traditional Christian art. Identification of the Jerash head as that of Christ and its acceptance as having been carved about 200 years after the crucifixion would be matters of far-reaching importance. The artistic conception of a suffering Christ would be dated several centuries beyond present known examples and the traditional manner of depicting Christ as bearded would be antedated by nearly two centuries. Moreover, the fact that this head was found so near to the Holy Land would have an important bearing upon what might have been local traditions as to Christ's physical appearance. It arrests attention at once by its marked expression of mental pain, which is studiously delineated and gives it unique character. It is more like the accepted Christ-type than any other.

Formal representations of Christ as the Good Shepherd are familiar in frescoes of the catacombs as early as the second or third century; but the Christ is beardless. Even in the fourth century the representation of a Christ bearded is still rare, but it is not unknown. While some would place the Jerash head before the Christian era, the bulk of expert opinion will probably agree that it belongs to the latter half of the second century A. D. The treatment of the eyes is a determining feature. On the other hand, the hair and some other details possibly indicate a later date, and some further discovery upon the site may provide criteria altogether new. It is found on comparison to be more spiritual than Zeus or Poseidon, and more emotional than Serapes. The Jerash head is, in fact, differentiated from all the familiar classical types. It has something in common with the Asklepios from Melos in the British Museum, and in expression, with the bearded god identified with Zeus in the Museum of Fine Arts at Boston. It seems clear that it was fashioned by a great artist, who, working upon the established and familiar models of pagan Zeus or Asklepios, glorified the realization of an ideal.

Those who have examined the Christian churches of Jerash suspect from the superficial indications that the evolution of the Christian liturgy lies buried there, the development of Christian architecture and Christian ritual from the pagan, collaterally maybe, and before Christianity received official recognition. And, if this be the case, did not Christian art and iconography move forward under the same inspiration, upon similar lines, from a similar origin? Only further research can answer these speculative questions, which none the less have their value, warning us of the caution with which excavation must be done, while demonstrating once for all the possibilities of archeological research and the importance of scientific methods.

Divorces Bride He Found in His Camel Train

first the loss distressed us more than that of the provisions. We soon altered our opinion; but at the time we hoped to be able to shoot enough game to satisfy our needs."

THE ascent of the Dangla Mountains was begun. More hardships when they camped at a height of 20,000 feet. One of the Chinese, sick with the terror of his long experiences, threw himself over a sheer precipice. A violent storm occurred.

The next day they came to a gentle slope. They pressed on as fast as their wearied bodies would allow them. They crossed the Brahmaputra. Soon they reached Gyantse and the flag of England. A year and five months had passed since that burning day they left Pekin.

A few months later a daughter, Pauline, was born to them. Shortly after they went to Paris. There they were gladly received by De Lesdain's parents.

But things between the Comte and his wife did not continue harmoniously. Not long before 1914 De Lesdain asked the courts to annul his marriage.

"The marriage was illegal because it violated Article 170 of the French civil code," his lawyer argued in court.

"Under this article, a French citizen abroad must be married by a French diplomat or consular agent, or according to the customs of the country.

"The unwritten law of Mongolia, which has been observed for centuries, is that a man must either buy his bride from her parents with sheep or must pursue her on horseback, drag her from her horse and ride off with her to his tent.

"Comte de Lesdain was neither married by an official French agent nor according to local custom, and so the marriage was not legal.

"The marriage performed by the Belgian priest is therefore null and void."

The case dragged along until 1919, as the Comte was away in the war and the Comtesse refused to accept the court's jurisdiction, but the court then annulled the marriage.

In 1924 the Comtesse Lesdain, who now lives in London, appealed to a higher court against the annulment.

THE Comte had meanwhile fallen in love with another American girl—during a trip through the Argentine this time—but she refused to marry him until the French courts had passed on his wife's appeal.

Again De Lesdain's attorney explained the unwritten Mongolian marriage law and argued that his client should have married under that law. The President of the First Paris Court upheld the annulment, but at the same time directed that neither the Comtesse de Lesdain nor her daughter should lose any of their civil rights thereby, as the marriage had undoubtedly been carried out in good faith.

"There is no proof that Carmen Mabel Bailey accompanied Jacques de Lesdain in these deserted regions with the preconceived design to marry him and thereby evade the law," the Judge declared.

"On the contrary, it seems possible and even probable that the idea of a legitimate union came to her in the course of this perilous voyage, lasting so long, and the seriousness with which they regarded the marriage is proved by the fact that one of the wedding certificates delivered by the Belgian priest was deposited at the French Embassy in Pekin."

The Judge emphasized that their child, Pauline de Lesdain, would be considered the Comte's daughter, and that both mother and daughter would retain all civil rights flowing from the marriage, including financial rights.

He explained that the court decided to uphold the annulment because the marriage had not been celebrated according to local law—that is, by purchase or capture in this case—and by inference he declared that if the Comte de Lesdain had sent 100 Mongolian sheep to Miss Bailey's parents in New York, or had pursued and captured her on horseback, the French courts would have been bound to recognize the validity of this marriage in Mongolia.

The Comtesse has no further appeal. She has definitely lost her husband. But the honor of having made a remarkable journey remains hers.

THE FIRST PAGE OF THIS MAGAZINE

THE influence of the early Italian painters is quite manifest in Gerald L. Brockhurst's "The Silk Dress," reproduced upon the cover of this issue of the Post-Dispatch Sunday Magazine, through the courtesy of the City Art Museum, which exhibited the work in its annual Exhibition of Foreign Paintings this summer.

Yet Brockhurst, as his name indicates, is of the English school, though his work suggests the search of the moderns for inspiration from the fathers of their art. The subject sits in an armchair on a balcony which looks out upon a landscape such as the primitives loved to paint, a rocky cove of blue sea, surrounded by green hills and with a high and smiling sky.

Eager, questioning eyes peer from the almost sullen, unreadable face of the sitter, who wears a gown of dark purplish silk with knots of blue and yellow ribbon as its decoration, and her arms are gracefully at rest in their full, linen sleeves. The oval face is crowned by masses of dark brown hair which hang in part across the left shoulder. There is a hat of blue velvet with a band of red silk and with two plumes arching over its brim.

Now and again he saw the remnants of a camp and once the stray dog of some Indian. But he saw no men.

June. The willows were green now, and the wild ducks were nesting in the swamps. Boblette found the nest of a teal one day and robbed it. Eggs were good food—a relished change from fish and rabbit. The days were long, the sun disappeared only for an hour or two below midnight's horizon. And mosquitoes came—and flies.

He had made his way down the River La Martre to Willow Lake and then, by canoe and portage, over swamps and through woodland to the Fawn and Birch and Mink lakes and thence down the west fork of the Horn River to and up the east fork of Birch Lake. A portage there of 50 miles brought him to the margin of Great Slave Lake. Southwest he traveled to Windy Point, and there, as the waters drowsed sullenly under the sultry heat of the sub-Arctic summer, he struck in his canoe across the glassy surface, making Pine Point. Thence he skirted the southern shore of the inland sea, coming at last to the Little Buffalo River.

And all that way he was fighting for life, fighting first for food and fighting, then, for freedom from the insect pests. Mosquitoes had come first, with sharp, jabbing knife stings, and kept the air a-hum. There was no escape. A dozen might be hanging, like red currants, from his face at once. His hands might be quite black from a covering of those blood-suckers. It was bad enough upon the waters, paddling. It was worse when, canoe above his head, he made the portages.

If those were agonies, worse were to succeed. There came the flies. From them there was no escape. Biting, they poisoned. Welts grew upon his face and hands and neck. The swollen places bled and festered. By night he covered his head with his blanket, smothering in the heat, but the flies crept in in darkness, and the itching was intolerable. He could not sleep. The pest-scourge drove him on.

He was now on the Little Buffalo, a tiny river, clear as a crystal, limpid, calm and slow of current. Paddling was easy here and the high spruce trees which lined the banks gave refuge from the sun. And his diet now was varied. Besides fish and rabbits he had berries. Down he paddled to the river's end. Then the last portage. But it wasn't a portage, for he left the canoe behind. The end of this last journeying was to be Fort Smith.

Into the Hudson's Bay agency he stumbled late that night. The factor answered to his knock, as they always answer, no matter what the hour, in a land where emergency may always threaten.

Gaunt, emaciated and in tatters, the brown ghost figure staggered in through the opened door.

"Boblette!" cried the agent. "Is it you?"

"Have you seen Champlain?" the wraith man whispered hoarsely. "I want to kill him."

Joe Boblette had come to the end of his tortured trail.

Seeing America.
It Can't Be Done.
They Drive 350 Miles.
Signboards Hide Landscape.

SEE America first? You can't see America first. You can't see America at all without first perusing legends about cough syrup and stories about breakfast tonics. I learned that when Artie and I drove home from our vacation at Wantabeswell Lake. When Artie asked me what I had learned on the 350-mile drive through this land of ours I told him I had been brought to the realization that the reason I haven't a greater influence on him is that I've fed him the wrong kind of breakfast muffins and that I might have been a brainier woman even than I am if I'd only taken the right kind of codfish tablets in my childhood.

I shall never forget the dawn of the first morning of the drive, when Artie, who had been in that section before, flung out his arms in a broad, sweeping gesture and cried: "Get out your camera, Sophie. When we turn the next curve you'll get a wonderful view of lovely, rolling hills, green meadows spotted with daisies, vistas of brown, plowed soil and waving wheat. Oh, I like the open country!"

We swung around the curve. I leaned forward, all eagerness, to see before me—a broad signboard which declared in flaming letters, "Speeders, use our gasoline. It takes you miles away from your happy homes. Cars eat it up. Children cry for it. If not sold by your family butcher, send us a stamped, self-addressed envelope and we will send you a sample."

I caught that gasoline in my camera before I had time to realize what I was doing, but Artie consoled me by telling me that around the next bend we would pass a sweet, little brook which, he said, fell in a tiny, twinkling waterfall over a rocky ledge.

THE brook might have still been tinkling or it might have retired from the world into a sewer pipe. I don't know, for it was screened from vulgar public gaze by a large, orange signboard with a picture of a pill bottle painted 100 times life-size by some talented realist. The inscription at its head read: "Why be so dull and stupid! Swallow a Fake Pep Pill every morning and get the sensation of a lifetime. Each pill is ground, welded and pickled by a secret process in our own foundries. Good for convalescents, falling hair, rough floors, holes in stockings and pet rabbits. Watch for the Fake label. All other pills are imitations."

"There really is quite a bit of scenery around here. I remember it very well, and then, too, the guidebook says so," Artie insisted as we sped on between majestically towering signboards of varied hues and sizes, which, however, were becoming painfully personal in their questions.

"Did you save any money last year?" they wanted to know.

"Are you satisfied with your income?" they inquired.

"Are you preparing for the future of your children and for your old age?" they asked.

They even insisted upon knowing how we did our family washing and what we had for breakfast and if our hair was coming out and whether we cared about keeping young and if our backs ached and if our teeth were coming out and how often we brushed them and if we owned our home.

I REALLY was embarrassed by their inquisitiveness and I honestly don't think it was any of their business, but Artie tried to distract my attention by reading to me from the guidebook a description of the great educational institution we were to get a view of at the edge of the next town.

I didn't see the school, but I did see a shrimp—a large, blushing shrimp taking a siesta on the side of a can on a signboard which read: "Eat Blinko's Honey Cured Shrimp. Brain food. Good for backward children. Carefully spyflicated and all nutrition removed by hand in the famous shrimp factories."

"When I see advertisements of fish, Artie," I said, rapturously, "I feel as though I were back in the mountains of New England reading the signboards there. And, look, the guidebook says that around the next bend we'll see the oldest house in this part of the country. It says——"

I stopped short as I saw, instead of the house, a signboard which informed us: "For 80 years we have served the American public. For 80 years we have sold the people of the commonwealth the same cheese—with no change or substitution. It has stood the test of time. If your leather dealer is unable to supply you, telegraph us, inclosing 50 cents, and we will send you a free sample."

And so we rode on in colorful landscape, between flaming dog biscuits, dainty breakfast foods and burning cigarettes, into a city where we found ourselves in a many-hued canyon of signboards which in their richness of coloring reminded us of the Grand Canyon and in the manner in which they shut us off from the rest of the world were reminiscent of the walls along the streets of Old New Orleans.

"But why go to Colorado, why go to New Orleans, why drive anywhere?" I said to Artie. "The next time I want to see the country I'll buy a series of picture postal cards and read them on my front porch!"

Repartee With a Laundress.

AFTER the Harvard game I tendered my resignation as the Yale captain, because my incumbency was making some of the men so miserable. Every night when they were put to bed, Thorne and Coy and Butterworth cried with such plaintiveness that none of the other athletes could sleep. Coach Jones frequently walked the floor with them all night; he even gave them an extra bottle at bedtime, but to no avail. However, the rest of the squad would not stand for my retirement.

With the team thus strengthened, we went on and won the Trinity and Villa Nova games and reached the big annual Thanksgiving Day battle against Miss Spence's School, with a record of three victories and four defeats, having been nosed out on successive Saturdays by Moler's Barber College, the War College of Washington, La Salle Extension University and the Weehawken School for the Blind.

I might say in passing that the last named institution beat us by trickery. When we came on the field, our opponents were sitting at various corners with their eyes closed and tincups in their hands, in which passersby were expected to drop coins. I was taken in and would surely have dropped a dime in the opposing captain's cup had it not been a habit of mine never to carry more money in a game than was necessary to tip the officials. Some of the other boys loosened up, however, and as soon as the cups were filled the "blind" men opened their eyes with a whoop and proceeded to give us a licking.

(Author's note: So is your old man.)

WITH the approach of Christmas I was swamped with invitations from classmates to spend the holidays at their homes. I accepted the invitation of Jack Grudge, son of Henry Grudge, then president of U. S. Steel.

There were two daughters in the family, Vera and Bera Grudge, co-eds at Princeton. Vera was a pretty, interesting girl, but Bera, besides always wearing rompers, was what the French would euphemistically call nutte.

The Grudges had so many house guests that Christmas that it was necessary to institute a first and second table system for meals. I sat at the second table, between Bera and the laundress, a Mrs. Stevens. Our banter would often be interrupted by Bera just when Lydia (Mrs. Stevens) and I were "going good."

"Mrs. Stevens," I would say, "I once had a sister who was quite fond of one of her gowns, but she would wear it only in the front yard."

"Why?" This from Mrs. Stevens.

"She said it was her laundress."

"Sis-boom-ah!" This from Bera.

On another occasion Mrs. Stevens told me that another guest, a Mr. Spurl, brought his laundry down to her and bet her she couldn't "do it up" in four hours.

"Did he win?" I inquired.

"He lost his shirt," said Mrs. Stevens (Lydia).

"Sis-boom-ah! Tiger!" This from Bera.

"It is only the serum of immune animals—of beasts who have had diphtheria and have been cured of it—it is only such serum kills the diphtheria poison!" cried Behring.

By this time nothing could discourage Behring. He began shooting diphtheria microbes, and iodine tri-chloride, and the poison of diphtheria microbes, into rabbits, into sheep, into dogs. In a little while he had sheep powerfully immune, and from them he got plenty of blood.

He injected little doses of the sheep serum into guinea-pigs; the next day he pumped virulent diphtheria bacilli into these same beasts. There they were, scampering about with never a sign of sickness, while their companions (who had got no protecting dose of serum) perished in a couple of days.

There was only one fly in the ointment of his success—the guarding action of the antitoxin serum didn't last long. For a few days after the guinea-pigs had got their injections of serum they stood big doses of poison, but in a week or two weeks it took less and less of the toxin to kill them.

"Iodine tri-chloride is almost as bad for guinea-pigs as the microbes are," he said, "but this antitoxin serum, it doesn't give them sores and ulcers. . . . I know it won't hurt my animals. . . . I know it kills poison . . . now, if it would cure."

Carefully he shot fatal doses of diphtheria bacilli into a lot of guinea-pigs. Next day they were seedy. The second day their breath came anxiously. They stayed on their backs with that fatal laziness. Then Behring took half of this lot of dying beasts and into their bellies he injected a good, heavy dose of the antitoxin from his immune sheep. Miracles! Nearly every one of them (but not all) began to breathe more easily in a little while. Next day, when he put them on their backs, they hopped nimbly back to their feet. They stayed there. By the fourth day they were as good as new, while their untreated companions, dead, were being carried out by the animal boy.

Toward the end of the year 1891, babies lay dying of diphtheria in the Bergmann clinic in the Brick Street in Berlin. On the night of Christmas, a child desperately sick with diphtheria cried and kicked a little as the needle of the first syringe full of antitoxin slid under its tender skin.

The results seemed miraculous. A few children died, but presently large chemical factories in Germany took up the making of the antitoxin in herds of sheep. Within three years 20,000 babies had been injected.

But there were still criticisms and muttered complaints, and this was natural, for the serum was no sure-fire, 100 per cent curative stuff for babies—any more than it was for guinea-pigs. Then, too, learned doctors pointed out that what happened under the hide of a guinea-pig was not the same—necessarily—as the savage thing going on in the throat of a child. Thousands of children were getting the diphtheria serum, but some children (maybe not so many as before, perhaps) kept dying horribly in spite of it.

Then Emile Roux came back into the battle. He discovered brilliantly an easy way to make horses immune to the poison—they did not die, they developed no horrid abscesses, and, best of all, they furnished great gallon bottles full of the precious antitoxin—powerful stuff this serum was; little bits of it destroyed large doses of that poison fatal to so many big dogs.

Just then, a particularly virulent breed (so Roux thought) of diphtheria bacillus was crawling through the homes of Paris. At the Hospital for Sick Children, 50 out of every hundred children (at least the statistics said so) were dying. At the Hospital Trousseau as many as sixty out of a hundred were dying (but it is not clear whether the doctors there knew all these deaths to be from diphtheria). On the first of February, 1894, Roux of the narrow chest and hatchet face and black skull cap walked into the diphtheria ward of the Hospital for Sick Children, carrying bottles of his straw colored, miracle-working stuff.

He got ready his syringes and bottles with the same cold steadiness the farmers had marveled at, long before, in those great days of the anthrax vaccine tests at Pouilly-le-Fort. His assistants, Martin and Chaillou, lighted the little alcohol lamp and hurried to anticipate his slightest order. Roux looked at the helpless doctors, then at the little lead-colored faces and the hands that picked and clutched at the edges of the covers, the bodies twisting to get a little breath. . . .

Roux looked at his syringes—did this serum really save life?

"Yes!" shouted Emile Roux, the human being.

"I don't know—let us make an experiment," whispered Emile Roux, the searcher for truth.

"But, to make an experiment, you will have to withhold the serum from half at least of these children—you may not do that." So said Emile Roux, the man with a heart, and all voices of all despairing parents were joined to the pleading voice of this Emile Roux.

"True, it is a terrible burden," answered the searcher that was Roux, "but just because this serum has cured rabbits, I do not know it will cure babies. . . . And I must know. I must find truth. Only by comparing the number of children who die, not having been given the serum, with the number who perish, having received it—only so can I ever know."

"But if you find out the serum is good, if it turns out from your experiment that the serum really cures—think of your responsibility for the death of those children, those hundreds of babies who did not get the antitoxin!"

It was a dreadful choice. There was one more argument the searcher that was Roux could have brought against the man of sentiment, for he might have asked: "If we do not find out surely, by experiment on these babies; the world may be lulled into the belief it has a perfect remedy for diphtheria—microbe hunters will stop looking for a remedy, and in the years that follow, thousands of children will die who might have been saved if hard scientific searching had gone on. . . ."

That would have been the final, the true answer of science to sentiment. But it was not made, and who after all can blame the pitying human heart of Roux for leaving the cruel road that leads to truth? The syringes were ready, the serum welled up into them as he gave a strong pull at the plungers. He began his merciful and maybe life-saving injections, and every one of the more than 300 threatened children who came into the hospital during the next five months received good doses of the diphtheria antitoxin. Praise be, the results were a great vindication for the human Roux, for that summer, the experiment over, he told a congress of eminent medical men and savants from all parts of the world:

"The general condition of the children receiving the serum improves rapidly . . . in the wards there are to be seen hardly any more faces pale and lead-blue . . . instead, the demeanor of the children is lively and gay."

He went on to tell the Congress of Budapest how the serum chased away the slimy gray membrane—that breeding place where the bacilli made their terrible poison—out of the babies' throats. He related how their fevers were cooled by this marvelous serum (it was like some breeze blowing from a lake of northern water across the fiery pavements of a city). The most dignified congress of prominent and celebrated physicians cheered. It rose to its feet.

And yet—and yet—twenty-six out of every hundred babies Roux had treated—died, in spite of this marvelous serum.

And yet—I, who believe in this antitoxin, I say this twenty years after—diphtheria is a disease having strange ups and downs of viciousness. In some terrible decade it kills its sixty out of a hundred; then some mysterious thing happens and the virus seems to weaken and only ten children are taken where sixty died before. So it was, in those brave days of Roux and Behring, for in a certain hospital in England, in those very days, the death rate from diphtheria had gone down from forty in a hundred to twenty-nine in a hundred—before the serum was ever used.

There is evidence that when antitoxin is given on the first day of the disease, all but a few babies are saved—and if there is delay, many are lost. Perhaps the antitoxin cures. But it is not completely proved, and it is too late now to prove it one way or another to the hilt, because since all the world believes in the antitoxin, no man can be found heartless enough or bold enough to do the experiment which science demands.

But even if the diphtheria antitoxin is not a sure cure, we already know that the experiments of Roux and Behring have not been in vain. It is a story still too recent to be a part of this history—but today all over America and in Germany hundreds of thousands of babies and school children are being ingeniously and safely turned into so many small factories for the making of antitoxin, so that they will never get diphtheria at all. Under the skins of these youngsters go wee doses of that terrible poison fatal to so many big dogs—but it is a poison fantastically changed so that it is harmless to a week-old baby.

And for this men will thank those first crude searchings of Loeffler and Roux and Behring.

The Scorched Glove That Caught the $75,000 Museum Thie

At Three O'Clock in the Morning, a Policeman Saw a Man Put a Bundle in an Automobile, Parked in Front of the Detroit Museum of Art, and Speed Away. A Valuable Rug Had Been Stolen. Detectives Were Put on the Case With Nothing but a Scorched Glove for a Clew. But in Six Hours They Had Their Man and Loot

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

AN ORIENTAL rug, valued at $75,000, was stolen from the Detroit Art Museum at 3 o'clock one morning recently. The policeman on the beat saw it go but had no chance to note the numbers on the automobile that carried it away. Yet six hours later the thief was under arrest, the rug had been recovered and three Detroit detectives were heroes of a real-life story of crime solution that would put to shame the exploits of a Sherlock Holmes.

They had expected, as the end of their quest, a gang of international art thieves, efficient and daring. They found, instead, something even more sensational. The rug and $25,000 worth of precious jewels missing from the museum about a year ago were found in the possession of a young art student, the son of a wealthy family of Sarnia, Ontario. In his subsequent confession, the young man, Paxton Howard, at first named a millionaire lawyer of Detroit, Sol Cohen, one of the most picturesque characters in the judicial life of a Michigan city. Howard claimed that Cohen exerted a "fear dominance" over him which led him to the crime. Later, Howard admitted the falsity of the charge and the wealthy lawyer was exonerated of any complicity.

DETECTIVE LIEUTENANT WILLIAM RICK and Detectives Ray Gillette and Frank Gutch were called to the museum after the discovery of the robbery by Officer Martin Mertz, the patrolman on the beat. Mertz had turned the corner at Woodridge street and Jefferson avenue, where the museum stands, a little after 3 in the morning of July 1 to see a young man furtively pushing a bundle into a car parked at the curb there. When the patrolman approached, the thief jumped into the car and sped away before it was possible even to take the number of his license plate. A Florentine bust stood abandoned near the sidewalk, at the foot of a long rope dangling from one of the art museum's windows.

The rope, the bust and a priceless Frans Hals painting which had been unhung and placed by the upstairs window ready for lowering, were all the evidence the detectives could discover. The nightwatchman of the museum had fallen asleep and knew nothing of the event he was expected to have prevented. Patrolman Mertz could only offer his story of the vanished automobile. Where the Hals painting had been touched by the thief's fingers it was evident by the dust marks that he had worn gloves. The ugly, respectable, brownstone face of the old museum showed only the yellow streak of the rope on its impassive features.

The stolen rug was valued conservatively at $75,000, according to Clyde Burroughs, curator of the museum, who hastened to the scene of the looting, and the name of its donor, Edsel Ford, son of the automobile manufacturer, lent glamor to its value. Besides, a number of petty thefts had occurred at the museum in the last few years, making this large one seem like the culmination of a carefully prepared plan. The detectives felt that they had an important case on their hands, as well as a baffling one. They searched the museum carefully.

IN the dawn light, they came down discouraged and stood at the foot of that inscrutable, irritating rope. Time was flying; their man was on his way into the unknown. Then one of them stooped down and picked up a kid glove.

Now, a discarded kid glove, even one scorched in the palm from an obviously quick descent of the hempen lifeline, would seem hardly a promising clew by which to identify an escaped criminal. This was an ordinary glove, with nothing to distinguish it but the brown scorches and a few, faded laundry marks, half worn away from its tattered cuff. Most investigators would have regarded it as practically useless.

But it was the detectives' only clew. And these modern Sherlock Holmeses thought quickly and acted with the same speed.

"We'll get him by this," said Lieutenant Rick. "If it's an out-of-town laundry that put these marks in the glove, it'll be a long process. But if it's a Detroit place, we ought to nail him. Get going!"

They got going. In their police car they sped down Jefferson avenue to the nearest cleaning establishment. The proprietor had never seen the marks. He himself used such and such an ink and. . . .

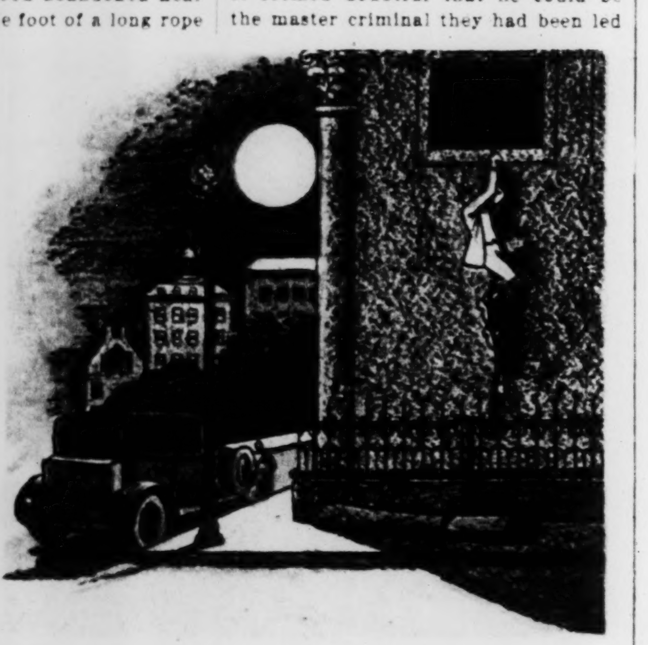
But the officers were in their auto again before he could finish his sentence. On to another laundry. And another, still unable to identify the faded, hopeful clews.

FOR over four hours the Lieutenant and his two men drove through the increasing jam of morning traffic, visiting in all over 125 different establishments. In the end, they found a man who said, sure, he put those marks in there. . . .

From this laundryman's notebook the detectives obtained the name of Howard Paxton, and an address. When they arrived at the rooming house at that number they were told Howard had not lived there for months, but the landlady gave them the location of another house where she had forwarded his mail. This in turn proved to be a discarded residence, but at Webster Hall, an obscure hotel, they found their quarry registered.

When Rick, Gillette and Gutch broke into young Howard's room they found him disinfecting the hand which had been burned through that one discarded glove.

They were surprised at the youth and refinement of their captive. Later, it was ascertained that he is only 19. It seemed doubtful that he could be the master criminal they had been led to expect, though doubtless he was an accomplice. They presented him with the glove, and he immediately broke down and admitted taking the rug. "But," he added, "it's now on its way to California."



The thief slid down a rope from one of the windows.

Still thinking the boy was covering his chief, Lieutenant Rick insisted to himself that he must have more information than that. Sizing up the personality with which he had to deal, he determined to play upon the youthful criminal's sympathy. "To California!" he exclaimed, dropping into a chair and burying his face in his hands. "That means my job, then. If I don't get that rug back, it means my job!"

TRUE to the Lieutenant's guess, Howard softened. He went to a bureau drawer, drew out a baggage check and handed it to one of the detectives. It bore the legend of the Union Station, the Detroit terminal of the Pennsylvania Railroad. "There's where you'll find the rug," said Howard, and threw himself on his bed. "That's all there is to it."

While one of the men remained with their catch, Rick and the other detective hurried to the station baggage room, presented the check and obtained a suitcase in which they found the missing treasure. Their persistence in following so slight a hint as a faded ink criss-cross put the loot in their hands just six hours after it had been removed from the Ford collection. It was a good job.

Then came the sensational disclosures of young Howard's confession to the police. They found him an abnormal but remarkably intelligent lad, thoroughly capable of planning and executing so skillful a job by himself. He testified that he was an artist, practicing in water-color, pastel and oil, and that since he had been separated from his family he was earning a living by writing copy for an advertising agency.

COHEN, now in his sixtieth year, is estimated to have gained somewhat over a million dollars from his law practice. He does not carry on his business from any established office. He has dealt largely in divorce cases, and was wont to set up a stand on the steps or in the corridors of the court building, where he would fill in stock complaints for the clients who sought him there. He is an expert critic of music, and few musical events have taken place in Detroit in recent years without his presence.

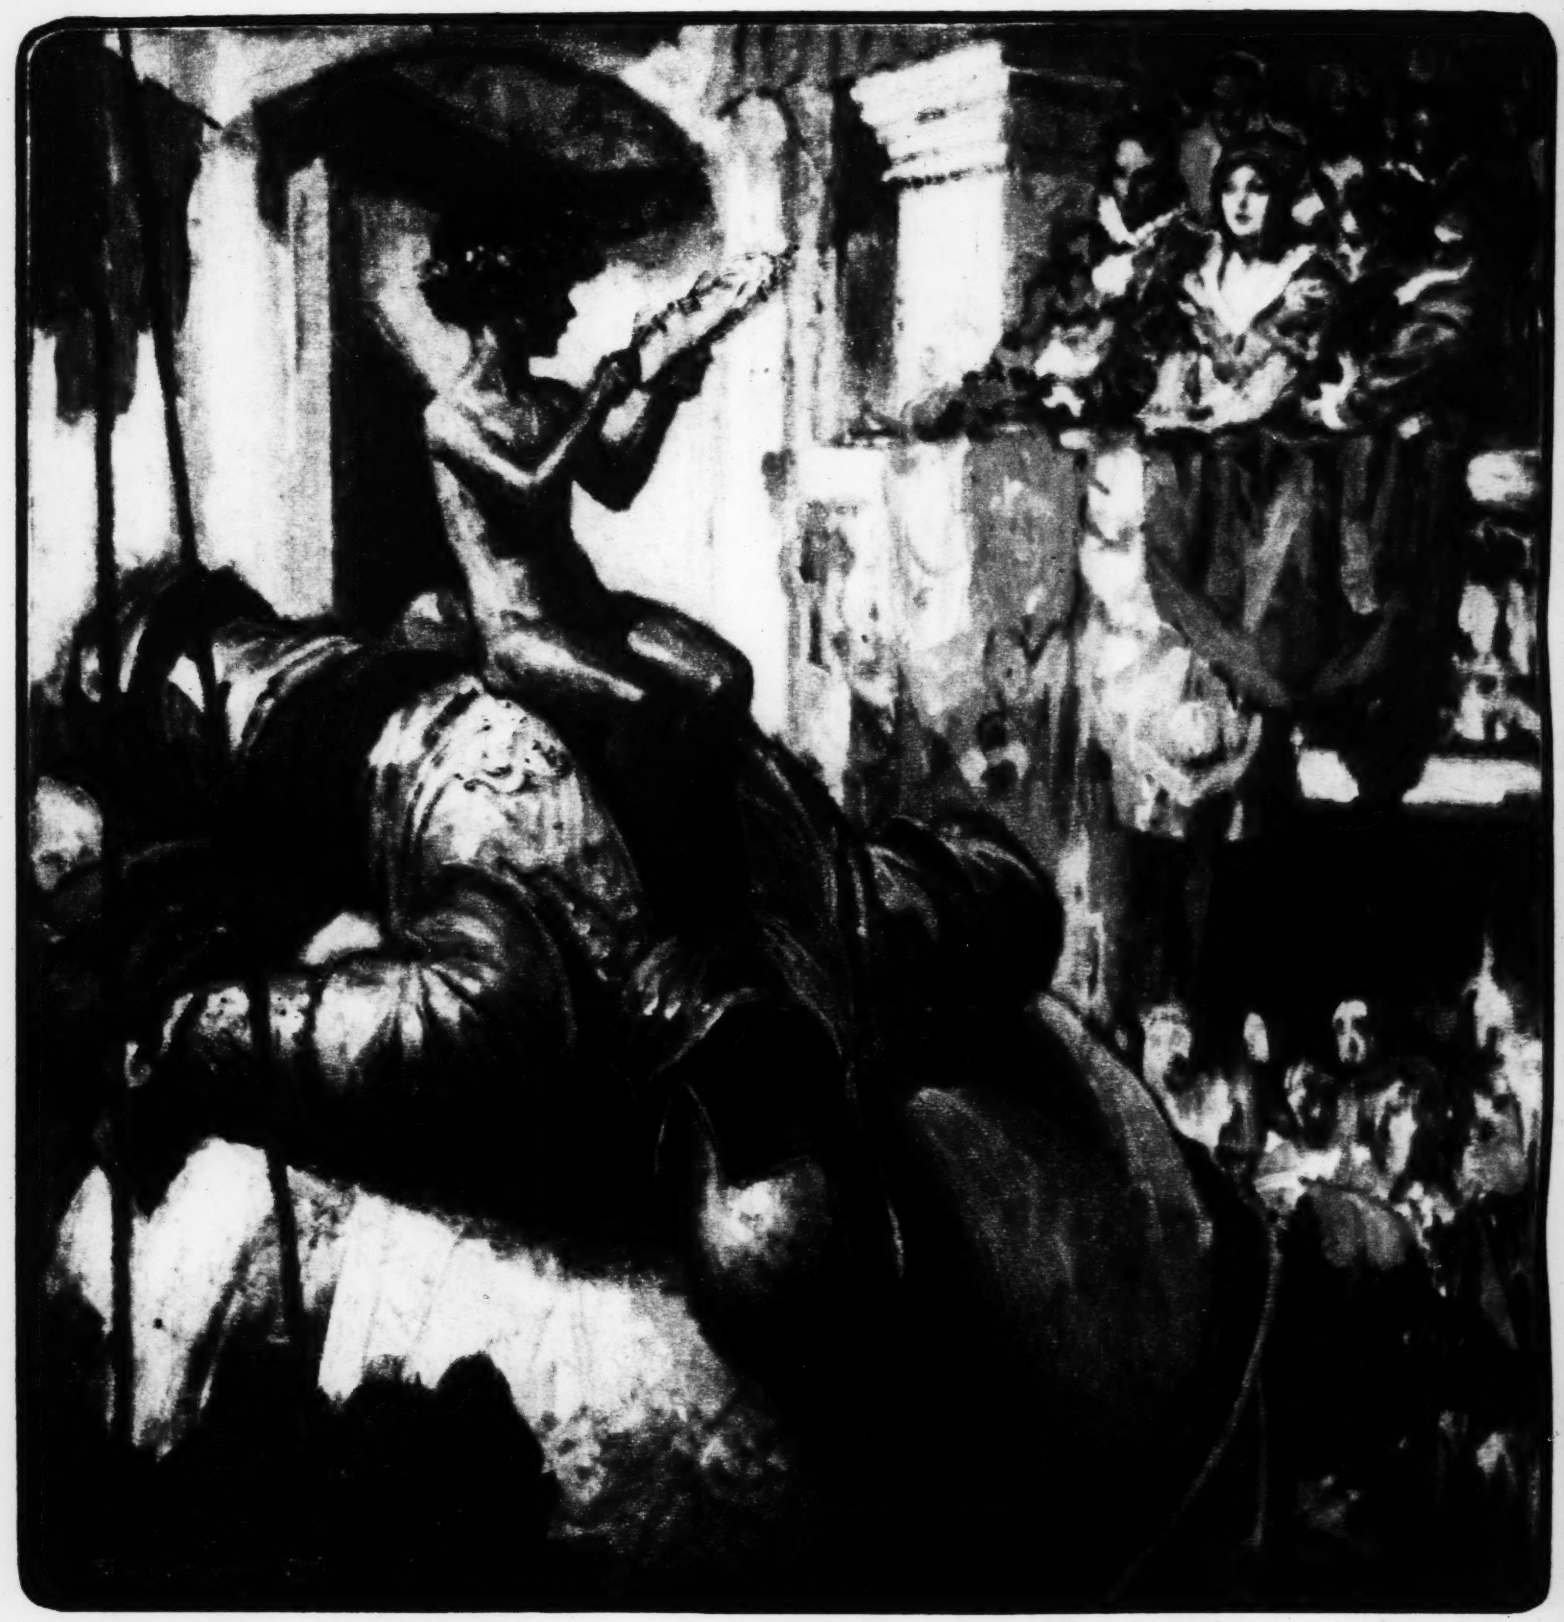
The detectives listening to young Howard's confession.

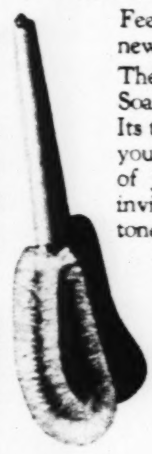
"I don't know anything about paintings or rugs," he said plaintively to the Judge about the time he was exonerated, "but I know a lot about music. I just met Howard two weeks ago one night in the music room at Webster Hall. I came in there and he was playing the piano. He seemed such a nice boy. But, my goodness, you never can tell when you meet strangers!"

WILLIAM THACKERAY, "idea" man for the employers of young Howard, was exonerated, as well as Cohen, in a statement issued by Howard's lawyer. Howard had previously told the detectives he expected to use Thackeray's car. Howard's father, wealthy descendant of an old Virginia family, rived in Detroit, procured the legal aid, and told the press that ton had always shown abnormal dencies; that his stealing was in way induced by want, for he have had anything he wished at home in Sarnia.

To his father the boy conf that he was responsible also for theft of the jewels from the St collection at the museum, a yea unsolved mystery. They were sti Paxton's possession, and the father returned them to Curator Burro

It is generally thought that Howard Sr. will appeal to Edsel F to press for clemency for ton, since Mr. Ford was do of the rug, is a member of executive committee of the muse and would be called as a witness the event of trial.





The boy in the picture was gilded to represent the age of Gold for a 15th Century pageant in which he was to triumph over the Age of Iron, represented by the mailed figure. At the end of the pageant, the child died as a result of clogged pores.

Out of a Gilded Boy's Fate Came a Lasting Beauty Truth

Pores Must Be Kept Clean—and a Clear Soap Does It Best

When Da Vinci gilded a boy from head to foot, he little knew that the boy would die—or that his death would reveal the real truth about skin care.

But the boy did die—because his pores were clogged with paint.

Even today some women do not realize how vital to beauty and health it is to keep pores thoroughly clean, and how few soaps there are that can perform this delicate task.

Of course, you cannot expect ordinary toilet soaps to do this; they're too coarse.

So well informed women choose Jap Rose, so pure you can see through it.

Because of this extreme purity the fragrant ingredients blend perfectly with water. Hence they can enter, stimulate, cleanse and pass out of tiny pores that coarser soaps clog. The result is a clear skin, healthy and vigorous.

The temporary tingle that follows its first use tells you that it is bringing your skin new health and freshness; that the two tonics it contains are making it soft and lovely.

The final word in a car

THE PRESIDENT
A Big Six Custom Sedan (for seven)
$2245
f. o. b. factory, including 4-wheel brakes, disc wheels, broadcloth or Chase mohair upholstery, and other equipment as listed
Standard Six Custom Sedan $1385
Big Six Custom Brougham $1985

THE PRESIDENT, a Studebaker Big Six Custom Sedan, was designed, built, and christened in honor of America's executives—the only automobile ever expressly created for men at the helm of the nation's industries.

The President is replete with all the characteristics of a custom creation—designed with a long, low-swung custom body on a 127-inch wheelbase—lacquered in rich ebony with a belt of thistle green striped with Siskiyou yellow, or in Croaton green with an ebony belt delicately striped in ivory. Equipped with disc wheels, four-wheel brakes and a ventilating system (exclusively Studebaker) which insures fresh air without drafts or moisture—enriched with the silvered figure of Atalanta above its radiator—and powered with the quiet Studebaker L-head motor which recently set a new transcontinental record by crossing from New York to San Francisco in 86 hours and 20 minutes.

The President not only solves the problem of keeping up appearances consistent with executive position, but simplifies the problem of keeping down expenses. The sky is the limit as to quality in The President—but we come back to earth to put a price on The President—$2245—which is the only departure from custom precedent in The President!

We invite you to see what Studebaker's One-Profit facilities have achieved.

Equipment
No-draft ventilating windshield, exclusively Studebaker, nickel-plated bumper and bumperettes, Watson Stabilators; engine heat indicator and gasoline gauge on the dash; coincidental lock; oil filter and air purifier, automatic windshield cleaner; double rear-view mirror, vanity case, smoking set; clock; arm rests; toggle grips; dome light automatically turned on when right rear-door is opened; four-wheel brakes; full-sized balloon tires; and two-beam acorn headlights, controlled from steering wheel.

Pleasant, Clean Odor

"ABSOLUTELY NO GOOD, for anything but Dandruff"

This won't cure measles or whooping cough—and it won't mend a broken leg. In short, it's emphatically not a "cure-all." But it will eliminate dandruff and itching scalp—in 10 days. And if you use it occasionally thereafter you never will have any dandruff on your scalp—or on your coat collar.

And we mean what we say; there's a written guarantee in every package. At the end of 10 days your scalp is clean. If not, just write to us and get your money back by return mail. We'll trust you to treat us fairly.

This offer may seem unusual to you; but it doesn't worry us. We've already tested this product for 4 years on several thousand people who had dandruff.

We make several products. So be sure to ask for the Van Ess Special Dandruff Massage. It comes in a bottle with our patented rubber massaging cap. Your druggist gives you the money-back warrant.

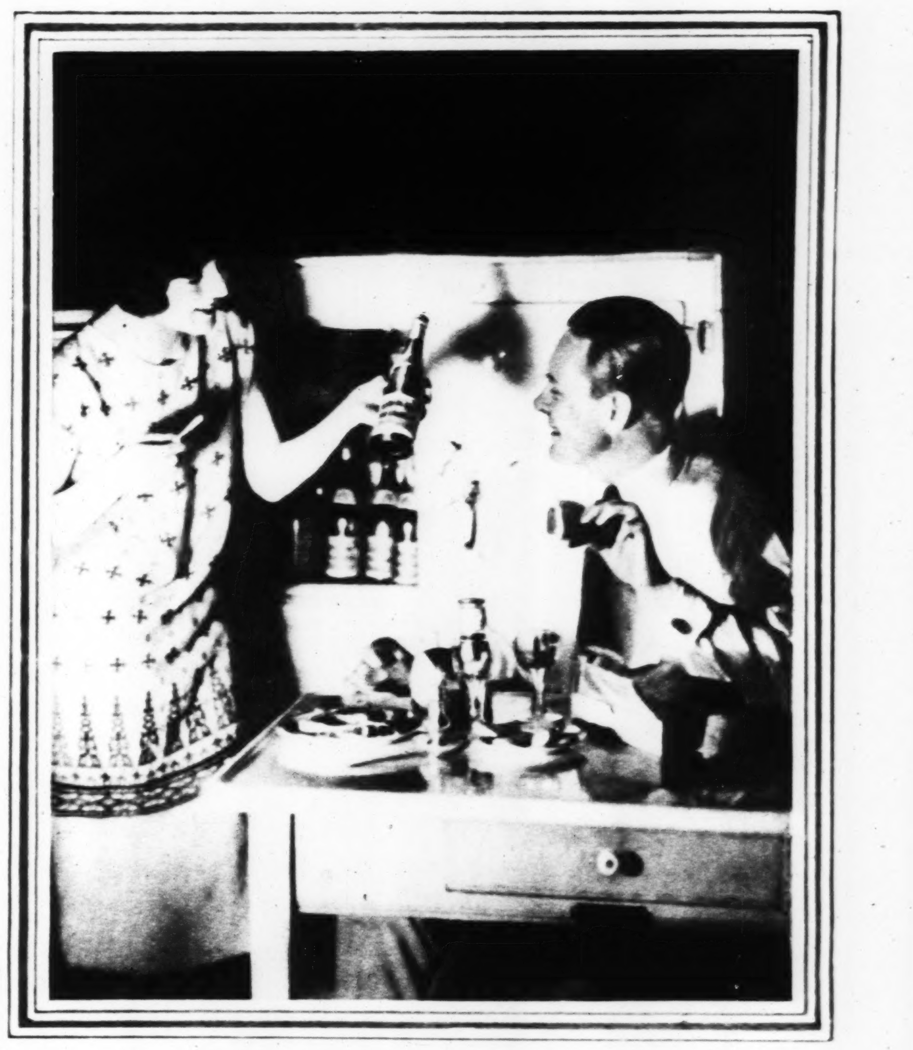
Here's coolness for these torrid nights . . . an aid to restful sleep



You will welcome a sparkling, bubbling glass of "Canada Dry" at almost any hour of the day, but there is no one time when it brings such blessed relief as before retiring.

It is so cooling! So refreshing! So genuinely good for you!

A glass of "Canada Dry" at bedtime will help you to forget the heat and worry of the day and invite the peaceful calm that leads to restful sleep.

Leaning back in your chair and half closing your eyes as you drink in the piquancy of its wonderful flavor, you will realize why this fine old ginger ale has been famous for so many years in Canada and why it has become, in four years, the sensation of the U.S.A.

There never has been another ginger ale like it and there never will be. For the secret of the matchless flavor of "Canada Dry" is known to only three men in all the world and it cannot be purchased at any price. This secret is handed down from father to son like the lore of the wine-makers of ancient France.

Especially in summer you want a beverage that you know is good and pure and you get just that when you buy "Canada Dry."

It is a real ginger ale, made from real Jamaica ginger, and it is one ginger ale that does not contain capsicum (red pepper) in any form.

That is why it is served in leading hospitals in Canada and in this country. That is why it is prescribed by physicians! That is why it is so cooling and refreshing on hot summer days.

Try it soon at dinner or before retiring. You will never forget the wonderful flavor.

THE GREATER ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION

September 4 to 19, inclusive, at "Exposition City," Forest Park

This is the view of the main entrance which greets the eye as one approaches
"Exposition City" from Forest Park.

No special design has been followed in the architecture of the Greater St. Louis Exposition. An effort has been made to convey only the spirit of jubilee and gayety throughout.

The atmosphere of gayety which pervades the tout ensemble is felt the moment one enters the ornate polychromed entrance to the grounds.

The outstanding feature of the Exposition will be the illumination. This will be accomplished by the use of approximately six hundred 500 candle power Mazda lamps, with street lighting reflectors. The effect will be to turn the darkness of night into the brilliance of the day. Enough light is produced by this means to properly light 40 miles of city streets.

The S. & S. Electric Company handled the complete installation of electrical work, erecting poles, installing a complex distribution system, a veritable network of wires, covering the entire grounds, and wiring the booths, tents and various buildings.

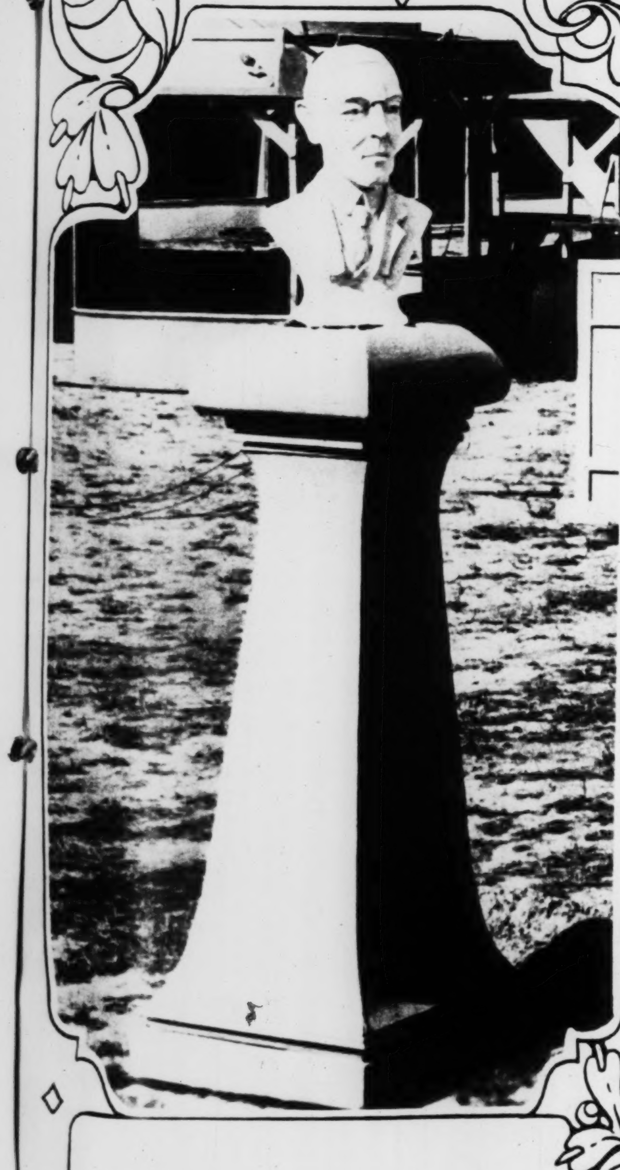
Some idea of the magnitude of the installation may be obtained when it is realized that the amount of electrical energy consumed during the two weeks of the Exposition would be enough to light 150 average homes for a period of a year.

The sketches of the general plan were made en charrette by Klipstein & Rathmann, Architects, of St. Louis, and were given to Percy Alen, the Hollywood decorator, who executed the work ahead of scheduled time.

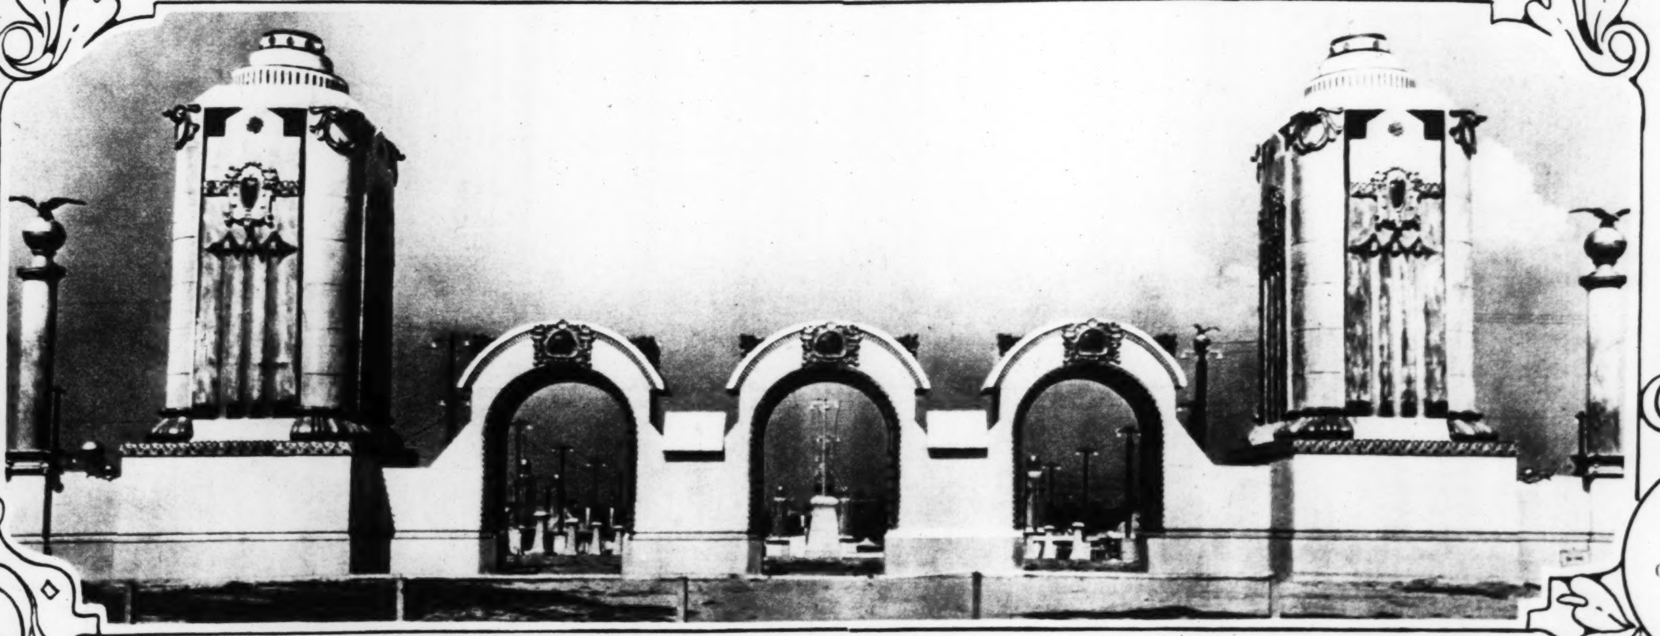
TRANSPORTATION FACILITIES

BUS SERVICE—ROUTE No. 3—LOCUST-LINDELL. Alternate buses on this route will run between Eads Bridge and the Exposition gate via Forest Park. ROUTE No. 13—UNION BOULEVARD. All buses of this line will run across Forest Park direct to and from the Exposition gate. OAKLAND AVENUE-FOREST PARK HIGHLANDS. Buses will run on Oakland avenue between Kingshighway and Forest Park Highlands, connecting with and transferring to and from Kingshighway Route No. 5. JUST LIKE MUNICIPAL OPERA SERVICE. These services will be regular and continuous and will transfer to and from all intersecting and connecting lines. In addition, whenever the traffic warrants it, there will be buses of the various Green Motorbus Routes waiting at the Exposition gate to take passengers direct to Carondelet Park (Route 8), Water Tower (Route 7), Gravois Avenue (Route 5), Wellston (Route 11), similar to the service that has become a feature of the Municipal Theatre.

UNITED RAILWAY CARS and ST. LOUIS BUS CO. BUSES will be marked with special placards DIRECT TO EXPOSITION GROUNDS and will be routed as follows: The MARKET Street and TAYLOR avenue cars will run direct to the Main Entrance on Oakland at all times. During the time of heaviest travel the LACLEDE Avenue cars will run direct to the Main Entrance, also a special Belt Line will be put in service during time of heavy travel running as follows: East on Delmar, south on Euclid, west on Oakland, north on City Limits. There will be Bus Line service from South Kingshighway connecting with all South Side lines direct to Exposition grounds. The special placards will insure freedom from any possibility of error.



This pylon supporting bust of President Wilson is one of 29 enclosing the Court of Presidents.



MAIN ENTRANCE TO THE GREATER ST. LOUIS EXPOSITION. The Greater St. Louis Exposition was conceived and is sponsored by the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and the City of St. Louis in celebration of 150 years of American Independence and Industrial Progress, in observance of the Thomas Jefferson Centennial, the 100th anniversary of Jefferson Barracks and the 58th anniversary of Forest Park.

RUBBER AUTO ENAMEL
To Give Your Car a Beautiful Finish

Milking a Rubber Tree
The pure para rubber used in Steelcote makes it elastic

Steelcote is made especially for the man who wants to paint his own car. It is easy to apply, flows on smoothly, and is self-leveling, leaving no brush marks or streaks. One coat does the work and no finishing varnish is necessary. Steelcote dries overnight.

Contains Real Rubber

The rubber that is blended into Steelcote produces a finish that is as permanent and durable as a baked enamel job. Sun and wind, ice and snow, even road oil and acid, do not affect its lustre. It is elastic and withstands the constant jolts, jars and vibrations that cause ordinary brittle paints to crack and chip. One quart covers a small or medium size car. Comes in sixteen attractive colors.

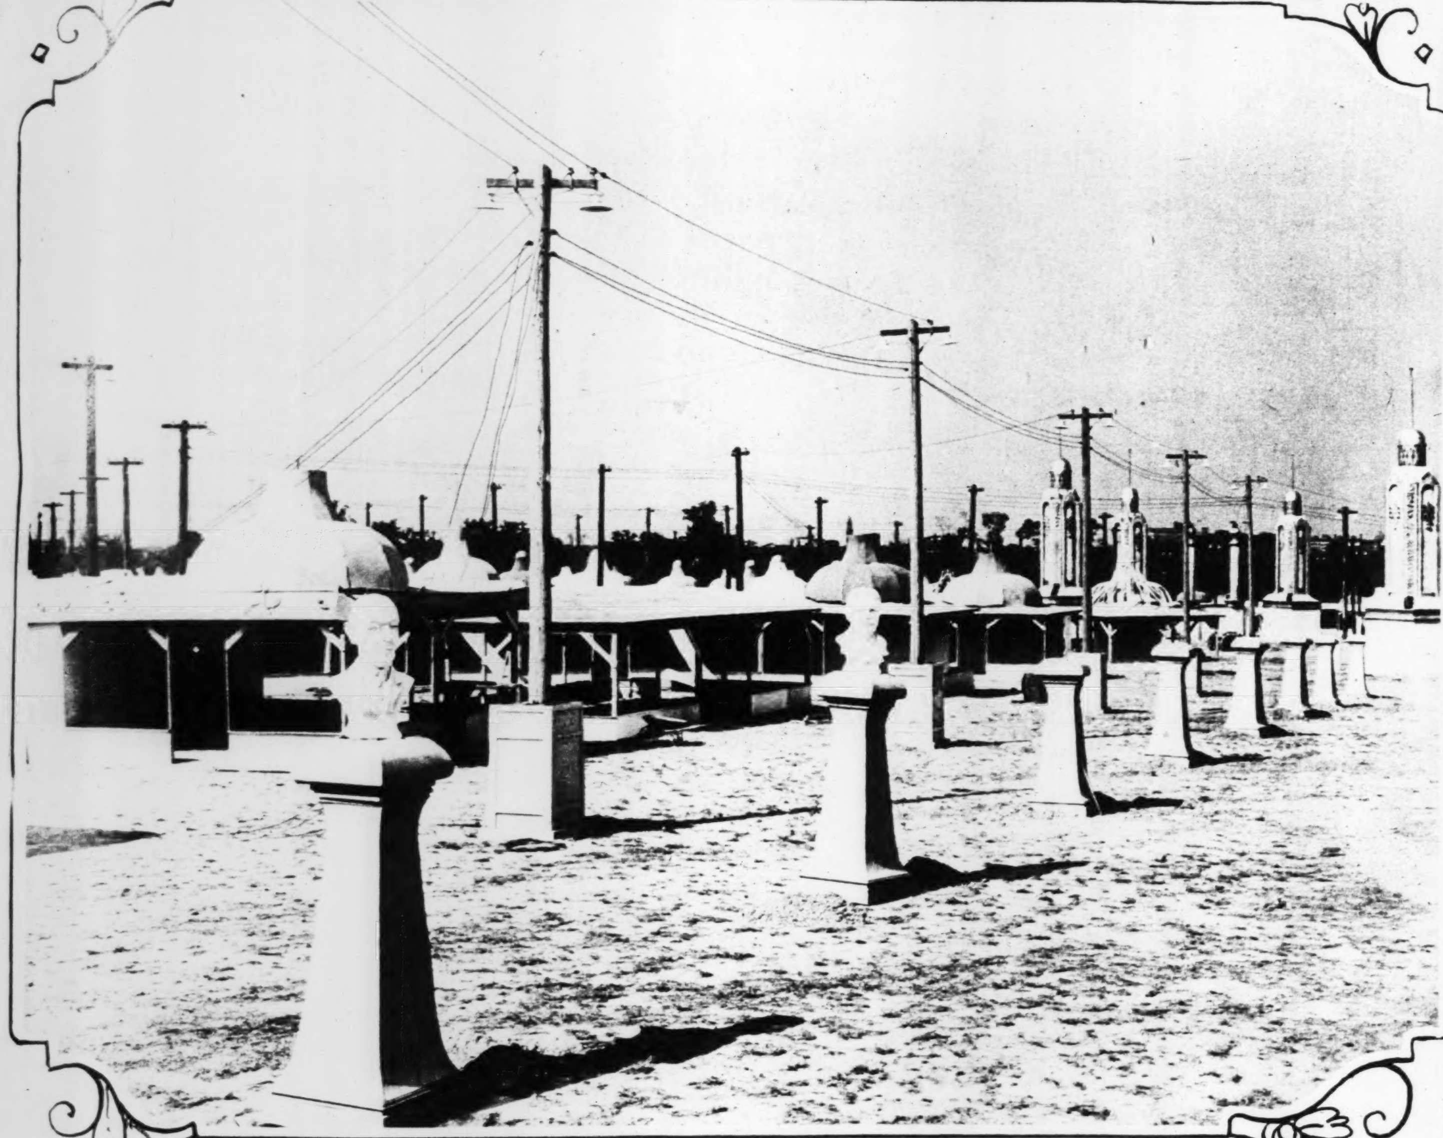
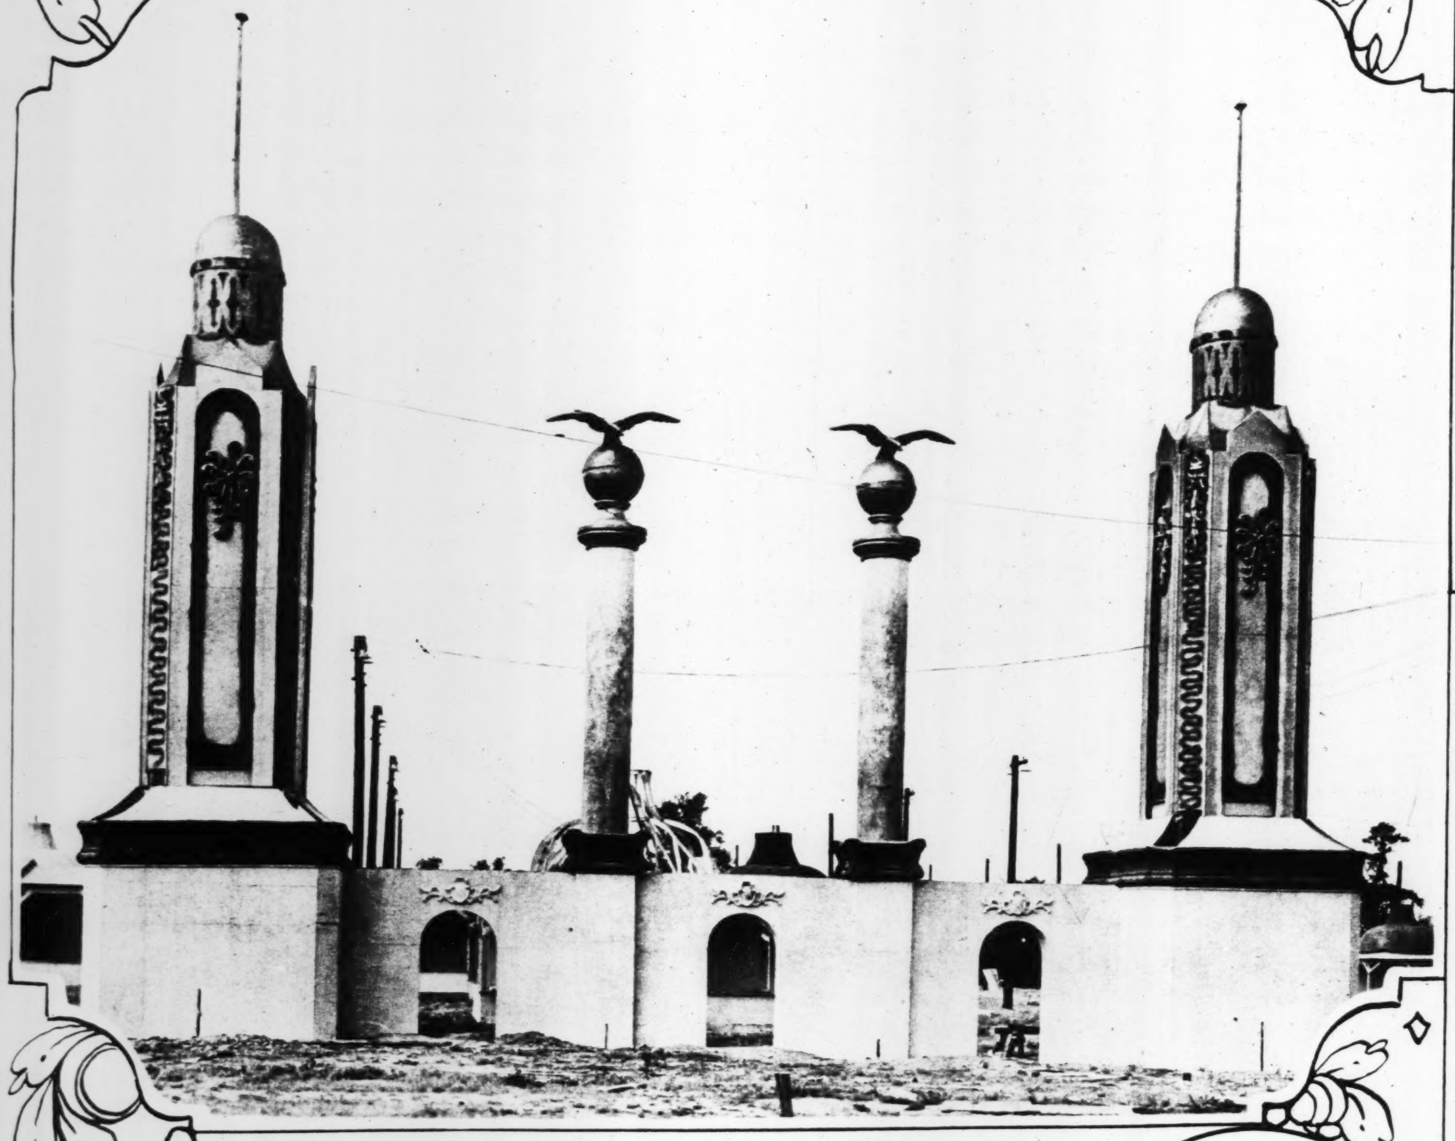
SERVICE



The general feeling of gayety which marks the entire exposition is somewhat subdued as one passes into the Court of Presidents—a view down one side of which is shown in the picture above with bust of Wilson and Roosevelt. A bust of every President will be shown. A full-length statue, 12 feet high, of George Washington marks the entrance to the Court. Directly opposite is a statue, in similar proportions, of President Coolidge. The Court of Presidents opens directly into Liberty Plaza, which is the architectural center of the entire plan.



The picture above shows one end of Liberty Plaza. Two colorful pylons in the center, surmounted by massive statues of Indians, symbolic of America 150 years ago, are surrounded by 12 smaller pylons surmounted by flags. Besides the Court of Presidents, there are 4 esplanades, known as Jefferson, Lincoln, Washington and Independence esplanades, radiating from Liberty Plaza. Three of these esplanades are flanked by booths and entertainment pavilions, while the fourth leads to the Auto Exhibit and thence through a decorated archway into the stadium.

The growth of the Roxana Petroleum Corporation has kept step with the remarkable commercial development of St. Louis. The stately Shell Building—executive headquarters of the organization—stands as evidence of the esteem in which Shell Gasoline and Shell Motor Oil are held by the motoring public.

Shell—like the city of St. Louis itself—is destined for still greater things. Shell crude oil production is being increased, new refineries are being built and the reputation of this St. Louis institution is being extended over an ever-widening area.

One of the novel exhibits at the Greater St. Louis Exposition is that of the STEELCOTE MANUFACTURING COMPANY. For the past month this firm has been sending out announcements of the exposition in every piece of mail promising that STEELCOTE himself would personally meet all visitors at their booth. A great deal of speculation as to what was in store for them in meeting STEELCOTE himself, has been evidenced by those receiving these announcements, as STEELCOTE is the company's trade mark, and meeting a trade mark seemed almost an impossibility. The secret is out however, and STEELCOTE himself has turned out to be a reality in the form of a full-sized figure dressed in a suit of 16th Century armor and seated at the wheel of a modern automobile. The display comprises an exhibit of rubber, from the time it is tapped from the tree as latex, the milky white liquid, from which rubber has its origin, till it reaches the market in STEELCOTE RUBBER AUTO ENAMEL. Other photos show Tung Oil, another of the ingredients of their products as it is manufactured in far off China.

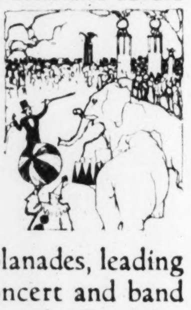
The biggest event since the St. Louis World's Fair .... Miles of booths displaying products manufactured in St. Louis and surrounding territory .... First Automobile Show of new 1927 models .... More diversified amusements than ever seen before at any World's Fair .... An entire village of Russian Cossacks, including Russia's noted band, dancers, choir and death-defying dare-devil riders .... Famous Guiseppi Creatore's and Pat Conway's Bands .... Welsh Royal Mountain chorus .... New York Hippodrome disappearing water nymphs .... Spectacular Musical Review of 2000 people .... Reproduction of World War battle by United States troops, combined with the most sensational fire works display ever presented .... 40 unique, novel, startling circus acts .... many smaller events too numerous to mention!

TRULY, the Empire of the Mississippi Valley has not witnessed for years such a gigantic exposition as will be unfolded to the people of St. Louis and the surrounding states on Saturday, September 4th.

With bands playing and flags flying, the gates of the Greater St. Louis Exposition will be thrown open. The inrushing throngs will be greeted by the most elaborate display of products of industry, agriculture and commerce which St. Louis has ever offered.

The gorgeous entrance with its 60-foot pylons and numerous highly decorated columns . . . . the Court of the Presidents lined with busts of the famous presidents of the United States . . . . The Liberty Plaza, marked by elaborate 70-foot towers and surrounded by numerous smaller pylons . . . the huge Automobile Show . . . the gigantic Arena with grand-stands seating over 25,000 people—all these spectacular features gaily decorated with flying flags and resplendent with brilliant colors will make a picture which you will never forget.

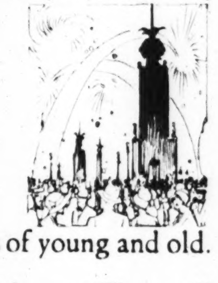


Radiating from Liberty Plaza where the speakers stand is located, are the four main avenues of the Exposition Grounds, Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Independence Esplanades, leading to the Amusement Arena, the concert and band pavillion, the restaurant and the hundreds of display booths.

A Gigantic Spectacle!

The Greater St. Louis Exposition celebrating 150 years of American Independence and industrial progress is a gigantic spectacle which thousands of people will come miles to see. Row after row of gaily decorated booths will offer an educational and entertaining exhibition of everything from household appliances to agricultural implements. The Automobile Show will display for the first time the 1927 models of all motor car manufacturers. The Amusement Arena will offer entertaining features never before witnessed in St. Louis. In fact, three huge stages will offer in rapid-fire succession a bewildering display of entertainment such as has never been witnessed before.

Come to the Exposition!



The many circus acts, aerial stunts, water circus, elephants, clowns, cow-boy rodeo, daring Russian Cossack horsemen, gigantic musical review of 2000 people and the reproduction of World's War battles in fireworks, with large troops of soldiers and marines taking part, will thrill the hearts of young and old.

Come and bring the children with you! They will enjoy the Greater St. Louis Exposition as much as you do. It will be a part of their education. It will thrill them with pride for their city and country.

Everything's Ready for You!

A large restaurant at the west end of the Exposition Grounds will serve appetising meals at popular prices. Numerous lunch stands throughout the grounds will have sandwiches and refreshments. Comfort stations and telephone booths are centrally located.

In fact, you can come to the Exposition and thoroughly enjoy everything. Your every want will be supplied. Come and stay as long as you like, every minute will be a new thrill.

Come by street car, bus or your own car (there are ample parking places). Come and have a good time. Get the thrill of a life time. Let's GO to the BIG SHOW!

Attendance, 18,000.

By J. Roy Stockton.

Of the Post-Dispatch Sport Staff.

SPORTSMAN'S PARK, Aug. 30. —Flint Rhem, the strong-armed right-hander from Carolina, went to the pitching slab this afternoon for the Cardinals to face the world champion Pittsburg Pirates in the first of a scheduled double-header.

Ray Kremer, also a right-hander, and a hero of the 1925 world series, in which the Pittsburg team won its world title, was Manager Bill McKechnie's selection for mound duty.

The Cardinals took the field spurred on by the knowledge that the double-header offered them a chance to pass the Pirates and to go into the lead in the tight National League pennant race.

A double victory would put St. Louis in front. If Chicago were to defeat the Cincinnati Reds again. A double victory for St. Louis and a Cincinnati victory would leave the two teams tied for first place, with the Pirates dropping to third position.

Shortly before game time the sky became overcast, reminding the players and the spectators of yesterday's gathering, when thousands of persons were soaked to the skin while the two teams battled ten innings to a 2—2 tie, making it necessary to schedule today's double-header and one tomorrow, with a single game Wednesday to get in the five games in three days.

There were thousands of empty seats today, the extreme sections of the grandstand being unoccupied with many empty seats in the bleachers and a few in the pavilion. The usual Monday ladies' day had been suspended by the management in expectation of a huge crowd.

However, this was the first game started and it was expected that there would be 30,000 in the stands by the time the second game got underway.

It is difficult to estimate the attendance when the crowd is scattered as it was this afternoon and guesses at the size of the crowd varied from 18,000 to 25,000, when the first game started.

Four umpires again were on duty, with Rigler behind the plate, Quigley at first, Reardon at second and McCormick at third.

The game:

FIRST INNING.

PITTSBURG—Waner tripled to left. Rhyne singled to center, scoring Waner. Cuyler forced Rhyne, Rhem to Thevenow. Traynor struck out, Cuyler stealing second and continuing to third on O'Farrell's low throw. Barnhart flied to Douthit. ONE RUN.

CARDINALS—Holm popped to Rawlings. Southworth fouled to Grantham. Hornsby tapped to Kremer. NO RUNS.

SECOND INNING.

PITTSBURG—Southworth made a fine running catch of Grantham's line drive. Bell threw out Rawlings. Smith doubled to right center. Kremer flied to Douthit. NO RUNS.

CARDINALS—Bottomley popped to Kremer. Bell flied to Waner. Traynor whipped out Douthit. NO RUNS.

THIRD INNING.

PITTSBURG—Thevenow threw out Waner. Rhyne beat out a grounder to deep short and went to second on Thevenow's low throw. Cuyler flied to Southworth. Traynor grounded to Thevenow. NO RUNS.

CARDINALS — O'Farrell was safe on Rhyne's low throw. O'Farrell was picked off first and was out, Kremer to Grantham to
